Russia 'to Keep Peace' After Stormy Session Threatens Neutrality

Decides to Keep Out of Spain Despite Fascist Counter Charges.

Portuguese Stalks From Conference

'Liar' Epithet Reported Hurled at Soviet Delegate by Italian.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 9.—Soviet Russia, which threw a bombshell into European diplomacy by threatening to withdraw from the Spanish non-intervention agreement, was understood tonight to have decided to continue co-operating for the present.

This stand, reported by a high diplomatic authority, came after a day of stormy charges and counter-charges, and the dramatic walk-out of the Portuguese delegate from the neutrality committee session.

Portugal, with Germany and Italy, had been accused by Russia of aiding Spanish Fascists in their struggle against the Madrid Leftist regime.

Peace Seekers at Odds.

Stung by Grandi's counter-charges that Russia herself was aiding the Spanish government, the Soviet delegate hotly demanded that the committee send investigators to the Portuguese border to see for itself whether the insurgents were getting "illegal" aid. The demand was overruled, however, as the committee decided that Portugal, as well as Italy and Germany, would be given time to answer all complaints in written form.

Russia's accusation against Portugal, charging the latter was acting as a camouflage gateway to feed arms and munitions to the insurgent forces, was described as an "insult" by Francisco Calheiros, the Portuguese delegate, as he left the conference room.

He announced he would have to receive further instructions from his government before returning to the embattled conference fold.

Grandi Answers Spain.

Late in the day Grandi filed counter-charges to the Spanish embassy's allegation that 700 Italian troops fought side-by-side with Spanish Fascists in the capture of the Balearic Island of Ibiza.

A sensation was created when Great Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, Neville Chamberlain, acting premier during the absence of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, was quoted as having said Britain would bolt the neutrality pact if Russia could prove her charges.

The British News Agency, which said Clement R. Attlee, Laborite leader in the House of Commons, quoted Chamberlain to that effect in an address at Kilmarnock, Scotland, later stated, however, that Attlee's statement had been misinterpreted.

The agency said Atlee's declaration actually was that an inquiry into the facts in the case should be conducted with the greatest possible speed and that the British government had given him assurance this would be done.

Communique Issued.

A communique, issued by the non-intervention committee tonight, said:

"The Italian representative, after having energetically refuted and repudiated every single point of the allegations directed against Italy, declared all these allegations were entirely fantastic and devoid of any foundation whatsoever, and this would easily be proved by answer

'Murder' Mystery Is Just a Fizzle; 'Victim' Still Alive

Montgomery County, Md., police had a murder mystery thriller on their hands last night—until the "murdered" man assured them the reports were grossly exaggerated.

White Plains, N. Y., police notified the county department that Robert James Montieth, former Navy paymaster, had confessed the murder of a man named Sherwood in Montgomery County in November, 1930.

Montieth told the New York police that he and Sherwood had been involved in an automobile accident and that later Sherwood had come to collect damages. An argument ensued, Montieth said, in the course of which he shot and killed Sherwood, the body falling into a small stream between Wilson lane and Congressional Country Club.

Sergt. Earl H. Burdine, of Bethesda substation, went through record-books and found Montieth had been charged with reckless driving in 1928 following an accident with Wilbur Sherwood, 6301 Reno road northwest, in Conduit road.

A telephone call to Sherwood, who is one of the owners of the Storm & Sherwood restaurants, revealed that Sherwood was in good health.

On the Road to War

At a stormy session of the international neutrality committee in London, Italy hurled counter charges at Soviet Russia as a sequel to the latter's threat to denounce the agreement to keep hands off the Spanish war, if Portugal, Italy and Germany did not halt aid to the rebels. The exchange of charges heightened tension, but afterward it was said Russia was willing to co-operate for the present. During the debate, Portugal's representative walked out.

At Madrid, government leaders pinned their hopes on possible Russian aid as the rebels drew their lines tighter. San Martin de Valdeiglesias, about 40 miles away, fell into the hands of the insurgents.

Police reinforcements were rushed into Alsace-Lorraine after the shooting of an Italian at Metz heightened tension between Rightists and Communists.

Rebel Planes Ordered to Bomb All Chief Loyalist Strongholds

Airmen Leave for Barcelona, Alicante and Other Cities Remote From Madrid; Union of Insurgent Forces a Matter of Hours.

By the Associated Press.

Burgos, Spain, Oct. 9.—The insurgent military high command tonight ordered warplane pilots to bomb all the principal government strongholds, leaving land forces free for a concentrated Madrid attack.

The insurgent mechanized land forces continued their flank operations in efforts to strangle Madrid. The attack centered today on Aran Juez, south by east of the capital, where rebels fought to cut rail communications between Madrid and Alicante.

Government leaders would attempt to flee to Alicante should Madrid be shelled, rebel leaders believed.

Fascist Is Shot; France Fears Alsatian Crisis

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 9.—Police reinforcements were rushed into seething Alsace-Lorraine tonight after the shooting of an Italian Fascist at Metz sharpened tension between Communists and Rightists.

The Italian, Antonio Bertazzo, was wounded by unidentified attackers in a district already gravely anxious over forthcoming Communist demonstrations and promised counter-demonstrations by Rightists.

The Italian consul at Metz identified the wounded man as a member of the Fascist Party associated with the consulate in caring for local Italians.

The possibility of a crisis within the "Popular Front" government of Socialist Premier Leon Blum added to the anxiety gripping the historic Alsace-Lorraine region tonight.

The cabinet was reported determined to restrict the Communists to ten meetings, but the Communist Party's press bureau announced that 52 meetings would be held over the week-end in defiance of Premier Blum's wishes to the contrary.

The Communist statement proclaimed "mobilization" of its adherents in Alsace-Lorraine to assure the meetings.

There was a possibility that the meetings would be raided not only by Rightists, under Col. Francois de la Rocque and his "Social Party," but also by police of the "Popular Front" government, which the Communist Party supports.

De la Rocque, his activities under investigation, tonight issued another appeal to his followers to fight the Communist Party "in the name of France."

"We demand the arrest of its (the Communist Party's) leaders," he declared, "who separated the French government from the rest of human

Army Cut Held Safest Method To Prevent War

Peace Parley Delegates Adopt 14-Point Plan to Promote Amity.

Aimed at keeping America out of war primarily and at keeping war out of the world secondarily, a bristling 14-point program was adopted yesterday at the final session of the National Council for the Prevention of War, convened here at the Lee House.

A demand that the United States revise its military policy to protect "only the soil of the United States against invasion" led the program. This was supplemented by demands that there be no further fortifications of our island possessions in the western Pacific, and demanded withdrawal from the Philippines of all American military and naval forces.

The foregoing and the other demands will be urged before Congress by Miss Jeanette Rankin, ex-Congresswoman now legislative secretary of the council.

The complete program follows:

"National defense—We demand immediate reduction of the armaments and military forces of the United States.

"We demand such revision of our military and naval policy as will result in a program based solely on protection of the soil of the United States against invasion. We recommend that Congress in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution placing the civilian branches of the Government in control of the military, appoint a committee of its own membership to formulate such a policy and to secure the necessary reduction, reorganization, and consolidation in our military branches as will insure the retention of only those means and methods of action as are needed to carry out this policy.

Green Meets Union Chiefs On Rift Today

New Labor Peace Plan Advanced at Session of Hat Workers.

Suggests Ousted Groups Be Allowed to Attend Tampa Meeting.

By Sidney Olson.

Leaving unanswered on his desk a new proposal for peace in labor's split ranks, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, last night prepared for a visit today to New York, where he will confer with David Dubinsky and Max Zaritsky, union chieftains who have expressed desire for a reconciliation of the A. F. of L. and the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The new peace proposal was advanced by the United Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers, a new international union formed by a merger of the old Hatters Union and the Cap and Millinery Workers. The latter organization, headed by Zaritsky, was affiliated with the C. I. O. group of 12 unions which broke away from the A. F. of L. over the organization of workers by crafts instead of industries.

Proposal Adopted.

The proposal was adopted by the convention of the Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers in New York yesterday, and sought two actions by the executive council of the A. F. of L., now holding its quarterly deliberations here. The two were:

That the ten C. I. O. unions outlawed and suspended by the executive council be permitted to attend the annual convention of the federation in Tampa, Fla., beginning November 16, as accredited representatives of their trades;

And that a sub-committee be appointed by both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., the two to meet and explore the possibilities of a settlement of the dispute before the convention is held.

Green reserved comment on the proposal, stating he was not ready to report to the public any action taken by the executive council at yesterday's all-day sessions.

Testimonial Banquet.

He said his New York trip today would be primarily to attend a testimonial banquet, but he added that if he 'should encounter by accident" either Zaritsky or Dubinsky in "a hotel lobby or on the street" he would discuss the peace moves with them.

It was apparent to observers yesterday that the labor split is in a stalemate, with John L. Lewis, leader of the C. I. O., uncompromising in his attitude that the suspension of the C. I. O. unions must be removed as a primary move toward discussion of actual peace moves. Lewis has said he would term the lifting of the suspensions as an "expression of error" and that once the ban is withdrawn, conversations as to the method of organizing the steel workers of the country can begin.

In the meantime, talk of peace has continued, particularly in New York, without any actual foundation until the executive council next week takes a definite position on the suspensions. Green's attitude is believed to be one of resignation to "a great deal of talk but no action," as he said yesterday, from now until convention time.

Banks on Majority.

The repeated emphasis he places on "democratic procedure" seems to indicate, informed sources said yesterday, that he banks on the nearly two-thirds majority of the A. F. of L. members to outvote the C. I. O. unions in the convention, thus "justifying" his position and actions, and burdening the C. I. O. with a flouting of majority rule. Lewis, on the other hand, has said that unless the suspensions are lifted the C. I. O. unions will not even attend the meeting.

In the meantime, executive council members yesterday held grave doubts over the desirability of Tampa as a convention city.

Complaints were heard from representatives of the building trades unions, and the hotel, restaurant and bartenders unions that the hotels in Tampa are guilty of unfair practices; that the employes in a chain of hotels which dominates Tampa, are unorganized, and that negotiations have failed thus far.

Green said the council would deliberate further before revoking the convention call to Tampa.

Landon Promises to Balance Budget in 4 Years; Roosevelt Says Trade Pacts Benefit U. S.

President Says Treaties Bolster World Peace, Promote Recovery.

Pledges Support For Co-operatives

Text of the President's Address—Page 6.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Oct. 9 (AP).—Standing before Minnesota's massive Statehouse, President Roosevelt tonight attributed to reciprocal trade treaties an "increased general trade," which he said was benefiting American industry and agriculture alike.

The first major address of his 5,000-mile campaign swing through some of the Nation's finest agricultural centers, it produced:

An assurance of continued active support for farm co-operatives from the Administration, a statement that the AAA had depicted "economic democracy in action," and references to such varied topics as ditatorship, the new international monetary accord and world peace.

Speaking just across the Mississippi River from Minneapolis, where Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, recently criticized the Administration's reciprocal tariff program, the President contended that these activities are one influence toward "economic co-operation which leads to international peace."

Thousands of persons packed into the plaza in front of the capitol burst into a cheer as the President's car rolled up just after dusk had fallen and caught the lights twinkling from windows of office buildings and homes spreading out from the base of the hill on which the capitol stands.

Speaks from Stand.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke from a stand erected on the broad steps immediately before the ornate entry. Flags were spread lavishly over the stand and press tables. Floodlights played on the capitol.

Into his address the President injected his first public reference to the new tri-power monetary understanding, mentioned "frenzied finance" between 1920 and 1930, and talked of peace as a force for making money.

"A prosperous world," he said, "has no permanent room in it for dictatorship or for war."

Mr. Roosevelt spoke from Minnesota's State Capitol, just across the Mississippi River from Minneapolis, where Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, recently criticized the trade treaty activities of the Administration.

Says Farms, Industry Profit.

"American industry and American agriculture," he said, referring to the reciprocal program, "are both benefiting by increased general trade. The figures prove it, and out-growing consumption and better farm prices prove it."

He pledged his Administration to "continue in active support of the ever-growing farm co-operative movement," adding:

"But let us remember that the same spirit of co-operation is an essential part of our relations with the other nations of the world. It is this realistic appreciation of the benefits of co-operation that lies behind our efforts to re-establish foreign markets for our farm products."

Concerning peace, he said it could not be attained merely by getting sentimental about it.

"Peace," he said, "depends upon the acceptance of the principle and practice of the good neighbor. * * * Peace makes money; peace saves money for everybody."

Praises Money Accord.

In his first comment on the monetary agreement among the United States, Great Britain and France, he said:

"Within the past two weeks, splendid progress has been made in giving a greater stability to foreign exchange. Within that same time there have been lifted many quotas and embargoes, including those on important American agricultural export products."

Back in the spring of 1933, he said, he inherited a foreign trade that had fallen off to about a third of its former values.

"The very word 'trade' means articles of commerce flowing in two directions," he asserted. "It is not a one-way street. * * * There cannot be a revival of foreign exports without a revival of foreign imports—unless, of course, we do as we did between 1920 and 1930—lend our money to foreign nations to enable them to buy our own farm and industrial products.

"But America has learned her lesson once and for all about that kind of frenzied finance."

The President recalled that Secretary Hull had spoken recently in Minnesota to point out what trade agreements "have accomplished to increase the trade and income not only of the industrial workers, but of the farmers of the Nation."

"Mutual advantage has been the successful objective," he said, "and our exports during the first half of this year as compared with the last

On the Campaign Line

Partisans of both President Roosevelt and Gov. Alfred M. Landon were on the campaign firing line Friday as the heads of the two major party tickets spoke, the President in St. Paul, his rival in Chicago. Other campaign addresses included:

Secretary Ickes, speaking in Columbus, Ohio, charged Father Charles E. Coughlin and the national Republican organization are working together.

Harry L. Hopkins, WPA Administrator, attacked critics of his relief organization, as a group of contractors renewed charges WPA is causing shortage of skilled labor in the building industry.

James M. Cox, Democratic nominee for President in 1920, in his first speech of the campaign said defeat of President Roosevelt would leave the Government leaderless.

Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, said he would not speak for Landon or any other Presidential candidate, but would continue to discuss issues.

Illinois Studies Murder Theory In Wife's Death

Husband Queried as Police Question Suicide Pact Story of Texan.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—Assistant State's Attorney Mal Coghlin said tonight he is "investigating the possibility" that Mrs. Cordelia Black, 35, was slain, despite insistence of her former husband, Coydon Black, 38, that she had died in a suicide pact.

Dead for three days, Mrs. Black, a railroad employe, was found in the bedroom of her South Side apartment yesterday. Black, his wrists slashed, was found in the living room of the apartment, but lapsed into unconsciousness shortly after a janitor had discovered the tragedy.

Questioned today, the former husband told Police Lieut. Thomas Mangan, the officer said, that his former wife's death was the result of a suicide agreement.

Says He Lost Nerve.

Police said Black told them the woman swallowed a deadly poison Monday night, but that he lost his nerve and tried to bolster his courage by drinking liquor. For three days he remained in the apartment with the body of his former wife locked in her bedroom, he said, and finally yesterday he slashed his wrists and swallowed a small quantity of the poison.

Black said he came to Chicago

Woman in Rain Killed by Auto In Safety Zone

Son and Maid Are Injured; Driver Detained for Coroner's Jury.

A Washington woman was killed instantly and her 8-year-old son injured seriously last night when they were struck by an automobile as they stood in a safety zone awaiting a street car at Wisconsin avenue and Woodley road northwest.

The victims were Mrs. Lauretta E. Holsonbake, 33, of 3026 Wisconsin avenue, and Ronnie Hardee Holsonbake. Mrs. Holsonbake was pronounced dead by physicians at Georgetown Hospital, who said her skull had been fractured and her neck broken.

Streets Rainsoaked.

Police said the driver, John R. Coblentz, 24, of Middletown, Md., drove into the safety zone on the rainsoaked streets.

The downpour and darkness, which had just fallen, blinded him, he told officers, who held him at the Eighth Precinct Station for a coroner's jury.

A Takoma Park woman, Mrs. Audrey Eichoran, 44, was injured seriously last night when struck by a car operated by William F. Lake,

Coercion Is Laid to Democrats In Tugwell Model Ohio Village

Charges of "political coercion" of Federal employes spread yesterday to "Green Hills," near Cincinnati, one of Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell's three model villages, where investigation was ordered into organization of workers into "The Hilltop Democratic Club."

As rival party factions in Cincinnati split sharply over the incident, the Resettlement Administration here ordered Col. S. W. Moulding, assistant superintendent of Green Hills construction, suspended without prejudice. Investigators were sent to the scene.

Affidavits made public by Republican leaders in Cincinnati charged workers on the project virtually were coerced into joining the club, membership fees were solicited, and Moulding attended a Frank Knox Republican rally to check on Resettlement workers who might be present.

Although Works Project Administrator Harry L. Hopkins has faced a daily barrage of affidavits alleging WPA political activity, Resettlement Administration officials said the Cincinnati affidavits were the first serious charges of the kind against any of Dr. Tugwell's units.

Ohio is highly doubtful territory in the coming Presidential election, and political capital already is be-

Assails President's Pittsburgh Speech

Text of Gov. Landon's Address—Page 9.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—Gov. Alf M. Landon promised tonight to balance the Federal budget in less than four years by "efficient administration" and by ending "wholesale waste and extravagance," if he is elected.

Sounding a demand that voters "put the spenders out" and saying President Roosevelt's budget-balancing "assurances" were "political hush-darlings," the Republican Presidential nominee told an audience in the huge Chicago Stadium and by radio throughout the country:

"If I am elected, the budget is going to be balanced * * * not by depriving our needy of relief, not by refusing necessary aid to our farmers, not by swamping the country with taxes.

"The budget is going to be balanced by cutting out waste and extravagance; by putting an end to the use of public funds for political purposes; by restoring hard-working, painstaking, common-sense administration. * * *

"That is how the budget can be balanced—how it can be balanced without reducing by a single dollar the necessary payments to those actually in need."

Micha J. Kennedy, business representative of Electrical Workers Union Local 134, of Chicago, designated to introduce Landon, read from the platform what he said was a request from one of the audience that since "so many Democrats are for Gov. Landon," the "Sidewalks of New York" be sung. Amid a burst of applause, the organ struck up this 1928 campaign tune of Alfred E. Smith, Democrat now supporting Landon.

Calls Vote Important.

In his introduction, Kennedy said "this is the most important election in which the American people have ever been called upon to participate."

"Let me say to you as a labor man—as a trade unionist—that no matter what President Roosevelt's intentions have been, no concrete benefits have come to labor, organized or unorganized, as a result of the theoretical legislation that has been enacted during his Administration."

Landon's address on the budget marked the formal opening of an eight-day campaign for 88 electoral votes of States his aids have described as the battleground"—Illinois, Ohio, Michigan and Indiana. Choosing the dollars-and-cents columns of Government income and outgo as his topic, the Kansan quoted frequently from his Democratic opponent, both as "Candidate Roosevelt" and "President Roosevelt" and closed with a baseball scoreboard analogy similar to that employed by Mr. Roosevelt in Pittsburgh a week ago.

"Not Just a Game."

"They are proud of their spending," the candidate said, "they talk of it as though preserving the financial integrity of the United States were only a game.

"The American people know that it is more than a game—that our very existence depends upon keeping our financial house in order. But if the Administration wants a baseball analogy—if they want the score—it is easy to give. It is written clear across the country:

"Twenty-five billion dollars spent.

"Thirteen billion dollars added to the public debt.

Landon said the Washington Government "has become a vast sieve through which taxpayers' money is being poured in constantly increasing volume," adding:

"Never in the history of government has there been such profligate spending. Anyone at all familiar with what has been going on could almost count on the fingers of one hand foolish experiments the Government could cut out and save at least a billion dollars anytime it wanted to.

"But I mean to balance the budget. And I am not going to take

Methodists Agree to Vote on Union Next Year. Hope to Heal Break Caused by Slavery in 1848

Hopeful of healing a rupture in the church created 88 years ago, the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South yesterday agreed to vote in 1937 on the unification of all Methodist churches in America.

Convened 500 strong here at the Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church, clerical and lay delegates from sections of Virginia and West Virginia, all of Maryland, and the District, followed in the footsteps of general conferences of Methodist Episcopal and Methodist Protestant churches which already have approved union with the M. E. Church under the nafe of "The Methodist Church."

The general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South is expected to vote on the question in 1938.

After action by the general conference, if favorable, an affirmative vote of three-fourths of the memberships of all district conferences is required for final approval of the unification.

The slavery question split the Southern branch from the Northern in 1848. Trouble started in 1844, when Bishop James Osgood Andrew, a native of the South, inherited some slaves. After debates of many days he was requested to relinquish his office while he continued to hold the slaves.

The result was that after a temporary separation, the Southern and Northern churches were permanently bisected, more than 500,000 members withdrawing with 780 preachers. The Southern division formed a new church of its own, which soon was split between colored and white churches.

Yesterday's vote was an historic moment in the annuals of Methodism comparable with another day in 1784 when John Wesley reunited colonial Methodists who neared disintegration into a southern and northern group over the question of administering the sacrament, which the southerners approved and the northerners opposed.

Bishop Paul B. Kern last night delivered the annual missionary address.

For four years in charge of Methodist work in the Orient, he highly praised the church organization in Japan, where 175 educational institutions have been established.

"One must believe in the validity of our missions to believe in the validity of the church and of Christianity," asserted Bishop Kern.

He urged all members of the conference to study the spirit, the purposes and the workings of missions the world over.

The hope for world peace, he pointed out, lies in Christianization, and a departure from shintoism and extreme nationalism.

By the Associated Press.

Attributing the gain to reviving trade and new tax laws, Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering announced yesterday a $313,707,921 increase in income tax collections during the 1936 fiscal year.

Total Federal tax collections rose to $3,520,208,381, he reported in submitting revised figures for the year ended last June 30 to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

This represented an improvement of $220,772,808, or 6.7 per cent, Helvering said, in spite of the invalidation of the lucrative agricultural adjustment taxes by the Supreme Court.

28.5 Per Cent Gain.

The 28.5 per cent gain in income taxes reflected, for the first time, the full effect of the 1934 revenue act, he added.

Higher rates imposed by the 1934 law, coupled with increased values, resulted in a $78,000,000 rise in estate taxes and an $88,000,000 improvement in gift tax collections.

Substantial increases in returns from levies on alcoholic beverages, tobacco, securities issues, stock transfers, and other miscellaneous items also were listed.

Cost of collecting Federal taxes rose slightly during 1936, Helvering said, noting that the collection of each $100 of revenue cost $1.47, as compared with $1.44 in 1935. Total expenses of administering revenue laws were $51,783,385.

Audits and field investigations of tax returns resulted in the levying of $454,216,071 in additional assessments, while refunds on taxes illegally collected amounted to $38,701,820, including interest.

Excess profit tax revenues mounted $7,984,807 during 1936 to a total of $14,509,290, while capital stock taxes amounted to $94,942,751.

The levy on distilled spirits and wines brought in $256,337,600, a gain of $60,879,706 over the previous year, and the tax on fermented malt liquors resulted in the collection of $249,126,436, or $33,562,557 more than in 1935.

also of Takoma Park. The accident occurred at Carroll and Ethan Allan avenues.

Treated in Hospital.

Mrs. Eichoran was taken to Washington Sanitarium, where she was treated for right leg and internal injuries. Lake was charged with reckless driving by Officer Earl Thomas of the Takoma Park police.

One man was held under the negligent homicide law and another exonerated by a coroner's jury investigating two traffic deaths at the District Morgue yesterday.

Henry R. Kersher, a corporal at Fort Myer, Va., was held by the jury in the death Wednesday night of Sergt. Roy F. Miller, 28, machine-gun troop rider, also stationed at the fort.

Crashed Near Bridge.

Miller was killed instantly when an automobile Kersher was driving and in which he was a passenger, turned over five times on Memorial Highway near Arlington Memorial Bridge. Kersher was hurt slightly, while a young woman companion suffered skull injuries and cuts and bruises.

A Capital Transit Co. motorman, Cellie B. Capps, 36, was exonerated in the death of Mrs. Mary E. Walker, 90, of 1139 Connecticut avenue, who died of injuries suffered when she was struck by his street car.

Mrs. Walker died Wednesday in Homeopathic Hospital. The accident occurred near her home September 12.

Mrs. Mildred Echols, 47, of 946 Fourteenth street southeast, suffered skull injuries and cuts and bruises last night, when she was struck by an automobile at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

She was taken to Gallinger Hospital. Police held Leroy Brown, 27, colored, of the 2900 block of Stanton road northeast, driver of the car, pending the outcome of Mrs. Echols' injuries.

Borah's Aloofness in Supporting Landon Was Expected by Those Who Knew Him.

By Franklyn Waltman

SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH is running true to form.

His announcement that he would take no part in the campaign to elect Gov. Alf M. Landon President is exactly what was expected of him by persons who have known the Lion of Idaho for years. A futile effort was made last spring to impress this view on the Landon managers.

WALTMAN.

Even though they knew Senator Borah had no chance whatever of stopping Gov. Landon's nomination by the Republican convention, the Kansan's managers, however, were as considerate of the Idahoan as if their chance for victory in November depended solely on him.

Emissaries were sent to Senator Borah to invite his participation in drafting the platform and though he refused publicly to have anything to do with that document, his influence was more dominant than that of any other person. Compromise after compromise was made in the platform to suit the growling—but never biting—Lion of Idaho. Even two of Gov. Landon's pet principles were thrown into the wastebasket to please Senator Borah—his advocacy of a return to the gold standard and his declaration for a constitutional amendment to permit State minimum wage standards for women, subsequently enunciated in a telegram to the convention.

The nationalistic tone of the Republican platform was due to the influence of Senator Borah, more than that of any other man. There is no doubt that had the Landon managers at Cleveland ignored Senator Borah, the platform would have been a different document. But they did not wish to offend the Idahoan. They believed they could get him to make at least two or three major speeches of Nation-wide interest on behalf of Gov. Landon—indeed, they really thought he would as late as August 1.

* * *

Writing in this place on May 15, last, I stated the view prevailed in Washington that "Senator Borah will not bolt the party but that the farthest he will go will be to return to Idaho after the convention and concentrate on seeking his re-election as Senator from that State—keeping aloof from the Presidential contest."

"Such would be normal Borah behavior," I added.

There is more irony in politics than in any activity in which men engage. Take, for illustration, the charge that Wall Street dominates the Republican Party—about which we are not hearing so much these days. It is a long-standing charge and was given emphasis more than a year ago when Senator Borah set out to smash the old guard control of the Republican Party. Charles D. Hilles, the New York national committeeman, who does errands for Wall Street, became his whipping boy.

The smart Kansas journalists who catapulted Gov. Landon into the national political scene realized that it was a potent issue, and they made capital out of the fact that their candidate came from the prairies, had no Wall Street connections and did not even like Wall Street. They might also have pointed out that on one occasion he denounced J. P. Morgan, putting him in the same class as Samuel Insull.

As the campaign developed, the Landon managers took every precaution to keep Wall Street figures away from their candidate and to woo the friendship of assailants of Wall Street and the money power, like Senator Borah. Even Gov. Landon when he went to Buffalo late in August cast a cold, icy stare on Mr. Hilles and avoided a conference with him.

The irony of the whole thing is, that while Gov. Landon was so assiduously being protected from the wolves of Wall Street, he was seized by the Borahs, the George N. Peeks, the professional farm saviors and such gentry.

And just as Senator Borah has run out on Gov. Landon, after forcing his nationalistic and parochial views into the platform, so it may be predicted that soon or late Mr. Peek will run out on the Kansan after leading him down a blind alley on the tariff question. At least this much can be said: George Peek has broken with everyone with whom he ever formed an alliance.

* * * *

But if there is irony in politics, there also is humor, as witness this remark of President Roosevelt at Oelwein, Iowa, reported by the Associated Press: "I find it terribly hard after four years to begin trying to make political speeches again. I've been so tremendously engrossed trying to bring things back, and that goes beyond lines of party politics."

'Not Worried' About Future, Says Roosevelt year have increased by $132,000,000."

The President said every American ought to imprint what he called a "home truth" in his memory. This was the 'truth':

"When the nations of the world, including America, had jacked their tariffs to the highest point and enacted embargoes and imposed quotas—in those days farm prices throughout the world were at their lowest, and world trade had almost ceased to exist.

"Today, under the leadership of the United States, other nations of the world are coming to recognize that home truth."

Upholds AAA Co-operation.

Turning to the AAA, Mr. Roosevelt said it had as its foundation and its essence, the co-operative idea. He called it a "picture of economic democracy in action," and argued that from the outset his Administration had come to the support "of the co-operative idea by vigorous action."

"That support has continued," he said. "That support will continue."

He said the Administration had:

Established a central bank for co-operatives with 12 regional banks to aid in marketing and purchasing.

Held out a helping hand of credit to production credit associations.

Talks at Oelwein, Iowa.

The President opened his farm belt campaign with an assertion that, compared with 1932, he had seen an "enormous difference" in the prosperity of the American people.

He addressed that remark earlier today to crowds about the rear platform of his special train at Oelwein, Iowa, disdaining a light but steady rain.

A few hours before the Chief Executive had stood before another throng at Dubuque to assert that "I am not worried" so long as the conduct of the Nation "lies in the hands of you good people."

Early in the afternoon, the Roosevelt special crossed into Minnesota for another platform appearance at Hayfield, before speeding to St. Paul.

When someone from the audience suggested that the Nation would have the same kind of government for four more years, Mr. Roosevelt said, "I have a sneaking suspicion that's right."

Then, as a chuckle rose from his listeners, he continued:

"But nevertheless, I am concerned about the future of the country; we all are. I am trying to gain better first-hand information as to the needs of the country in the days to come. It will be useful to me whether I am re-elected or not.

The Chief Executive said there wasn't much doubt that things were better than they were four years ago.

He said if factories in big cities "are running full speed," workers will have more money to buy foodstuffs."

Cites Doctors' Formulae.

If all citizens had the kind of diet doctors considered best, he said, 40,000,000 additional acres would have to be planted.

Turning to purchasing power, he said it had increased from 38 to more than 60 billion dollars annually "and we haven't stopped yet."

"I am merely one comparatively small unit in the future of the country. The future of the country lies in the hands of you good people, men and women, young people, today and in the days to come, and I am not worried so long as the conduct remains in your hands."

Sees Danger In Europe.

To a question about the war, the President said that the "good neighbor policy" seems to be "catching hold," but described conditions in Europe as dangerous.

Introduced at Oelwein by Gov. Herring of Iowa, the President spoke with Mrs. Roosevelt and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. James Roosevelt, by his side.

Oelwein is a railway center. Several times the Chief Executive touched on what he called improved conditions of the carriers.

He said he was especially glad the roads were "getting back on their feet again," and continued that the Government "had a share" in that. It lent them a lot of money and is getting it back, he said.

The money was loaned out just as it was to banks, and "it was a good, sound investment," he said.

"I find it terribly hard after four years," the President told the Oelwein depot crowd, "to begin trying to make political speeches again. I've been so tremendously engrossed trying to bring things back, and that goes beyond lines of party politics."

The Campaign Arena

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 9.—As unexpectedly as they entered the New York State political scene, Union Party candidates for State-wide office withdrew today, filing simultaneously with the Secretary of State identically worded declinations of nomination.

The withdrawing candidates, whose petitions were filed just before the deadline for entering independent nominations last Tuesday night, were:

Nomination of a State-wide ticket was an unexpected move in the closing hours for filing petitions.

While the State-wide candidates declined, there was no indication of any move to withdraw candidates for electors for Representative William Lemke and Thomas C. O'Brien, Union Party candidates for President and Vice President, respectively, indorsed by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, head of the National Union for Social Justice. Unless successful objections are filed, they will appear on the ballot at the general election November 3.

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—Democratic Chairman James A. Farley said today he would leave Tuesday for Chicago where he will join President Roosevelt's campaign train to confer with leaders during the trip.

He said he would remain with the President until he returns to Hyde Park Saturday night.

This will be the first time since July 1 that Farley has been away from national headquarters for more than a day or two at one time.

* * * *

Binghamton, N. Y., Oct. 9 (AP).—A court order today gave Charles W. Kress, of Binghamton, assurance that his name will not go on the election ballot November 3 as a Communist candidate for Congress.

Kress was defeated in the recent primary election for the Republican nomination. One voter pasted the communistic label on his candidacy, however, by writing "Charley Kress" across a Communist ballot.

Kress wrote to Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn declining the nomination. He was told his letter of declination could not be accepted because it had not been acknowledged before a notary public in conformation with the election law.

Kress thereupon went to court.

Supreme Court Justice Ely W. Personius signed an order today directing Flynn to accept the declination and cancel the certificate of nomination.

St. Louis, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—National Jeffersonian Democrats charged tonight that President Roosevelt had betrayed the Democratic Party in Minnesota.

Sterling Edmunds, secretary of the national group, in a telegram addressed to Minnesota newspapers, bitterly attacked the President for countenancing the fusion in Minnesota of the Democratic Party with the dominant Farmer-Labor political organization.

"It is incomprehensible," Edmounds said, "that any Presidential candidate, running as the titular head of the Democratic Party, can abet the suicide of the Democratic Party in any State, even if he felt it might redound to his personal gain."

* * * *

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 9 (AP).—It's an old Southern custom—this kissing of pretty girls—but it probably won't be an issue in the Florida gubernatorial campaign.

Republican Candidate E. E. Callaway opened the question last night when he said the Democratic nominee, Fred P. Cone, was touring the State "making speeches and kissing all the women that will let him."

Callaway said women reported Cone's kisses were the "flattest they ever had in their lives and they are afraid he will make just as flat a Governor."

Baltimore, Oct. 9 (AP).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin told a press conference here tonight that the "United States should apologise to Russia" for the statement of Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau in connection with the recent use of the American stabilization fund to buoy the pound in the face of selling by the Soviet.

He termed the statement a "pure Morgenthau fabrication," and added that the Secretary had assisted the franc by a "subterranean loan" despite the existence of the Johnson act," which forbids loans to nations in default on their debts to the United States.

Asked about the withdrawal of the Union Party ticket from New York today, the priest referred inquiries to John P. Bramer, New York State supervisor for the National Union for Social Justice.

"If Mr. Bramer has asked them to withdraw," he said, "he undoubtedly had some good reason for doing so."

* * *

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 9. (AP).—Workers were urged tonight by John W. Aiken, Socialist Labor candidate for President, to organize themselves for the purpose of ousting capitalism and taking over control of industry.

After assailing the New Deal in a speech over station WJW Aiken predicted the doom of the capitalistic system and said:

"A large portion of the working class believes today that their only weapon is the strike. In the city of Akron there has been a strong tendency for workers to adopt the 'sit-down' form of strike.

"The Socialist Labor Party believes that this weapon will be of no greater benefit to the workers in their srtuggle for freedom. Instead, the times call ever more for the class-conscious act of organizing on the job. Not to sit down, but to take over, hold, and keep the industries operating for the benefit of the majority."

Newark, N. J., Oct. 9 (AP).—Oriental politeness set a good example in the political arena today.

The Democrats, questioning the claim, canvassed the Chinese-American colony. Wu Kim, a Democrat and World War veteran, reported as follows:

"It was my great privilege to assist the Democratic Party in its canvass. I restricted my humble efforts to the sector inhabited by many of my race. There I found sentiment for President Roosevelt as overwhelming as the Yangtze flood waters.

"It is with regret that I find it necessary to dispute untenable claims of Mr. William P. Lee, honorable head of the Chinese division of the Republican Party."

One Dead, Two Burned In Coast Brush Fire

Bakersfield, Calif., Oct. 9 (U.P.).—One man was killed and two severely burned tonight when a party of five was trapped by a brush fire that swept across the Caliente watershed 50 miles east of here.

Orie Clark and Don Mills were taken to an emergency hospital at Rankin ranch suffering from burns and shock. Two others escaped with minor injuries.

Reject Church Merger.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 9 (U.P.).—A proposal to merge the various Methodist groups into one church was defeated today, 69 to 32, at a meeting of the Eastern Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church.

Had the consolidation been approved, it would have brought together the Methodist Protestant Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church South with a total membership of 8,000,000.

The Eastern Conference includes churches in New Jersey, part of Pennsylvania, New York and Connecicut.

Treasury Takes Over Accounting of RA Fund

The Treasury has taken over jurisdiction over accounting for the Resettlement Administration. All other agencies spending emergency relief funds previously had come under Treasury jurisdiction.

Spokesmen for Administrator Rexford G. Tugwell of the Resettlement Administration, yesterday said the new plan would result in a "much more efficient" system and end "considerable duplication."

society and who wish to overthrow the republican regime and substitute a dictatorship of internationals."

The "Land Alsace Society," one of the strongest Rightist groups in France, rallied to de la Rocque's banner tonight and warned authorities of the frontier provinces that they were strongly enough organized "to overcome any hesitation" on the part of police in curbing the Communist meetings.

Reds Denounced.

Centrist newspapers joined Rightist organs in denouncing Communists for their decision to hold the meetings, and stressed possible effects disorders might have on neighboring Germany.

The newspapers pleaded with Rightists and Leftists to settle their differences peaceably, lest Germany "might be tempted" by signs of internal trouble in France."

Said Paris-Midi: "Disorders on our eastern frontier would be particularly grave, since it is close to Hitlerean Germany, whose reflexes in such matters are well known."

Catholics, Reds at Odds.

Strasburg, France, Oct. 9 (AP).—Catholicism and communism came to grips today on France's eastern frontier with the call of the Catholic clerical party for a finish fight on the expanding communist movement in the war-scarred provinces of Alsace-Lorraine.

The Communist Party, virtually nonexistent in this rich industrial and agricultural region before the elections last May, now is second in size only to the dominant Catholic Party.

The Communists' gains have been made in the industrial cities of the "lost provinces," taken from France by Germany in 1870 and regained in 1918.

Church and State Linked.

Against the Communists' growing strength, the church can throw the power of a position so strongly entrenched that in Alsace-Lorraine alone of all Frnace the government did not force the complete separation of church and state.

Instead, the provinces were allowed to continue under the concordat of Napoleon of 1801, under which they have a charge d'affaires to represent them in Rome.

Stormy controversies over politics, education and religion have occurred in Alsace-Lorraine almost from the start of the French occupation in November, 1918, and a separatist movement has existed for a decade or more.

French authorities have charged that Nazi Germany is actively supporting the separatist movement. A majority of the nearly 2,000,000 inhabitants of the region are German-speaking, and many of them look on Chancellor Hitler, German dictator, with favor.

about a month ago from Fort Worth, Tex., where he and Mrs. Black formerly lived. They were divorced about a year and a half ago.

Black was taken to a District police station from a hospital bed tonight and questioned briefly. He was returned to the hospital until tomorrow.

"We are investigating the possibility," the prosecutor said, "that Black duped his former wife into taking a poisonous highball, but took no poison in his own drink."

He expressed belief Black mixed a sleeping potion with his drinks instead of poison. Such a potion, Coghlin said, was found in Black's clothing. He added:

"The slashes on his wrists are superficial."

Coghlin said he had been informed the former husband had served four years in the Kansas State Reformatory, from 1928 to 1932, on a charge of arson.

Coal Firm Tests Jobless Insurance

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 9 (AP).—An Alabama coal company today launched a broad attack on Federal and State laws creating the unemployment insurance program to tide workers over jobless days while seeking new employment.

Southern Coal & Coke Co., of Shelby County, Ala., filed the attack in United States District Court here. The case was set for a hearing October 22, before a three-judge Federal court.

It directly tests the validity of the Federal Government's unemployment insurance section of the Social Security Program, and Alabama's unemployment compensation law.

The move came as counsel for hundreds of Alabama firms prepared to enter a hearing before Federal Judge C. B. Kennamer on test suits against the State law alone. By consent, the various suits will be held in abeyance until the United States Supreme Court rules on the case of the Shelby County coal company.

British Kill 15 Arabs In Palestine Manhunt

Jerusalem, Oct. 9 (AP).—Fifteen Arabs were killed today by British troops in the Nablus-Tulkaren area during an intensive search for Palestine's "public enemy No. 1," the Syrian leader Fawzi Bey Kawkazi. Wawzi was not found.

Two British tanks inflicted casualties on an Arab band yesterday before they were stopped by the rebels. Other tanks came to their rescue during the night. Infantry regiments took up the fighting today.

New Blue, Optional Uniform Is Adopted for Army Officers; Resembles That Worn by Washington High School Cadets

—U. S. Army Photographs.

The new blue uniform adopted yesterday by the United States Army, modeled for the photographer. Left to right, enlisted men's dress uniform, enlisted men's full dress, officers' full dress and officers' evening full dress.

The War Department adopted a new blue uniform for Army officers yesterday, and in doing so unconsciously paid a compliment to Washington's high school cadets.

The uniform, which is to be optional, consists of a dark blue roll-collar coat and light blue trousers, exactly like the trousers the Army officers wear with the present blue dress uniform.

A War Department announcement said:

"The new uniform will replace eventually the present blue dress, full dress, and the social evening uniforms. For dress the coat will be worn with a white shirt, turned-down collar and a black four-in-hand tie with shoulder loops of the color of the arm of service on which the insignia of rank will be pinned.

"No belt will be worn with the dress uniform. For full dress, gold shoulder knots with insignia of rank will replace the colored shoulder loops and a gold belt will be worn with or without the saber.

"Either a turned-down collar with a black four-in-hand tie or a wing collar with the black tuxedo tie will be prescribed, depending upon whether the full dress uniform is worn during the day or during the evening.

"For social evening wear, the uniform will be the same as evening full dress with the exception that the belt and saber will not be worn."

The War Department said officers who now possess the old blue uniforms would be permitted to wear them as long as they desired.

No change in the service uniform of the officers is contemplated in the near future, it was said, but the department's uniform board is studying the possibility of developing a practical field uniform which may involve changes in the olive drab uniform.

For the enlisted men the War Department has approved, subject to test, a blue uniform. This will be tested at the same time as the new olive drab field uniform, which has not yet been adopted. It is the hope of the War Department to adopt both the blue and the field uniform for enlisted men at the same time.

Rebels' Planes Told to Bomb Rivals' Cities

The carefully planned union of the northern and southern wings of the rebel armies was but a matter of hours.

San Martin de Valdeiglesias, toward which both wings have been driving for weeks, at last fell to the troops of Gen. Emilio Mola, northern commander and the conqueror of Irun and San Sebastian.

The advance units of Gen. Francisco Franco's forces in the south were in a forced march toward Mola's men and were less than 8 miles from their rendezvous.

The ever-changing Fascist lines grasping at Madrid snaked along from an area about 40 miles due north of Madrid down southwest to San Martin which is between 35 and 40 miles due west of Madrid.

From that point the line jutted sharply back west for about 10 miles, and looped back eastward in a bee line across country to Torrejon due south of Madrid.

Fingers of the northern and southern termini of the rebel line stretched out east, seeking to bend around toward each other, thus crunching Madrid from all sides.

Rebel leaders confidently predicted their men would be swaggering in the streets of Madrid within a week.

With San Martin captured, they said, the march on Madrid was as good as accomplished.

Hope for Soviet Aid.

Madrid, Oct. 9 (AP).—Spanish government leaders tonight pinned desperate hopes on possibility of Soviet Russian aid to save Madrid from the insurgent drive rapidly storming towards the capital.

With the acknowledged fall of strategic cities in the Sierra de Gredos and Guadarrama Mountain passes, "key" gateways to Madrid from the northwest, officials anxiously awaited the outcome of the "fateful meeting" of the International Non-Intervention Committee in London.

Tension mounted hourly in the capital tonight as reports told of the advance of the hard-driving insurgents.

Furious Fighting.

Madrid (Saturday), Oct. 10 (U.P.). Furious fighting continued today along the Alberche River sector, north of Escalona and south of Navalperal.

Rebels and loyalists were using tanks and infantry charges. The government reported the oLyalists were taking the offensive.

Loyalists regained some ground in a hotly contested battle at Martin Valde Iglesias. Government troops staged a counter-attack before the rebels had time to consolidate their position.

The attack was preceded by bombardment of the rebel position.

Hand to hand fighting followed the bombardment. The loyalists repeatedly were gaining, despite attacks by scores of rebel bombers, pursuit planes, tanks, machine guns and the Moorish cavalry.

The government said that at the same time a smaller offensive was launched at Navalperal.

At both places the rebel soldiers and arms were superior to the loyalists, and outcome of the offensives was in doubt.

Hundreds Reported Slain.

Gibraltar, Saturday Oct 10 (U.P.)—Gen. Gonzalo Quiepo de Llano broadcast from Seville today that the crew of the government warship Jamie Primero boarded a vessel in a river off Bilbao and killed several hundred persons.

He said the slaughter, not confirmed from other sources, was in reprisal for the sinking of the government cruiser Almirante Ferrandiz.

Prisoner Denies Guilt In Shooting, Assault

After pleading not guilty to a charge of assault with itnent to kill, Frank H. Acton, 35, was held under a $10,000 bond yesterday in District Jail.

U.S. Nationals In Spain Facing Rebel Barriers

By the Associated Press.

Rebel lines tightening about Madrid yesterday threatened to bloc final avenues of escape for about 100 American citizens and Nationals who have remained in the Spanish capital despite repeated warnings of peril.

Their possible plight in the event of a siege aroused conjecture, but the State Department declined to say whether new measures had been taken looking to their protection.

Despite the threat of rebel bombardment or siege, the American Embassy still was open.

Has Stuck to Job.

Youthful Eric C. Wendelin, the third secretary who has been in charge since the fighting started in mid-July, has long been authorized, officials said, to close it in his discretion and flee. But the youthful diplomat has stuck to his job.

Wendelin and Ambassador Claude G. Bowers, who is at St. Jean de Luz, on the French border, have been keeping in continual touch with the State Department.

Estimating the number remaining in Madrid and vicinity at "about 100," officials said most were Puerto Ricans, who are full citizens, and Filipinos, who are nationals entitled to the protection of the United States.

Others Have Left.

Because of family or other ties, they chose to remain in the face of a final warning last month that the embassy might no longer be considered a place of refuge. Several hundred other Americans and Filipinos left Madrid and other Spanish cities earlier.

With the exception of those at Bilbao, in the north, and Malaga, in southern Spain, all the American consulates have remained open and are following a "business as usual" policy as far as possible, the State Department said.

Besides Wendelin at Madrid, with a clerical staff, is Consul John D. Johnson, of Vermont; Bolard More, of Ohio, vice consul, and Col. Stephen O. Fuqua, the military attache. Wendelin is from Massachusetts.

Russia Decides 'To Keep Peace' For Time Being

Not to Bolt Neutrality Pact; Stormy Session Held in London.

The communique said Russian charges would be "communicated * * * to the governments of Germany, Italy and Portugal with a request for such explanations in writing as would enable the committee to establish the facts."

In a long declamation against Russia, in which he charged the latter with sending arms to the Spanish government, Grandi demanded that all of Russia's previous charges be quashed. Disregarding this demand, however, the committee decided to leave the question open for consideration later. The Russians considered this action at least a "moral victory," according to reliable informants.

While the Soviet government does not intend to withdraw from the neutrality pact at present, Kagan will leave London unless the committee resumes deliberations on his country's charges within the next few days, it was reported. Pending developments, Russia will retain full and active membership, it was added. Authorities pointed out that a long period of diplomatic exchanges would be necessary to decide whether Russia would consider actual withdrawal.

The Soviets were represented as having no desire for immediate withdrawal, despite their strong feelings in the matter, for the following reasons:

Kagan and his assistants believe they will be able to force a decision of some sort from the committee.

An abrupt departure would lay the Kremlin open to charges of desiring to follow only one course —gaining a free hand to assist the Spanish government.

The neutrality committee decided on its night session after the British Labor Party came forward with a demand that Britain and France permit the Madrid government to buy arms if the neutrality pact is broken by any nation.

Anthony Eden, Britain's foreign secretary, stopped off in Paris today for a conference with Premier Leon Blum on what the two powers might do to quiet Russia's outburst.

It was understood that Lord Plymouth, as British chairman and spokesman in the neutrality session, was having a hard job to keep the meeting from becoming an arena for opposing adherents of Fascism and Communism.

Rome Denies Charge.

Rome, Oct. 9 (AP).—Government officials tonight denied unreservedly that Italian forces acting as Italian units were concerned in the capture of the Balearic island Ibiza.

Well-informed sources said, however, it was possible that Italians or persons of Italian descent were fighting in Spain on behalf of the Burgos government through personal preference. But these sources denied the existence of groups of Italians on the Spanish front taking orders from Italy.

The Italian government, it was said, cannot be accused of inspiring the movement of Italians who have volunteered to help the Fascicts in Spain.

New Orleans, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—A tropical disturbance apparently was forming a short distance off the west coast of Yucatan, Mexico, tonight, the United States Hurricane Warning System reported at 8:45 p. m. (Central standard time).

At 6 p. m. (Central standard time) the Weather Bureau said the storm was near Campeche, attended only by fresh, shifting winds.

Girl, 19, Was Killed By Accident, Says 'Death-Kiss' Slayer

Cincinnati, Oct. 9 (AP).—John Rueger, 51, accused "death kiss" slayer of Alberta Judd, 19, told police today the girl was killed accidentally.

He intended, Detective Chief Emmett Kirgan quoted Rueger as saying, to kill himself while in the embrace of Miss Judd, who worked in a frozen custard stand Rueger operated this summer. Rueger's attorney, Joseph Bird, said Rueger told him he was deeply in love with Miss Judd, but did not intend to kill her.

"With her in my arms I thought it would be a nice way to go out," Bird said Rueger told him. "With one arm around her, I pulled out the gun with my other hand," Kirgan quoted Rueger as saying.

"Then I don't know what happened. Alberta probably saw what I was doing and grabbed my hand. The gun went off twice. The first bullet must have missed her. I never had the slightest intention of killing her."

Woman Found Slain In Woodside Beating

Oldest U. of M. Graduate Dead In Poolesville

Horace M. Davis Member of Class of 1874; Rites Planned Tomorrow.

Horace Morsell Davis, retired school teacher and the oldest graduate of the University of Maryland, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Marshall Hersperger, at Poolesville, Md. He was 85.

Mr. Davis, born in Frederick County, attended the university when it was known as the Maryland Agricultural College, and the most popular sports were competitive matches in cornhusking and ploughing. He graduated in 1874.

After teaching for a time in the Montgomery County schools he returned to the college and was awarded his M. A. degree in 1877. He then taught for six years in California.

Mr. Davis returned to Montgomery County in 1884 and took up farming near Poolesville. He also taught in the Poolesville school for 26 years. For a long period he served as a vestryman at St. Peter's Episcopal Church.

Surviving him are his daughter, Mrs. Hersperger; a son, Frank I. Davis, former clerk of the Montgomery County Police Court; 11 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. His wife, Mrs. Mary Williams Davis, died several years ago.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the home of his daughter. Burial will be in Monocacy Cemetery, Beallsville.

D. A. R. Groups Will Celebrate 46th Milestone

Chapters All Over Nation Will Join; Mrs. Becker Discusses Ideals.

A group of 18 patriotic women met in the Nation's Capital 46 years ago tomorrow and organized the Daughters of the American Revolution.

As the more than 2,500 D. A. R. chapters prepared to celebrate the anniversary in every State and Territory, Mrs. William A. Becker, president general, last night said:

"It was founded none too soon."

Pointing to the spread of subversive doctrines in this country and the menace of communism, which has brought bloody warfare in Spain and rioting in other European countries, Mrs. Becker explained:

"We are not alarmists, but we are awake to the dangers which beset our country. Tomorrow we will pledge anew every resource of the D. A. R. to keep America American, to preserve American principles as set forth by George Washington and by the Constitution.

"We point with pride to the growth of the D. A. R. through the years. It has chapters not only in every part of the United States and its possessions, but in London, Paris, Berlin, Rome and China, with property valued at $5,000,000. Truly the sun never sets on D. A. R. activity.

"Today the D. A. R. is concentrating its endeavors on a youth program. We are aiding youth. We are doing our part in training and educating boys and girls for true citizenship in the United States. Enthusiastically our members are helping youths to get started in life, to take their place in the great army of those who love America, instead of drifting into the ranks of those who would destroy."

Mrs. Becker paid tribute to those who, on October 11, 1890, founded the organization. It all started when Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood wrote a letter to the editor of The Washington Post, July 13, 1890, urging an organization of the women of Revolutionary lineage.

The three founders were Miss Eugenia Washington, great-grandniece of George Washington; Miss Mary Desha, of Kentucky, and Mrs. Ellen Hardin Walworth, of New York.

Mrs. Benjamin Harrison was the first president general. Mrs. Walworth was the first editor of the D. A. R. magazine and Miss Washington became the first registrar, serving in that capacity until her death in 1900.

Thirteen buildings in the town of St. Anne de Beaupre were destroyed by fire with a loss of $325,000, but the historic shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre, founded by shipwreck sailors in 1650, was not damaged by the flames. Smoldering ruins of some of the buildings shown above.

On the Air Today

Comes forth now Vida Ravenscroft Sutton, director of N.B.C.'s "Magic of Speech" programs, heard Saturdays at 11 a. m., WMAL, and opines that if women who speak on the radio would keep a standby pianist sounding A flat softly as said women talked, they would soon disprove the contention that "women make poor announcers."

Says she: "Most women become nervous and flustered when they face a mike. Their throats are constricted and the voice becomes high and unpleasant. Having the pianist sound a pleasant pitch serves as a reminder to keep the voice low and comparatively level."

Further: "I find that when you improve one's speech, you better the person's whole mode of life. If you control your voice you have gone a long way to control the emotions."

I can't quite imagine a woman speaking with a nice soft A in the background from a piano—but the idea sounds great. It might also be added that what is referred to above as a constricted throat is otherwise commonly known around studios as "mike buck"—or a dose of self-consciousness so heavy that the speaker practically becomes paralyzed.

It is not uncommon for a very interested passerby, being interviewed in "Curbstone Queries" to tremble so that his teeth literally chatter. He is willing to be interviewed and enjoys every moment of it—but he trembles just the same.

My sympathies are going out these days to WOL—blessed with two network affiliations (Intercity and Mutual) and blighted at once by the irregularity of the service they provide. Tonight, for example, Benay Venuta has been scheduled for 9 o'clock. But no one knows whether L. Venuta will be heard or not. Telegrams tumble in on top of each other canceling and reinstating programs so fast that the WOL staff has turned to listening to its own programs to learn what finally was decided on by the network program departments. Listeners should know, in this respect, that when top-notch artists are scheduled by WOL but do not appear that the program listing was made by WOL in the best of faith. Ultimately this matter should straighten out and when it does the listener in this area will have benefited.

Airport Group Will Study Site At Hybla Valley

Availability for Zeppelin Terminus and Landing Field Is Urged.

Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chairman of the sub-committee making a survey of sites for the District Airport Commission, will be asked to make a special study of the Hybla Valley flying field, which Dr. Hugo Eckener has said would make an admirable terminus for the trans-Atlantic Zeppelin flights, it was learned yesterday.

Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, said he will ask the study and that he will place Dr. Eckener's recommendation before the commission at an early meeting.

"As far as I know," said Senator King," the Hybla Valley site has not been considered by our commission. But as chairman of the commission, in the interests of getting the best possible site for the District airport, I will personally bring it to the attention of the other members and will ask Gen. Westover to make the study.

"It is an excellent idea to have the two fields together—American terminus of the Zeppelin transatlantic line and the airport serving the Nation's Capital.

"However, I feel that we should give serious consideration to making provision for hydroplanes as well as land planes, by affording both land and water facilities for landing.

"I feel also that we should not be in the least niggardly about adequate provision now. Just as soon as I can get members of the commission together, I will call a meeting. I will begin writing my report at the earliest possible date and will ask Gen. Westover to expedite his studies, so that when Congress meets in January I will be able to make recommendations with reliable cost estimates.

Lutherans to Hear U. S. Merger Plans

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 9. (AP)—Delegates of the United Lutheran Church—created by a merger of three separate groups in 1918—will hear at their biennial convention opening Wednesday a proposal to unite all Lutherans of the United States into one church.

Sponsors of the merger, first proposed two years ago at the Savannah, Ga., convention, said its approval would result in formation of a powerful Protestant church with a confirmed membership of more than 3,200,000.

The United Lutheran Church, with 1,066,000 confirmed members, now ranks behind only the Baptist and Methodist Episcopal Churches in Protestant strength. Its union with other Lutheran groups, leaders said, would form one of the world's most powerful Protestant bodies.

Rhodes Gets Delay In Fidelity Case

Entering a plea of not guilty, Fred B. Rhodes, former president of the closed Fidelity Building and Loan Association, yesterday sought, and obtained a five-day period of grace within which he will be permitted to withdraw the plea and formally attack two indictments charging him with 20 instances of larceny and 8 of forgery.

Represented by Attorney Eugene Sullivan, Rhodes, for many years one of the leading members of the District bar, appeared unaffected by the charges when he appeared before Justice Peyton Gordon in District Court, a court before which he has appeared in scores of cases as an attorney.

Larcencies charged to Rhodes total about $43,000 and the forgeries are of a negligible amount, Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson, who handled the case before the District grand jury, said.

The five days' grace given Rhodes are customary in all District Court cases.

By the Associated Press.

While coming too late to benefit many of this year's crops, rains in September increased the prospective potato crop by 10,000,000 bushels and the corn crop by 51,000,000 bushels.

The crop reporting board said yesterday that with partial or complete relief from the drought and better than usual growing conditions during the month, pastures "made one of the most remarkable recoveries on record for any one month."

Milk production increased from far below average on September 1 to the highest October 1 production since 1928, and prospects for winter wheat improved greatly.

The report indicated a corn crop of 1,509,362,000 bushels, compared with 2,291,629,000 bushels in 1935 and the 1928-32 average of 2,553,424,000 bushels.

Spring wheat production was estimated at 108,138,000 bushels, compared with 159,241,000 bushels produced in 1935 and the 1928-32 average of 241,312,000 bushels.

All wheat production, winter and spring combined, was indicated at 627,233,000 bushels, compared with 630,241,000 a month ago, 623,444,000 produced last year and an average of 863,564,000 between 1928 and 1932.

Estimates on the production of oats, rice, buckwheat, tobacco and grain sorghum increased slightly during the month, with rather substantial improvement in late onions and celery.

The board previously reported that favorable weather improved prospects for cotton in the Central and Eastern cotton-producing States.

Babcock's Group In First Meeting

Fingerprint filing clerks in the Federal Bureau of Investigation are underpaid, and a new classification law should be enacted to protect them and other Government employes in similar jobs, E. Claude Babcock, former president of the American Federation of Government Employes, told the first meeting of his new organization, the United Civil Service Employes, Thursday night.

Babcock, who spoke before a group of 30 at the Harrington Hotel, was careful to point out that he was taking no part in the controversy over the dismissal of eight Department of Justice employes, which led to the suspension of one A. F. G. E. lodge.

The jobs of the F. B. I. clerks call for a high technical knowledge, and they should not be known as file clerks, Babcock said.

"Thousands of others are in a similar condition," he said.

Babcock announced that James G. Yaden, president of the District Department of the A. F. G. E., has joined his organization in the capacity of civic relations director.

He asked that a "gentlemen's agreement" to prevent colored Government employes from joining the organization, not be discussed until the matter had been considered and voted upon.

Institute to Hear Rev. D. A. McGregor

The Rev. D. A. McGregor, executive of the Episcopal National Department of Religious Education, will address the annual convention of the Church Institute of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington Thursday at 8 p. m. on "The Task of the Church School Teacher."

His talk will be preceded by a panel discussion led by him at 5:15 p. m. and by supper an hour and a half later. The panel discussion is a new feature of the convention. Its purpose is to help teachers solve their problems through discussion by all members of the meeting with a leader and a selected group of experienced church school workers.

The following problems will be discussed: The principal problem in religious education; the problem of convincing children whose parents are indifferent, that religion is a vital factor in life; how modern educational methods may be adapted for use in church schools by teachers untrained in these methods, and the choice of materials to be taught.

U. S. Aids to Fight Robinson Appeal

Justice Department officials Thursday conferred with Bunk Gardner United States district attorney from Louisville, in preparing to oppose a legal move in the Kentucky city which, if successful, would win a new trial for Thomas H. Robinson, jr., convicted kidnaper of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll.

They drafted an answer to a motion filed Tuesday in Federal district court at Louisville by Attorney Clem W. Higgins, asking for the new trial on the grounds Robinson is insane.

"We can't disclose our arguments in advance," Brian McMahon, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the criminal division, asserted, "but of course the Government will oppose this motion."

Ritter Set to Appeal Ouster From Judgeship

Challenging validity of his removal from the southern Florida Federal District bench, Halsted L. Ritter, of Miami, Thursday prepared to ask the Court of Claims, in effect, to ignore an impeachment judgment of the Senate.

The court will hear arguments today in what Government attorneys said was the first suit in history attacking the constitutionality of a Senate impeachment proceeding.

Ritter was ousted from the judgeship April 17, when two-thirds of the Senate found him guilty of conduct tending "to bring his court into scandal and disrepute."

Killer Suspect Jumps in Path Of Fast Train

Man Accused of Beating Wife to Death Ends Own Life on Tracks.

By the Associated Press.

Fincastle, Va., Oct. 9.—Wilmer Dooley, 40, sought on a charge of beating his wife to death, was killed near here today, authorities said, after he jumped, in front of a speeding Norfolk and Western passenger train. Coroner W. H. Breckenridge returned a verdict of suicide.

Trainmen said Dooley ran from underbrush and jumped on the tracks a few yards in front of the engine. The train was traveling about 50 miles an hour.

Mrs. Sallie Dooley, about 35, was beaten to death in the yard of her home two miles north of Cloverdale yesterday afternoon. Coroner Breckenridge said his verdict was the woman was slain with a plank "wielded by Wilmer Dooley."

Deputy Sheriff E. C. Williamson and other officers said two small Dooley children told them their mother was beaten in the yard after Dooley ordered them indoors. Officer Williamson brought to the jail last night a board and a broken table leg picked up at the scene. Both were bloodstained.

The couple had been married about six months. Both had formerly been married and Mrs. Dooley leaves five small children by her first marriage. Dooley has two children by his former marriage.

WPA Is Blamed Again for Labor Shortage in U.S.

Hopkins Denies Contractors' Charge, Urges Listeners to View Projects.

By Robert C. Albright.

Reiterated charges of a "WPA-created labor shortage" were made last night by the Associated General Contractors of America, following a speech by Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Houkins, in which he ridiculed claims WPA is keeping workers from returning to private employment.

Associated General Contractors, mouthpiece for the private construction industry, released evidence it said it submitted to the WPA Labor Policy Board, alleging restrictive WPA regulations and claiming "that WPA officials in some instances have refused to permit their better men to go on contract jobs, for the stated reason that they are no going to hamper or disrupt their own organization."

Hopkins in his speech referred to earlier charges by E. J. Harding, of the Associated General Contractors.

"He is the same Mr. Harding who made the same general charge three months ago, and when we asked him to give specific instances in support of the charge, he apparently had none," Hopkins said. "At least he never replied.

"But above and beyond all reference to individuals, I ask you to judge in the realm of your own common sense whether the average American, particularly one with a family, is going to cling to a part-time Government job that pays him $40 or $50 a month when he has a chance to get decent private employment on a full-time basis."

Cites Skilled Labor.

In a statement issued from Denver, Colo., Harding, managing director of the Contractors National Association, replied last night that the building labor shortage he referred to was in "skilled labor" and $40 to $50 a month jobs mentioned by Hopkins were not in that class.

"We are speaking of skilled labor employed by WPA at wages from $70 to $95 a month," Harding said.

"In an original manuscript from Mr. Hopkins' office, which we have in our files, it is definitely asserted that WPA is employing 231,228 skilled workers and foremen on construction. In the face of this, we challenge Mr. Hopkins again to deny that there is an artificial shortage of skilled workmen in our industry."

Harding said his organization had given the WPA board "sufficient information for WPA to make an investigation that contractors desired to hire persons known to be working for WPA, but who were refusing work with private contractors for full time work at prevailing wages."

Hard Urges Inquiry.

Meanwhile, William Hard, whose affidavits broadcast under the auspices of the Republican National Committee charging WPA political activity were attacked again by Hopkins, challenged the WPA administrator "to appoint an inquiry board of his own to go into Pennsylvania and find out the truth."

Hard in last night's radio broadcast made one condition—that an equal number of representatives of the Republican Party of Pennsylvania be appointed, and that there be public announcement that no WPA worker will lose his job because of any testimony before the board.

Hopkins said in his speech that "we have refuted by affidavit dozens of wild charges by William Hard and his crowd, but the parade of scarecrows goes on."

Associated General Contractors sai dlast night it had received communications from 25 cities substantiating its statement that contractors are "having difficulty in obtaining workers because of WPA." It listed the cities, which it said it has never circularized on the subject.

Submitted to Board.

This information, the organization said, has been submitted to the Labor Policy Board. The statement to the board read, in part:

"Contractors having contracts in which Federal funds are in some manner involved are experiencing the greatest difficulty because of the many regulations relating to the securing of labor, which are attached as a part of their contracts, such as a 30-hour week, 130-hour month, the obtaining of 90 per cent of the employes from the relief rolls, man-hour specifications requiring the furnishing of a specified number of man-hours to labor obtained from the relief rolls, etc.

"These communications set forth that a great percentage of the workers assigned are unwilling to accept employment because of self-assigned physical disabilities, that the location of the work is inconvenient, that they cannot work above ground, and in one instance, the wife of an assigned worker appeared and argued vociferously that they were getting along well on WPA and she did not want her husband taken off this kind of work.

"Others that are assigned are totally inexperienced for the classification under which they are assigned. Even on union jobs, we have reports where the unions are assigning persons without training in the classification required—this, in spite of the fact that it is well known that there are competent persons working on WPA projects."

Cites Fortune Poll.

Hopkins at the outset of his speech cited the Fortune Nation-wide poll of public opinion, which he said showed "that the American people definitely believe, on the whole, that the WPA projects in their own communities have been efficiently run, and that the unemployed on those projects have been pretty well treated." He said this poll was "a great comfort to me."

Hopkins devoted much of his speech to answering what he called the "anvil chorus" of WPA criticism and "the vicious parade of bad jokes about shovel learners and malcontents."

Charges of boondoggling and waste, he said, reminded him of "the old story of the bandits in South America."

"They are never in the town which you are visiting," he said. "They are always just over the hill, out of sight, but the townspeople can tell you some very interesting stories about them. You may go over the hill, but you will not find them."

He said he resented "the bitter injustice * * * heaped on the heads of millions of Americans."

"The boys had better get in all their jokes about WPA workers quick," he said. "You can't laugh off 130,000 miles of farm roads. There's nothing convulsing about 6,200 schools and 5,700 parks and 550 airports. There's hardly a giggle in all 7,000 water and sewer systems. But there is health and happiness and national wealth."

He closed with what he called a "sporting proposition."

"Judge WPA just as critically as you please," he said, "but judge it on the basis of your own WPA projects, that you can see with your own eyes. Go and see the improvements in your community. We will rest our case on what you find."

Text of Roosevelt Talk

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 9.—The following address of the President was delivered at the State Capitol here tonight:

As you know I had planned to visit Minnesota on my trip of inspection to the drought areas the end of August. The untimely death of the Secretary of War kept me away. It was at that time also that this State suffered a very great loss in the passing of a virile and magnetic American leader, Floyd Olson. He had been my friend for many years. I miss him greatly today.

Much water has run over the dam since Floyd Olson presided at the great gathering to which I spoke in the spring of 1932. During these more than four years one of our most important national achievements has been the strides we have made everywhere in thinking in national terms. Never before has America been so united. We have come to the understanding that the agricultural prosperity of the Northwest is directly affected by the agricultural prosperity of the rest of the country. Georgia will buy Minnesota flour if Georgia gets a decent price for its cotton. Minnesota will buy overalls made of Georgia cotton if Minnesota gets a decent price for its wheat.

People in the manufacturing cities will find more employment at better wages if the farm families of the Nation have the wherewithal to purchase manufactured goods and the farmers of the Nation will sell larger crops at better prices if the industrial workers in the cities have more money to buy dairy products, vegetables, fruit, pork and beef.

Recognize Co-operative Ideal.

In our local and sectional relations between the various farm regions and between city and country, we have in these four years come to recognize the closeness of the interdependence and the usefulness of the co-operative ideal.

Minnesota is a good place to talk about farm co-operatives. Here dairy and livestock farmers have pioneered and pointed the way. Here and in Wisconsin have been built the greatest co-operative organizations in the Nation for processing and marketing dairy products.

When in 1933 this Administration undertook to meet the desperate and long-neglected needs of agriculture we turned to the co-operative idea and called to Washington representatives of the great co-operatives and other farm organizations to work out a program with us.

The triple A itself has as its foundation and its essence the co-operative idea. Administered locally by community committees selected by the farmers themselves, it was a picture of economic democracy in action.

I pay my tribute with the rest of the Nation to the patriotic zeal of the committees of farmers who did so much through their earnest co-operation for our adjustment and conservation program. The farmers of America will not forget what they have done and what they are doing.

Will Continue Support.

This Administration from the very start came to the support of the co-operative ideal by vigorous action; that support has continued. That support will continue. It established a control bank for co-operatives with 12 regional banks to aid in marketing and purchasing.

It held out the helping hand on credit to production credit associations to enable farmers to finance production through their own banks.

The triple A has worked directly with the co-operatives in their marketing agreement program. By loans to co-operatives we have helped to bring the comforts of electricity to many farms of the Nation.

We did not stop at merely lending money. When farm prices were threatened, the Administration held them up by purchasing surplus products through farm co-operatives for distribution to hundreds of thousands of families faced with hunger in our great cities.

Nevertheless while the Government can help through its resources, we in Washington have recognized that co-operation and co-operatives must come from the people themselves. Government can see to it that the rules of the game are fair as between co-operative enterprise and other enterprise. But the initiative, the management itself, must spring from and carry on from the bottom up, rather than from the top down.

This Administration is determined to continue in active support of the ever-growing farm co-operative movement.

I am happy in the strengthening of this movement at home. But let us remember that the same spirit of co-operation is an essential part of our relations with the other nations of the world. It is this realistic appreciation of the benefits of co-operation that lies behind our efforts to re-establish foreign markets for our farm products.

In the spring of 1933 our foreign trade had fallen off to about one-third of its former value. That was what I inherited.

The very word "trade" means articles of commerec flowing in two directions. It is not a one-way street. At least we understand this in our domestic trade. No single State can produce either crops or merchandise and continue indefinitely to sell them to other States for money alone. Eventually they have to be paid for in other products.

Foreign trade is just like that. There cannot be a revival of foreign exports without a revival of foreign imports, unless, of course, we do as we did between 1920 and 1930 and lend our money to foreign nations to enable them to buy our own farm and industrial products.

But America has learned her lesson once and for all about that kind of frenzied finance.

The Secretary of State of the United States has spoken in Minnesota clearly and unequivocally in regard to the trade agreements that have been made with 14 foreign countries for mutual trade advantage. He pointed out to you the chapter and voice of the statistical record which shows what these agreements have accomplished to increase the trade and income not only of the industrial workers but of the farmers of the Nation. It was not a question of winning or losing any treaty. Mutual advantage has been the successful objective and our exports during the first half of this year as compared with last year have increased by $132,000,000.

Exports to Canada.

To Canada, our neighbor on the north, the $24,000,000 of our increased exports during the first six months have included not only exports of manufactured articles but also agricultural exports. American industry and American agriculture are both benefitting by increased general trade. The figures prove it and our growing consumption and better farm prices prove it.

Every American city dweller and farmer alike ought to fasten this home truth in his memory. When the nations of the world, including America, had jacked their tariffs to the highest point and enacted embargoes and imposed quotas, farm prices throughout the world were at their lowest and world trade had almost ceased to exist.

Today under the leadership of the United States other nations of the world are coming to recognize that home truth. Back in 1932, although there was a tariff on wheat of 42 cents a bushel, you all know that the wheat which you produced up here in the Northwest was selling as low as 30 cents per bushel. There were no farm imports then to worry about, but low prices were plenty to worry about.

Within the past two weeks splendid progress has been made on giving a greater stability to foreign exchange. Within that same time there have been lifted many quotas and embargoes, including those on important American agricultural export products.

Leads to Peace.

But, my friends, the increasing restoration of trade, of industry and of employment serve more than a mere economic end. For three years we have had faith that it would turn us and other nations away from the paths of economic strife which lead to war and toward economic co-operations, which leads to international peace.

Peace cannot be attained merely by getting sentimental about it. Peace depends upon the acceptance of the principle and practice of the good neighbor. That practice is founded on the golden rule and must be fortified by co-operation of every kind between nations. Peace makes money; peace saves money for everybody. A prosperous world has no permanent room in it for dictatorship or for war. In striving for peace, I am confident that the American people seek it with their hearts and with their heads as well. Enlightened self-interest is justification for what we do.

Confident in the practical wisdom of the ends we seek, with full faith that it will serve in a practical way for peace on earth and good will between men and nations, we shall continue on our way.

Lemke a Stooge For Coughlin, Ickes Declares

'Common Objective' Between Priest, Republicans Noted by Speaker.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 9.—Saying there is "friendly cooperation" between the Republicans and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Secretary Ickes told the Good Neighbor Conference tonight that "Lemke is only a Father Coughlin-Landon stooge."

He referred to Representative William Lemke, Presidential candidate of the Union Party, being supported by Father Coughlin.

Ickes named William Hard, radio commentator for the Republican National Committee, as a "liaison officer" between the Republicans, Father Coughlin and the Lemke forces. He quoted from a letter he said Hard had written Gardner Jackson, former Washington correspondent, asking the latter whether he would do some writing for a new magazine published by the Detroit priest.

Praises His Rejection.

The concluding quotation was: "The magazine begins coming out in March. It may have a lot of influence on the politics of this year."

"In other words," Ickes commented, "since Father Coughlin through his magazine would be waging his intemperate fight against President Roosevelt, the Republican candidate for President would be benefited. To the credit of Mr. Jackson, let it be said that he rejected Mr. Hard's offer on behalf of Father Coughlin because he could not in good conscience support the Fascist ideals of that gentleman."

Ickes said he was not charging Father Coughlin with "selling out" to the Republicans, but "that there is a community of interest, a common objective" between them.

"It is conceived to be the better strategy on the part of the vituperative Father Coughlin to pretend to be for Lemke," Ickes said.

He added he had been informed that the Republican National Committee spent about $1,000 to decorate the Des Moines coliseum in which Father Coughlin spoke September 19.

Notes Smith's Defection.

"Just for a handful of silver he left us.

He argued that the New Deal served the masses against what he called "this array of pomp and powder" addressed by Smith in New York last week.

"The very fact that Landon and (Col. Frank) Knox and Smith are so violent in denouncing th raising of a so-called class issue," he said, "tends to prove that they and the small but privileged group whom they represent and whose interests they serve have no intention of remedying conditions."

Uses Football Simile.

Using a football simile, he said: "In the backfield we see Gov. Landon, light and inexperienced, but withal a clever dodger, who is hard to pin down; Herbert Hoover, back on the gridiron after an enforced stay on the bench for four years; Father Coughlin, the great triple threat, who does the kicking for the team, and Al Smith, one-time 'All-American,' now turned professional. The ends are Frank Knox and John Hamilton.

"From tackle to tackle crouch the well-known Du Pont brothers—Pierre, Lammot, A. Felix, Irenee and Henry. William Randolph Hearst, as coach, through a megaphone, calls signals from the sidelines. The string of substitutes contains come notable naes—Mellon, Mills, Rockefeller, Pew, Aldrich, Grundy, Pinchot, Lemke, as well as an assortment of Liberty Leaguers of high and low degree. The Republican voice of the air, William Hard, occupies the dual role of water boy and jeer leader.

Retail Sales Gain 31% Over Virginia

By the Associated Press.

The Bureau of the Census reported yesterday a 31 per cent increase in retail sales in Virginia in 1935 over 1933.

William L. Austin, bureau director, said 1935 sales totaled $470,613,000 in 26,724 stores, compared with $358,102,000 in 26,451 stores in 1933.

He reported the average number of employes increased from 51,975 in 1933 to 57,990 in 1935, or 12 per cent. The total pay roll increased 21 per cent, from $40,065,000 in 1933 to $48,439,000 in 1935.

Television Shows Autos.

London, Oct. 9 (AP).—Television enthusiasts got a preview today of the new automobile models which will be unveiled when the auto show opens next week.

In a special demonstration of television, the new cars were driven one by one in front of the "electric eye," while experts gave "lookers-in" a sight and sound description.

Jacques Davidson Weds Miss Lebherz

Jacques Davidson, son of Jo Davidson, the sculptor, was married in a surprise ceremony Monday to Miss Adele M. Lebherz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Lebherz, of Frederick, Md. The couple originally had planned to be married in December.

The ceremony took place at St. Matthew's Church, the Rev. Edward H. Roach officiating. Miss Harriet Lebherz was her sister's maid of honor, and Mr. Joseph Baugh, of Washington, was best man.

Mr. Davidson, whose father now lives in France, does photographic work for the Works Progress Administration. He and his bride are in North Carolina on their honeymoon and after their return will live in Washington.

Alleged Robber Seized By DeputyAwaiting Him

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 9.—When George Nokes, colored, 21, of Loudoun County, planned to rob the home of Mrs. Elizabeth George and her brother, G. A. Ropp, near Lovettsville, last night, he did not expect to be greeted by an officer, but that is what happened. Nokes, employed on the farm of Mrs. George, confided his plans to another person, who in turn told Deputy Sheriff L. T. McKimmey.

The officer concealed himself in the George home and awaited the intruder, who entered through a window. Nokes was placed in the Loudoun County Jail on a housebreaking charge.

Stepfather Held In Boy's Chaining

Findlay, Ohio, Oct. 9 (AP).—Undersized, 10-year-old Robert Feucht, his eyes red with fright, made his laborious way to school today, dragging a 15-foot log chain adlocked around his neck.

Police arrested the child's stepfather, William J. Leeth, 55, and Probate Judge Paul Capell jailed him for investigation. Leeth told the judge he chained Robert to the kitchen stove last night because the boy "ran away."

School officials said the child, who weighs only 60 pounds, trudged into his classroom with the 10½-pound chain wrapped around his waist, but that it fell, clanking, to the floor, making his progress difficult.

Judge Capell declared the boy was chained up because he went into the kitchen last night to obtain a piece of pumpkin pie which had been denied him at the family dinner.

He said Leeth gave Robert's sister a key to the padlock to liberate the boy only "if the teacher tries to get the chain off."

'Kramer' Is Urged As School Name

Washington's next junior or senior high school should be named for Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, former first assistant superintendent of schools, the Wheatley School P.-T. A. declared in a resolution forwarded Thursday to the board of education.

Dr. Kramer died last June after serving the public schools here for nearly 50 years. At the time of his death he was assistant superintendent in charge of all junior and senior high schools.

The Parent-Teacher Association, at its meeting Wednesday night, also indorsed Miss Esther Scott, head of the science department in elementary schools, for appointment as head of the same department in high schools. The board, however, at a meeting earlier in the day had already filled the position, giving it to Dr. George M. Rawlins, jr., an instructor at Wilson Teachers' College.

Landon Pledges Budget Balance Within 4 Years

four years to do it. With a reduction in Government expenditures, I am convinced there will be such a rebirth of confidence that we will have a real recovery—the kind of recovery that means re-employment. That, in turn, will not only reduce expenditures further, but will expand Government income.

"If the family incomes of this country are to be relieved of this intolerable burden—if the specter of inflation and bankruptcy is to be set at rest, a change of Administration is absolutely imperative."

The nominee said "the ordinary routine expenses of the Federal Government" had increased 36 per cent under the New Deal after "the Democratic candidate of 1932 pledged to cut not less than 25 per cent."

"An Administration that boasts of that record does not deserve another chance," he said.

In the name of emergency, Landon continued, the Roosevelt Administration "has created no less than 75 new bureaus, agencies and what-nots." He termed these "conflicting bureaus" and questioned the necessity of "hundreds upon hundreds of press and publicity agents * * * just plain barkers carrying on party propaganda at the expense of the taxpayer."

Despite substantial recovery, Landon asserted, "so-called" relief expenditures this year are at the rate of $3,500,000,000 annually "or $1,500,000,000 more than in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1934."

Says Pledge Unredeemed.

"And still, in spite of all this spending," he said, "the Administration has not redeemed its pledge to give every man on relief a job. Now obviously there is something wrong here. Everybody knows what it is. A lot of the money spent in the name of relief has nothing to do with relief. And a lot of money has been wasted."

Referring to Mr. Roosevelt's 1932 campaign speech at Pittsburgh, Landon quoted his opponent as saying that business stability depends upon government financial stability, that a nation continuing to pile up deficits is on the road to bankruptcy and that taxes are "paid in the sweat of every man who labors."

"Now let us turn to the record," the Governor said. "Let us see if Federal spending was reduced, if taxes were lowered; if deficits were stopped. * * *

"Four years ago the Federal Government spent just over $5,000,000,000. Last year it spent just under $9,000,000,000.

Sees "Enormous Increase."

"Four years ago the gross Federal debt was $21,000,000,000. Today it is $34,000,000,000." * * * Instead of a decrease we have had an enormous increase all along the line—an increase in spending, an increase in taxes, and increase in debt—all of which, as every housewife knows only too well, have increased the cost of living. * * *

"Under this Administration, 14 bills increasing the tax burden have been jammed through Congress. * * * The way expenditures are running today, Jesse Owens himself could not overtake them. * * *

"In the three and one-third years ended June 30, last, the Federal Government spent more than $25,000,000,000. This was more than all of the Presidents of the United States from George Washington to Woodrow Wilson spent in 124 years."

Landon said President Roosevelt's Pittsburgh statement a week ago, asking whether it was not "common sense" to "balance the budget of the American people" before balancin gthe Government budget, was a "mighty melodious phrase."

"But," he continued, "with 11,000,000 unemployed, with almost 20,000,000 people on the relief rolls, with the banks stuffed with Government bonds, with the Government spending double its income—this does not make common sense."

The Governor's stadium speech was delivered after he had spent more than nine hours in Chicago and shortly before his special train was scheduled to leave for Cincinnati, where a breakfast conference was to open his Ohio campaign. Tomorrow afternoon, Landon planned to attend the Ohio State-Pittsburgh football game at Columbus, spending the night and Sunday in that city.

Life Terms Allotted 7 in Black Legion

Detroit, Oct. 9 (AP).—Seven nightriders of the Black Legion received life terms in prison for murder today after "Colonel" Harvey Davis charged Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea was a member of the secret order and that one of the trial jurors perjured himself.

McCrea said the charge was a lie and Circuit Judge Joseph A. Moynihan proceeded with sentencing the men convicted of the roadside "execution" of Charles A. Poole last May 12.

"I'm not guilty of this crime," Davis told the judge. "I don't think I had a fair trial. Mr. McCrea here, the prosecutor who prosecuted this case, belongs to the Black Legion. It was a perjured trial."

McCrea laughed at Davis' accusations against him and said that was "an old charge." Once before when such a report circulated, the prosecutor said that when running for office he was a "joiner" and may have signed a membership application unknowingly.

Rev. Albert Shirkey Completes 1st Year

The Rev. Albert P. Shirkey, completing tomorrow his first year as pastor of Francis Asbury M. E. Church South, announced yesterday that 154 new members have been added to the church membership since last October.

This is a membership increase of 25 per cent, the pastor told the Baltimore conference now in session at Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South.

The report also showed that the church had made all of its conference collections, had paid off $1,000 on the church debt, and met all of its curernt bills. The financial report, was declared by the church treasurer, the best the church had made in the last 15 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt to Attend Unveiling of Jusserand Shaft

Long-Time Ambassador of France to United States Will Be Honored With Memorial to Be Disclosed to Public in Park November 7.

One of the first functions the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will attend after election will be the ceremony to dedicate and unveil the memorial to the late Jean Jules Jusserand, it was revealed at Mrs. Roosevelt's first press conference this fall.

Commenting on the suitability of the memorial being placed in Rock Creek Park, "where the Jusserands used to like to walk," Mrs. Roosevelt said she remembered vividly that "the little Frenchman used to walk there often with my Uncle Teddy. You know he came from the mountainous part of France," she continued, "and as a young man spent considerable time in Scotland, where he took many walking trips through the country. He also enjoyed sailing in a small boat across to nearby islands where he could find more paths on which to walk."

The President will deliver the principal speech at the unveiling ceremony, which will be held the afternoon of November 7.

To be dedicated to the memory of Mr. Jusserand by the United States, the memorial is in a rustic terrain in the bend of Rock Creek, near the picturesque Pierce Mill, at the point where President Theodore Roosevelt and Mr. Jusserand frequently met for a game of tennis or to discuss, in the course of their intimate conversations, affairs of state.

The memorial is a terrace of rose-colored granite, approximately 20 feet square, the center panel being designed with squares of heavy blue stone. The entrance to the terrace is reached by five solid granite steps that lead up to the rose-colored facade. Oval in shape, the main memorial is cut out of a solid block of granite.

A special act of Congress was required to provide authorization for the memorial, which is the first to a foreign ambassador located in Washington on grounds belonging to the Federal Government. W. Francklyn Paris, president chairman of the Jusserand memorial committee, was behind the negotiations.

The Congressional committee to which the matter was referred originally was urged to support the legislation on the grounds that "Jean Jules Jusserand served in the United States longer than any other ambassador of any country in all our history" and because "he won the friendship of every American acquaintance and commanded the respect and admiration of our leaders of thought in the academic world."

Paris conceived the project and collected the funds. He was assisted by members of the Jusserand Memorial Committee, which includes Edward Tuck, William Nelson Cromwell, William T. Dewart, John H. Finley and Thomas J. Watson, commissioner general to the Paris Exposition.

Roosevelt Loss Means U.S. Rift, Cox Declares

By the Associated Press.

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 9.—Former Gov. James M. Cox, of Ohio, the Democratic Party's standard bearer in 1920, tonight declared "we would have a leaderless Government" if President Roosevelt was defeated for re-election.

"The Republican Party and candidate, attacking President Roosevelt for his leadership, commit themselves to a President who will make no effort to lead, but will make his recommendations and stop with that," Cox said in a speech prepared for delivery at a Democratic rally, and broadcast over a national network.

Ohio's former chief executive also described William Randolph Hearst, publisher, as the "trumpeter of terror."

It was the former Presidential candidate's first 1936 campaign address on behalf of Mr. Roosevelt, who ran for Vice President with Cox 16 years ago. The Dayton newspaper publisher did not mention by name Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, Republican Presidential candidate.

Warns of Discontent.

"The Republican candidate would turn social security over to the States," Cox declared, a move he described as "a favorite tory barrier to all progress." Other results of a Republican victory, Cox said, would be "mass discontent," a government "divided against itself," and unsound tariff policies.

A fair campaign, Cox said at the outset of his address, would answer "the oft-recurring question: Can a democratic form of government suffice in times of emergency?"

"This campaign," he continued, "would have taken on more of this clarifying aspect if the opposition had come into it with a program, rather than a scare.

"The platform prelude: 'America is in peril'"—words more properly spoken to timid children in the dark—with Mr. Hearst in the van as the trumpeter of terror, does not impress. It voices a reversal of the honored traditions of the party of McKinley."

"What Are Alternatives?"

"After all," Cox said, 'the question is not whether one indorses the new order in every detail, but what are the alternatives? What in all probability would come from Mr. Roosevelt's defeat? * * *

"First and foremost—Mass discontent.

"Second—With a Republican President and a Democratic Senate (which cannot be reversed by this election) we would have a government divided against itself in emergency times.

"Third—We would be committing ourselves to tariff policies pregnant with the germs of new depressions. They almost destroyed us before. * * *

Called "Tory Barrier."

"Fourth—The Republican candidate would turn social security over to the States. This is a favorite Tory barrier to all progress. The assessment on industry for social security must be national and uniform. Otherwise we would have unfair competition among the States. * * *

"Fifth—We would have a leaderless Government. * * *

"Sixth—We would be substituting an inexperienced for a highly skilled and successful hand at the controls of our foreign policy. * * * He (Roosevelt) has rebuilt our prestige in the South and Central American States. His diplomacy * * * has enriched the traditions of the Republic."

Boy Who Escaped Sentence Arrested

A 15-year-old boy, who recently escaped a six-year sentence in the National Training School for "playing hooky" from school while he already was under a probation on a charge of illegal entry, was held at the Receiving Home with two other boys Thursday night for riding in what police said was a stolen automobile.

The lad, with two other 15-year-old boys, of Capitol Heights, Md., was arrested by Motorcycle Policeman W. R. Greenfield, Eleventh Precinct. Police said the car the youths were riding was reported stolen from Capitol Heights.

Jury Charges Assault To Rep. Marcantonio

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—Representative Vito Marcantonio, Republican, of New York, was indicted by the New York county grand jury today on a charge of assault in the second degree on complaint of a Democratic registration watcher.

The complainant, Solomon Silber, charged Marcantonio incited three men, also indicted, to attack him Wednesday night after he had objected to non-residents who had attempted to register.

The names of the three others indicted were not disclosed.

Clews in Death Of Model Found In Her Cottage

Boston Police Now Fear War Veteran Is Dead in 'Legs' Mystery.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Oct. 9.—Bits of flesh retrieved from the drainage system in pretty Grayce Asquith's Weymouth summer cottage spurred police tonight in their search for the remainder of her body and the man who slew her.

Two burlap-encased legs which police identified as those of the 40-year-old photographer's model floated ashore in Boston Harbor Monday.

Tonight the grounds about the summer place she maintained in the nearby South Shore town of Weymouth were alive with police armed with picks and shovels.

In adjacent Quincy, ace inspectors of city and State police questioned Oscar Battalini, 50-year-old chef and odd-jobs man, who earlier told police he had last seen Mrs. Asquith on September 19.

Battalini, who insisted throughout the day he never again saw either the pretty widow or her other companion, John A. Lyons, missing 38-year-old disabled World War veteran, was detained for questioning after police found Mrs. Asquith's cottage in blood-bespattered disarray yesterday.

Veteran Feared Slain.

All attempts to locate Lyons have failed and Police Inspector Joseph Fallon of the homicide squad expressed the fear today that he, too, may have been slain.

Shortly before Boston Police Chemist Frank Stratton pronounced bits of flesh found in Mrs. Asquith's plumbing to be those of a human body, Assistant District Attorney George Arbuckle, of Norfolk County, announced his conviction that the woman's body had been hacked to pieces in her own bath tub.

He advanced the theory she had been slain in one of the bedrooms of her cottage.

State Detective Capt. John F. Stokes declared that, if necessary, his men were prepared to drain a large pond near the Asquith cottage.

Chemists Study Crime.

Other police experts expressed the belief, however, that Mrs. Asquith's head and torso would be found in Boston Harbor.

While Boston detectives fruitlessly ran down what seemed at first to be several promising clews, analytical chemists strove to determine whether a meat cleaver and a saw found in the cottage bore any trace of human blood.

They said these were "too clean" when found and seemingly had been wiped carefully.

Miss Ruth Lyons, sister of the missing John Lyons, reported she last saw her brother September 18 at his lodging house on St. Botolph street, Boston.

Miss Lyons said a woman whom she knew only as Mrs. Stanley, a housekeeper at the St. Botolph street house, told her Lyons drove off with Battalini to visit some friends in Weymouth.

The total has already exceeded the aggregate for the entire previous registration year.

Miniature Cyclone Strikes Richmond

Richmond, Oct. 9 (AP).—A miniature cyclone roared over a 500-yard course on the southern outskirts of Richmond late today and left wrecked porches, shattered windows and uprooted trees and telegraph poles in its mark. The twister struck without warning from a southeasterly direction and littered streets with debris.

O. L. Landrum, huckster, said the freakish wind lifted a stalk of bananas from his truck and rained them over the countryside. The front porch of his home was demolished. Landrum said the wind picked the staples from a lock on his garage the "same as you would do it with a lever."

A neighbor's ice box, filled during the day with ice, was carried off a back porch into the yard. The front porch of one home was whirled over the top of the house and left splintered in the backyard.

No injuries were reported and damage was limited to a narrow path.

Coercion Laid To Democrats In Tugwell City

ing made of the "coercion" affidavits throughout the State.

In Cincinnati, Charles H. Elston, Republican campaign committee chairman, charged Col. Moulding supervised organization of workers into the Democratic club.

"He promised better jobs to those who attended and threatened to remove from the Federal pay roll all those workers who refused to be active in behalf of the re-election of Franklin D. Roosevelt," said Elston.

He said Moulding requested a contribution of $1 each as a membership fee in the club, and warned that failure to make it would place workers under "suspicion." Elston declared Moulding attended the Knox rally for the "purpose of spying on workers who might be present," and later remarked, "Of course, the ax will have to fall on them." Workers on the Green Hills project, he said, were "ordered" to attend a meeting of the Democratic club.

Affidavits were offered by Elston, signed by Benjamin H. Ellington and Harry S. Johnston, who said they attended the meeting, in substantiation of his charges. They said John W. Barrett, Democratic committeemen, also was present.

Both Moulding and Barrett denied the charges.

"There is no such thing going on here," said Moulding. "There was no pressure, no solicitation. Those things aren't allowed, to begin with. I introduced Barrett and then I withdrew immediately."

In announcing Moulding's suspension, a Resettlement Administration spokesman here said an RA investigator already was on the scene, and would inquire first whether any of the alleged political activity took place on the project.

He declared politics was barred on all of the Tugwell projects, but if the Green Hill charges were found to be true, Moulding, now suspended, would be summarily dismissed, and the case turned over to the Department of Justice.

Overdue Deflation.

It is probable that the withering criticism which Mgr. John A. Ryan of Catholic University has turned on the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin will accelerate the obviously downward trend in the latter's political influence. Coughlin has been previously challenged and rebuked by ecclesiastical authorities of his own faith. But never before has his bombast been so thoroughly deflated in public by another Catholic priest.

Archbishop McNicholas of Cincinnati administered a well-deserved rebuke to the radio priest a fortnight ago, after he had advocated the "use of bullets" in circumstances apparently subject to his own definition. The archbishop's statement clearly revealed the deep anxiety of many responsible authorities of the Catholic Church with regard to Coughlin's tactics. But it has remained for Father Ryan to carry an unpleasant but imperative job further toward completion.

Father Ryan's excoriation of the radio priest would have been more effective if he had not spoken in a political broadcast. Yet there is ample justification for this form of retort to the partisan orgies in which Coughlin has indulged under the cloak of his priesthood. As Father Ryan pointed out, he took up the cudgels against Coughlinism because he "loves truth and hates lies."

In his denunciation of Coughlin's monetary theories the distinguished professor of moral theology and industrial ethics could have made his statements even more sweeping. Where does Father Ryan discover as much as 10 per cent of truth in the economic bilge which the radio priest pumps out over the airways? It is especially significant that Father Ryan found the radio priest's monetary twaddle inconsistent with the encyclicals of Pope Leo XIII and Pope Pius XI. That completes the exposure of Coughlin as an upstart who distorts the views of the Holy See and bears "false witness" against his neighbor for purposes best known to himself.

The People's Counsel.

People's Counsel Roberts has asked the District to choose between two unpleasant alternatives. Either he should be provided with "a small but adequate investigational staff of his own," Mr. Roberts declared in his annual report, "or else the office of people's counsel should be abolished." Yet he offers no convincing reason why either course should be taken.

To agree with Mr. Robert's contention would be equivalent to concluding that his activities as people's counsel have been a waste of the taxpayers' money. No one at all familiar with his aggressive and efficient championship of consumers' interests is likely to take that view. Consequently, it is strange that he should regard the abolition of the office as the only desirable alternative to expansion of its responsibilities.

Presumably Mr. Roberts' attitude is based upon the friction that has developed between himself and the Public Utilities Commission. He complains that the duties of people's counsel, actively performed, awaken antagonism and resentment on the part of the P. U. C. and its staff. But that is certainly no reason for abolishing the office. It was never anticipated that the P. U. C. and the people's counsel would indulge in a perpetual love feast.

Mr. Roberts' duty is to represent the interests of consumers much as private attorneys represent the interests of utilities before the commission. The function of the P. U. C. is to decide the resulting controversies in the public interest and in fairness to the utility operators. It is entirely natural, therefore, that differences between the people's counsel and the commission should arise. If they did not there would be reason to suspect that the former is negligent in his duty.

For practical purposes, then, discussion may be limited to whether or not the people's counsel should have a separate investigating staff. At present this official has access to all findings of the P. U. C. staff. Mr. Roberts has not challenged the integrity or efficiency of those investigators. So there appears to be no justification for setting up a rival investigating unit under the people's counsel.

Even if the Public Utilities Commission were not rendering good service (and there are many indications that it closely adheres to the public interest) the remedy would not be found in setting up another agency that would, in large part, duplicate its work. The office of people's counsel should be just what the name implies. No adequate case has yet been advanced for extending its activities beyond that function.

They Cancel Out.

Cordell Hull had ample reason to be annoyed by Gov. Landon's loose statements at Minneapolis on the subject of the reciprocal trade agreements. Very effectively, on Wednesday night, the Secretary of State shattered some of the arguments used by the G. O. P. candidate to exaggerate the effects of these commercial pacts. But Mr. Hull's denunciation of partisan critics, who make "our most vital economic problem" the subject of "confused, inaccurate and incoherent statements," came after he had himself fallen into errors of a very similar nature.

No hostility to the admirable aims of the reciprocal trade program is involved in applying necessary discounts to some of Secretary Hull's claims for it. His denunciation of the Smoot-Hawley tariff as a force which diminished our foreign markets was well-reasoned. But his conclusion that those markets are being "rebuilt under the trade agreements program" invites further analysis.

Mr. Landon erred by assuming that price declines coming after initiation of the Canadian agreement were therefore necessarily caused by the Canadian agreement. Exactly the same fallacy is involved in Mr. Hull's argument that an increase of exports after the conclusion of this and similar pacts can be attributed to the conclusion of these pacts.

Examination of governmental trade statistics yields small support for Mr. Hull's intimation that the reciprocal agreements program has been largely instrumental in breaking "the world economic log-jam." In the first five months of this year exports to Canada increased 13.1 per cent over the corresponding period of 1935. But exports to Great Britain during the same period increased 16.6 per cent without any reciprocal agreement. During most of this period a reciprocal agreement with Honduras was effective but exports to that country fell 9.5 per cent. Meantime they registered a gain of 64.4 per cent in British Honduras, where no agreement has been signed. Under the trade treaty with Sweden our exports increased 13 per cent, compared with a 19 per cent increase in Norway, without a treaty.

The largest increase in exports to treaty countries during the periods under comparison were: Haiti, 23 per cent, and Cuba, 18 per cent. But these must be compared with a 130 per cent increase in exports to Arabia; 46 per cent for Uruguay; 41 for Ecuador; 23 for Peru; 46 for Czechoslovakia; 98 for Albania; 62 for Yugoslavia and 47 for Rumania, with none of which were special trade agreements in operation.

Mr. Hull ran into an even greater difficulty when he tried to show that the farmer, "sold out" by the tariff act of 1930, is now back in the foreign market through the efforts of the present Administration. His case was based on the drastic fall in exports from 1929 to 1932 and the fact that "our agricultural exports have increased steadily since 1932." But he casually ignored the fact that in 1932 agricultural exports constituted 42 per cent of our outgoing foreign trade as compared with only 26 per cent during the first five months of this year. And during the last year, while various reciprocal agreements have been in effect, the farmer's relative share of the export market has undergone considerable shrinkage.

In this shift from agricultural to industrial exports both the restrictive program of the AAA and the drought have been factors adverse to and more potent than the trade agreements. The fact is that the trade agreements, being limited in scope, have exerted a relatively minor influence upon either our foreign trade or our domestic recovery, although Mr. Hull is quite right in claiming that their psychological effect in encouraging resumption of world commerce is constructive. The Republicans have grossly exaggerated the effects of the slight concessions made to other countries, and now the Democrats are just as recklessly overestimating the advantages the program has brought to this country.

Deserved Rebuke.

Senator Clark has sent a stinging telegram to Senator Nye denouncing the latter's unauthorized release of the Fokker affidavit, which the Senate Munitions Committee had by unanimous vote decided to lay aside as relating to a matter not warranting further investigation. Senator Nye's well-known friendliness toward the Administration will absolve him from any suspicion of instigating what Senator Clark calls "as cheap a political trick as has been seen in years." But there is an important issue involved in the incident which has nothing to do with the indiscretions of young Elliott Roosevelt, or their effect upon his father's political fortunes.

That issue centers in the way in which Senator Nye has abused his position as chairman of an important committee by reversing one of its decisions without first securing the consent of his colleagues. If this were to be taken as a precedent, any Congressional committee appointee with a grudge to serve would be in a position to do great damage to innocent persons by giving publicity to matter rejected as irrelevant or invalid by the committee as a whole.

Indeed Mr. Nye's action shows so casual an attitude toward the elementary obligations involved in committee procedure as to make his colleague's "amazement" at the incident seem a mild emotion.

"A Covenant With The People."

By an interesting coincidence former Gov. Smith's latest attack on the Roosevelt Administration, at Philadelphia on Thursday night, followed by only a few hours the decision of the Treasury Department to destroy its stocks of unused "potato stamps." There has been no need for them since this crop-restriction tax was invalidated as a result of the Supreme Court decision on AAA.

While Secretary Wallace never made any secret of his opposition to the defunct and unlamented potato-control act it was none the less an entirely natural and logical result of the entire AAA program, and was properly cited as such by Mr. Smith. Furthermore, if the AAA had not been declared unconstitutional, there can be little doubt that measures of an even greater degree of regimentation would have followed. Nor would the Secretary of Agriculture have been able to close the lid of this Pandora's box of troubles, any more than he was able to do in the case of the offensive potato legislation.

Memories are short and Al Smith does a service at this time by pointing out that it is to the Supreme Court alone that the Nation owes its present immunity from the flood of special-privilege legislation with which the country would have been inundated if the agricultural policy of the New Deal had not been blocked. And the lesson conveyed is the more timely because of the evidence he cites to show that the Democratic platform in 1932 gave no inkling, in its planks on agriculture, of the actual policy which was later inaugurated.

All government falls into two broad categories—that which is responsible and that which is irresponsible. This Nation was founded, and has so far endured, on the principle that responsible government is good and irresponsible government is bad. If asked to answer which of the two classes they favor American citizens would unquestionably by an enormous majority vote for the former.

The value in the Philadelphia speech of Al Smith lies in the way he reduced the election issue to just that simple question. For a party platform, whether in itself good, bad or indifferent, is one of the basic safeguards which democracy has established against irresponsible government. And when this safeguard is deliberately undermined by those in power the stigma of defection applies not to men who repudiate untrustworthy leadership, but more aptly to those who continue to acclaim it.

That is the more self-evident, as this former Presidential candidate of the Democratic Party pointed out, when the issue is desertion of a platform which called itself "a covenant with the people to be faithfully kept by the party when entrusted with power."

Because of Supreme Court action the logical results of AAA have been kept from developing, and do not now constitute a threat to American liberties. But no credit for that can possibly be claimed by the Administration. It can easily destroy "potato stamps" which are no longer needed. It cannot so easily eliminate the evidences of a wanton attitude toward its "covenant with the people."

Learning How To Travel.

The Innocent Abroad of the Victorian period became the Plutocrat of the Twenties. Whether gaping at the Venus de Milo or scattering travelers' checks across Europe, the Yankee tourist was welcomed with outstretched hand and tongue in cheek. While he was looked on as manna, his manners were nevertheless eyed askance. But both Mark Twain's and Booth Tarkington's portrayals are now out of date, according to an official of the Department of Commerce, who points out that those who go abroad these days are getting their money's worth.

Touring habits even on this side of the Atlantic have changed since the days of the Florida boom and the traditional sprees of the bigger butter-and-egg men. Tourist camps and trailers are evidence that we no longer travel with the sole purpose of putting money into circulation. The same tendency to economy is true of travelers abroad. Special low-price tours for those interested in studying particular phases of European life are replacing to a large extent the cross-continental night-club and art-gallery junkets. The American is learning how to travel with a more intelligent purpose, on a more restricted purse, than he had a few years ago.

The reverse of ostentation, he is learning, is not stinginess. Economy means a fully productive use of one's personal and financial resources, and it recognizes that extravagance is not synonymous with individual importance. The lesson has domestic as well as foreign implications.

A Kansas Lighthouse.

From the Hamilton (Kans.) Grit.

Next spring when our feathered friends, the birds, turn their bills Northward after a delightful winter spent in warmer climates, some few fortunate ones will find a welcome home at the Joe Anderson home in the south part of town. By accident a novel birdhouse was made on the front porch of Joe's residence. When his house was wired for electricity, it was equipped, as are many other homes, with a light on the front porch. The white globe on this particular porch has a fairly large hole near the top, and Joe says a family of wrens has occupied it for the last three summers. Joe says that a person doesn't have to have a fancy house, but just something plain to have a delightful bird family.

Legerdemain On The Debt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The proper way to determine the amount of debt incurred by the present Administration is to find the amount of bonds outstanding March 4, 1933, and from that deduct all the credits that have accrued since that time.

Official reports show that the bonds amounted to $14,000,000,000, while the amount of loans made that will be returned with interest is $6,000,000,000.

A couple of million men on relief have been working on valuable permanent improvements like hard surface roads, school houses and hundreds of other structures that were greatly needed. These have added about $2,000,000,000 to the total wealth of the country which should be deducted from the indebtedness. Then there is about $2,000,000,000 of free gold in the Treasury that could be used for paying debt.

The bonus bill was contracted in 1924 and was due in 1945, but was paid this year. It should not be considered the same as though it was a debt incurred for expenses during the present Administration. So far this has cost about $1,500,000,000.

After deducting these four credits of $11,500,000,000 from the total increase in outstanding bonds of $14,000,000,000, there is now a total net indebtedness of $3,500,000,000.

With that and the surplus from Government recenues above regular expenses we have kept from starvation about 10,000,000 persons for three years. I consider it a good investment. When the load of relief work disappears the present rate of taxation will pay that bill in four years.

Three Views Of Al's Speeches.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every time Al Smith opens his mouth, assert the lusty warriors of the new Deal front-line defense forces, it means more votes for Roosevelt. In this event their cue would seem to be silence, in order that Al be not tipped off or discouraged from delivery of the two remaining oratorical samples on his schedule—with more votes for Roosevelt.

Now, this mixture of vociferous indifference and blistering irony manifested by the high command toward Al's declaration speech, increasing to 100 per cent its repudiation of New Dealism, touches the cast-iron hearts of the most unfeeling Republican hardshells.

It's easy to understand this vindictive abuse—more political than personal, and growing out of the aforesaid total indifference—toward the once worshiped standard bearer of what now masquerades as the Democratic Party. Shrapnel from the latest Smith explosion has strewn casualties all the way from James Farley, smear head of the attack against Landon, to the lesser shots in the outlying precincts, who face the unhappy vision of a return to work should the slipping Deal become defunct or be replaced by a Government that recognizes existence of democratic principles.

The New Dealers, by dragging Jonah's whale across the trail, have so far succeeded in deluding themselves.

F. G. BARR.
Washington, Oct. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of October 6 Guy d'Aulby, who seems to know more about Mexican politics than American politics, has a lot to say about Plutarco Elias Calles, a former Mexican governor, as well as president, being "once champion of the masses," but, like Al Smith, as soon as he rose to power and got a little of this world's goods, he became a "reactionary and conservative," no longer respecting "his former political brothers in arms."

I think a much better characterization would be that radicals are enemies of the masses, as the condition of the "masses" in Russia and in Spain today clearly shows, and that the real friends and champions of "the masses" and "the people" are those of mature years, who have like Al Smith been elected 19 times to public office and realize that they will soon pass from this scene and go before their Maker.

There is no question that President Roosevelt is the "bold and suave character" Mr. d'Aulby says he is, but what the country needs is not a "bold and suave character—that is, a mere politician—but a statesman who knows from experience that life is a struggle for existence and that it pays to keep your promises, and regard public office the public trust Grover Cleveland said it is.

But Gov. Smith is quite able to take care of himself, and, having cleared the deck for action, I have no doubt at all that he will again "look at the record" and do one of the most artistic jobs he has ever done in exposing broken platform pledges, campaign promises and shameless political humbuggery.

J. D. MASON.
Washington, Oct. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In our town the Democratic brethren reckon as how Al (ask my advice) Smith has just about ferried himself across the River Styx. One New Deal brother drew up a sad kind of epitaph:

Others have their brass or lettered stones.
Thomas Jefferson had only words of scorn.

The suspicion is growing among the folks down here that Al has resigned from his party for the reason given: "I have no grudge against the President." Old Doc Bromide spoke his mind, saying: "Al's egotism is the anesthesia that keeps Al on living terms with himself." Some of our Democratic brethren thought Doc was a little harsh, it being generally agreed that there were lots of worse guys than Al. For instance, there was Nero, who fiddled while Rome burned. All Al did was to play peanut politics.

The stalwart Democrats of our town were amused when Al deserted the loaves and fishes of his party for that Liberty League, Belshazzer's feast. What rocked the brethren on their Democratic heels, at least, one heel, was to learn how Al, over in the Republican stable, was currying the silly, rear-gaited G. O. P. elephant.

Ever since Al ran a temperature in that block-Roosevelt campaign we suspected he had a severe case of frustration. If only that convention band had played "The Sidewalks of New York." He looked worse than the country looked in the days of old Doc Hoover. We could see Al's fine woven, homespun garments of sturdy Jeffersonian pattern were about to fall off his sagging Democratic frame. Al now wears the royal purple of the Liberty League style with a high silk topper.

Democratic folks in our town think Al is a very (politically) sick man. Otherwise, they ask, how can his actions be explained? Al advised all and sundry to take their ills to Landon and everybody knows that Landon is only an intern without medical skill and experience.

Praise For The SEC.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On September 9 you published an article headed "Ross to Resign Post With SEC, Reports Assert," stating that I was dissatisfied with the work on the Securities and Exchange Commission. Nothing could be further from the truth. I believe the Securities and Exchange Commission is doing a wonderful work.

I believe that that work, carried forward as it is now, will become a work of tremendous value to the people, and that the various business concerns of the land, including the electric utilities, will be in favor of the commission, because the great majority of these people prefer to see their business clean and prefer to have regulated those people who are not clean.

I consider it a great privilege to be a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission. I consider that the President has done a tremendous work for the people. I have a great respect and admiration for him. He will go down in history as one of the greatest men of all time.

I would appreciate very much your giving this letter publication, as I do not wish to be thought of as adverse to the Securities and Exchange Commission's work, in which I am so much interested and in which I wish to do my part.

"Confines Of Reason."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I be one to compliment you upon your editorial of October 8, "Inept Attack," which, to my way of thinking, is significant of confining our own interests at home and not airing them in the pastures of a foreign nation whose economic condition places that nation upon an entirely different scale of adjudication.

There also is an inveighment of Mr. Hamilton's philosophy of "good neighborliness" which I deem is in keeping with the concepts of what all fair and impartial publications should employ. After all, if we should do good by only those who are without sin or suspicion, according to our own classification of what is a sin or suspicion, we would all of us fall short of the execution of the principles laid down by the fathers of our republic, whose qualities are as much a part of our destiny as is destiny a part of the handiwork of an omniscient and omnipotent Master.

Mr. Hamilton would do well to confine the sterilization of his political garments to the confines of reason and fact. So likewise should those who are browsing in the green pastures of plenty, shepherded by Mr. Hamilton, and those whom he represents, lift their heads for a moment above the clover and view the sun in its gorgeousness and reflect for a moment upon the contrast. With our eyes shut and our reason inept, we can bring to mind millions of "ghost-scenes" that a good view of the ever-depending sun's rays will obliterate.

Call For Initiative.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Do Washington businessmen, especially the hotel interests, want the Hindenburg to base in Hybla Valley? If so, why don't they get busy and bend a little effort in the direction of cooperation with Dr. Eckener?

The gentleman seems to favor this territory, and always has, but there are more practical angles than mere meteorological data and favorable terrain to be considered. European tact and courtesy, however, will hardly permit Eckener to initiate a discussion of what must be perfectly obvious to even our small-town chamber of commerce. And again, if there is any doubt as to the necessity for concessions—yes, even subsidies—just watch the negotiations between the airship people and the Port of Baltimore. The Free State gentlemen have a sense of reality and are on their toes.

CHARLES E. CROSS.

Liberal Vs. Liberal

The following is taken from the Economist of London, noted British journal of political and economic affairs.

The Presidential campaign has so far been disconcertingly unreal. It teems with contradictions and paradoxes, and few fundamental issues have been raised that are worthy of discussion. The most characteristic inconsistency is the elevation of Mr. Roosevelt by the unions and progressives to the rank of their crusading leader. Anyone who has spent much time in Washington in the past two years can testify that Mr. Roosevelt has been the continual despair of both of these groups.

He was the kind of President who had to be forgiven continually for not taking a straight and logical course. His New Deal grew into a hotch-potch of liberalism, paternalism and social settlement charity. Its economics were never one thing or another. The big achievements of the Administration, such as the acknowledgement of the Federal duty to help the unemployed, and the determination of the Government to spend its way out of the depression, were offset by many major and minor mistakes.

Mr. Roosevelt himself betrayed labor in the automobile code, and instructed his Labor Relations Board to keep its hands off a newspaper case affecting a writer dismissed by Mr. Hearst for union activities. The President did not even sponsor the Wagner-Connally bill until it was certain of slipping through as a concession to labor after NRA was declared unconstitutional. The only big fight he put up in his entire term was over the Holding Company bill, hardly the battle of the century. While Congress was being flooded with bills infringing civil liberties in the name of patriotism, President Roosevelt never spoke a public word against them. He was a constant annoyance and frustration to the very groups which now fervently swear by him as their leader. And they are campaigning for him, not because of his real achievements, but on the ground that he is the very person they so often discovered he was not.

• • • •

Even this, however, would be reasonable if Gov. Landon were a reactionary or a weak man certain to succumb to the reactionary elements in the Republican Party. But Gov. Landon, according to those who know him personally, is about as liberal as President Roosevelt.

There is little to choose between the reactionaries in the Republican Party and those in the Democratic Party, such as the Solid South, Tammany in New York City and the Chicago and Kansas City machines. It may be that Gov. Landon is not as firm or as stubborn as President Roosevelt and would be a feeble man in the White House. But this has to be proved against him, whereas Mr. Roosevelt's compromises are a matter of record.

The campaign, if it were real, would be over such questions as good administration, where Mr. Roosevelt is vulnerable but where the Republicans have yet to say anything effective. It would debate the revision of the social security act, one of the most hurried and unconsidered pieces of legislation in this highly complicated field. It would begin concretely to define the function of Federal government and not lose itself in accusations that Mr. Roosevelt is a socialist or a dictator, or that American institutions are at stake.

In the absence of a debate on realities, the campaign so far can only be described as being a race between a man well known—loved for his good intentions by many and cordially hated for the same intentions by others—and an opponent who is gradually becoming known. Governor Landon has been at a great disadvantage so far, because of his mediocre speeches and still worse delivery of them. Exception must be made of his Chautauqua and Wichita speeches on civil liberties, which were more Jeffersonian than anything yet said by President Roosevelt.

If this sounds as though the race were between two charming men of the same general political outlook, each backed by hidden and unsavory elements in their respective parties, it is not far from the truth.

Col. Knox will go on maintaining that the banks and insurance companies are not safe under Mr. Roosevelt. Mr. Hearst will go on branding Mr. Roosevelt as a Red; and Mr. Roosevelt's "Non-partisan" Labor League will continue to call Mr. Landon the chosen tool of the Liberty League and all industrial reaction—all palpable falsehoods.

But the contest is essentially between the liberal wings of the two major parties. And the one obvious boon of it all is that here is a political campaign without the breath of a danger of Fascism and with hardly any Communism—a truly democratic election, not at all wise and instructed, but surprisingly safe in a fairly unsafe world. There is something to be said for a fight between two liberals. For it is at least a fight in which a liberal is bound to win.

Fair Enough

By
Westbrook Pegler

Fair Game.

To Mr. Jack Randolph, of the Richmond Times Dispatch, and other deserving Democrats in the southern part of the country who are unable to get down wagers in the election, I am happy to report that I have just dug up a fine, fat Republican who is up in the funds after four years of Roosevelt, and desires to back his resentment against this condition at 8 to 5 or even money. The 8 to 5 quotation is merely his asking price, a reminder of the time that shrewd economic royalist, Babe Ruth, in discussing his lowest terms for his new contract with Jake Ruppert, announced that he wouldn't take a cent less than $50,000, or anyway $35,000.

My Republican, when approached at the Yankee Stadium a few days ago, said, 'Yes, I am doing a little business at 8 to 5," and when I said I didn't think that was quite fair with Coughlin, Lemke, Townsend, Hearst and all the other American Fascists running for his man Landon, he began to chase me.

* * * *

It was a remarkable experience, you may be sure, to encounter a pheasant in beautiful feather who would not only hold still for the Nimrod, but could easily be induced to hunt the hunter. I retired a few steps to lead him in, and finally got him at even money, but only took a few plumes out of his tail as I realize that Mr. Randolph, of the Richmond Times Dispatch, and his colleagues on the rim of the copy desk are in bad shape since some recent writing of mine scared off the Liberty Leaguer whom they were saving for Thanksgiving.

I trust that I will be able to make full amends for this unintentional disservice to the boys on the rim at the T D by reporting that Mr. Fred G. Leib, of 126 Seventh avenue northeast, St. Petersburg, Fla., who wrote baseball for a quarter of a century and retired from New York daily journalism a couple of years ago, is not only ready to be taken but spoiling for it.

It was Mr. Pat Robinson, the baseball writer, who passed the word at the World Series.

"Get a piece of Freddy Leib when he comes in," Mr. Robinson whispered. "You remember how in the spring he used to lay out last year's batting, fielding and pitching percentages, the figures on the strength of the clubs at home and on the road, the rainfall statistics and the factor for psychology which he called X, and churn them all up together to pick the pennant winners? Well, he has been doing that on the election this year and it comes out Landon. He put in the deficit, the vote in Maine, the car loadings and unfilled tonnage, the drought, the tariff and the whites of two eggs and you can't keep him off you.

* * * *

"No kidding," Mr. Robinson said, "he keeps on thinking of the time he picked the Yankees to win that year after they finished seventh, and he will walk right up and look you dead in the eye and offer to take Landon. He will circle slightly to his right as he comes up, offering 8 to 5, but if you wait him out he will go to even. I don't know but that, maybe, if you handle him right you could get him to put Landon on top. Here he comes."

"And what is this about how you put all those statistics together and it gives Landon?" I asked Mr. Leib.

"Yes," Mr. Leib said, "you remember the year I picked the Yankees—the year after they finished seventh—don't you?"

"Oh, to be sure," I said, "but that was the year I wrote the piece from Florida about the lax training methods of the gallant athletes, and Miller Huggins raised so much hell that they won their first 16 games. You had me in there that year. In fact, the day the World Series opened that fall, Mr. Mark Roth, our road secretary, threw his arms around me and thanked me heartily for his share of the World Series money, as he said I won as many games as Pennock."

"Well," Mr. Leib said, "you are doing the same thing for the Republicans this year, and I will accommodate you with a little of that 8 to 5 if you like. Or," Mr. Leib added quickly, with an aggressive step forward. "I could make it even money, and I will just write down my winter address so you can know where to send the money."

* * * *

"Oh, that will hardly be necessary," I said to Mr. Leib. "You know my address and that will be sufficient, but maybe I ought to take yours as I want to pass you along to Mr. Randolph and the boys on the rim of the Richmond Times Dispatch."

Mr. Leib walked away puffing out his neck and thumbing over his car loadings, his wheat yield, the vote in Maine and an item of psychology carried into seven decimals. I think Mr. Randolph and the boys on the rim of the Richmond Times Dispatch will find that I have more than replaced their Liberty Leaguer who was made bet shy by my earlier essays. Incidentally, Mr. Leib will pass through Richmond on his way to his St. Petersburg home, and I will try to wire Mr. Randolph his exact train and space. There is no need for caution in approaching him. He might even get off the train and go up to the office of the Times Dispatch asking for it.

Vest-Pocket Bard

By William Lyon Phelps

M. R. Ridley, Editor.

The concluding volume of "The New Temple Shakespeare," edited by M. R. Ridley, of Balliol College, Oxford, is small enough to be carried in the pocket, and contains in conveniently summarized form what is actually known of the life and work of Shakespeare, of his plays, and of his theater. The whole edition is in 40 volumes, with introduction, notes, and glossary to each play, by the editor, with extracts from literary and dramatic criticism. The publisher is E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

* * * *

This last volume is called "William Shakespeare: a Commentary." The separate chapters are called "Shakespeare's Life," "His Work," "His Theater," "Determination of His Text," "On Reading Shakespeare," "His Verse," "His Language" (by another hand), with an index of plays and characters.

This is very far from being a dry and impersonal manual. It is a marvel of condensation, but Mr. Ridley lets his views be known with no uncertain sound; so that we have here not only a history and a biography, but a critical work on Shakespeare, much of which is not only penetrating, but challenging. His comments on the characters and on the poetry of "The Tempest" are extremely interesting and valuable.

* * * *

He reminds us also that we must not think of Shakespeare as having lived in London during the whole of his career, and then retiring, more or less inexplicably, to his native village of Stratford. Mr. Ridley believes that we should think of him during the last 15 years as one who had a home in Stratford and a flat in town, to which he came at more or less irregular intervals.

I do not think I have ever seen anywhere so much valuable pertinent information given in so small a space as in Mr. Ridley's chapter called "His Theater," less than six pages; it will give many readers some new ideas on the presentation of Shakespeare's plays and the reasons for certain features absent from the theater of today.

Italy's Outpost

By James G. Simonds.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tirana.

Smallest of the Balkan States, the Kingdom of Albania, because of her strategic position, plays a role in Balkan politics which is out of all proportion to her size.

Possessing as she does the coast-line bordering the Strait of Otranto, where the Adriatic Sea narrows down until only 50 miles of water separate Italy and the Balkan coast, her position commands the route of all ships leaving or entering the Adriatic ports of Italy and Jugoslavia.

The present Italian-Albanian alliance makes it possible for the Italians, by blockading the Strait, to stop all commerce with Jugoslavian ports in case of war between Jugoslavia and Italy.

From the Albanian point of view the Italian alliance is also extremely important, for Albania is a country of barely 1,000,000 inhabitants, impoverished by five centuries of Turkish domination, which ended only in 1912. She needs money to develop her economic life, and protection to maintain her independence.

But for the Albanians the present economic penetration of Italy, though necessary for the development of their country, is also a menace to the continued freedom of their state.

To understand how far this penetration goes, and how systematically it has been prepared, it is necessary only to see what steps the Italians are taking to guard and exploit the alliance.

Instead of a sleepy little seaboard town, the Italian port for Albania, Bari, has, in the last ten years, been made into a large and modern city, with a big, well-equipped harbor.

But as yet, save a few Italian freighters and warships, little shipping is coming to this port.

On learning that I was going to Albania, one Italian said: "Oh, our province. You'll find that the Italians are running a great deal of the commerce of the country, especially in the south, near the new oil fields. Also it is important to us since it is our doorway to the other Balkan countries."

Most of Albania Still Primitive.

LEAVING this modern city of Bari, one is not prepared for the change which one encounters on arriving at the Albanian seaport of Durrazzo the next morning.

Under a sun that is already blazing at 7 o'clock in the morning the ship pulls up to a lone cement pier. Immediately dozens of natives crowd around the dock with large water bottles, to get (from the ship) a supply of drinking water lacking in the town.

Descending the gang plank, one has the impression of having been transported back at least a century. The streets are roughly paved, most of the men are in native costume and fezes, and almost all the women wear veils.

At the customs house I found a small, dark-complexioned Albanian, who on seeing my passport announced that he came from Boston, and wanted to know how conditions were in America and whether President Roosevelt would be re-elected.

After some minutes of talking about New England, he turned to the situation in Albania. "We are a very poor country, as you will see," he said. "We have no railroads, few roads and no large factories. Albania has been a battle ground for so long that until recently the only occupations possible were farming and fighting, mostly the latter."

For over an hour our car bumped over the dusty, rocky road, up a wide mountain valley to Tirana, which lies in the foothills of the Albanian Alps. We passed a few motor trucks and buses, but no private cars. For the most part traffic consisted of peasants riding on small donkeys.

As one approaches the capital, one passes a large new military airport, which seems entirely out of place against the background of the white Minarets of Tirana.

With the aid of the sign language and the inevitable American Albanian we finally reached our hotel, which proved also to be the center of the Italian colony of the city. A dozen or so Italians, the permanent occupants of the hotel, were sitting around the dining room, listening to the radio and waiting for the three hour period of intense midday heat to pass, so that they might resume work. And for the most part there is no other life possible for the Italians in Albania. They are entirely allen to the local population. They can only drink a cup of coffee in the local cafe, and sleep.

Capital Shows Few Signs of Modernism.

THERE IS little that suggests a modern city in Tirana. It has no modern stores, most of the shopping is done in tiny shops in the bazar, where veiled women and peasants in fezes and native costume make a strange contrast to the occasional car or auto bus which passes up the narrow streets.

As you leave the capital however even the traces of European influence visible there become fewer, and the country wilder, and very mountainous. One sees the traces of Turkish and even Roman forts, and one has the feeling of being on the battleground between Western and Eastern influences. Yet no matter how far back in the hills you go you always encounter a heartening degree of friendliness and pride, together with a profound sense of hospitality.

At an Albanian border outpost on the Jugo-Slavian frontier near Lake Ohrida, the officer insisted on bringing out a small piece of stale cake, so precious that it had been kept under lock and key, and offered it to us, together with a cup of Turkish coffee.

Compared with the interior, the coastal region of Albania, and especially Scutari, show the impress of modernism.

But here, too, the difficulties which have attended this transition are still evident. For example, most of the men whom one sees in the streets still carry pistols, a custom which was necessary until only recently because of the blood feuds. Also there are still soldiers on guard at every bridge which one crosses throughout the northern section.

Again the absolutely different point of view of the Italians and the Albanians is clear in the attitude of the members of the two nations with whom one talks.

One Italian boy who had spent several years in Albania, told me of one of these differences. "That's an Italian school which we built for the people here in Scutari," he said, pointing to a large vacant building. "After we had built it and were ready to open it the Albanians decided that they did not want it, for reasons of their own. And now it just goes to waste, the largest building in Scutari."

On the other hand, the Albanians feel that the Italians are a menace as well as an ally.

"We are a small nation," one Albanian told me, "and as such we are extremely conscious, as a result of our national history, of the interests and intentions of our neighbors, and the danger they constitute for Albanian Independence."

The liberty of Albania has cost her people centuries of struggle, and it is only now that the Albanian government is developing a modern state. They have no universities, so they must send all their students abroad to be educated, and although the government is poor it must find the money to pay these students' expenses, for the people cannot afford it themselves. Their army has been trained by the Italians, and their police by English army officers.

Yet, despite all these advantages which Albania has received from outside help, especially Italian, they do not to Albanians seem worth the sacrifice of any part of the liberty which they have deserved by their heroic struggle for five centuries to gain their independence from the Turks, and the Albanians would rather fight then give up their newly won freedom.

Hundreds Watch Rescue in Ocean

San Francisco, Oct. 9 (AP).—Hundreds of San Franciscans perched on a cliff overlooking the Golden Gate today watched a thrilling rescue at sea, performed less than 300 feet from where they sat.

Powerful Coast Guard surf boats crept through heavy swells and took all but 5 of the 36-man crew from the apparently doomed freighter Ohioan, wedged tight on the rocks near the Golden Gate.

The terraced cliff provided several rows of bleacher-like accommodations for spectators, who munched confections and read newspapers when the operations lagged occasionally.

The heavy seas drove the $350,000 ship farther onto the submerged boulders on which she struck late Wednesday night and menaced the two rescue boats.

Three officers and two cooks remained aboard as a skeleton crew to prevent the ship from becoming a "prize" to uninvited salvagers.

Elastic Peace

By

Europe as Sword-Swallower.

There used to be a saying in Central Europe that the situation in Berlin was always serious but never critical; in Vienna, always critical but never serious.

Times have changed. It is no longer possible to be light-hearted about any of the recurrent political crises anywhere on the European continent. Everywhere the situation seems to be permanently serious and permanently critical. But peace is no longer as brittle and easily broken as it was in the past. It has developed India rubber qualities of resilience. Like a circus freak, Europe has acquired a seemingly endless capacity for swallowing pins and needles, jagged bits of tin, razor blades, swords and flame, without apparent harm.

It certainly did not have that capacity in the past; which helps explain why the war which, according to all pre-1914 criteria, should have broken out long ago, is still a subject of prediction.

This is not to say that another European war is outside the realm of the possible. It is not. But it is none the less a significant fact that provocations which in the past caused nations to fly at each other's throats, do not, these days, even lead them to break off diplomatic relations.

At the time of the second Moroccan crisis in 1911 war between Germany and Great Britain almost occurred because Germany kept silent as to what it meant by sending the gunboat Panther to Agadir. In his famous Guildhall speech of that year, Lloyd George, speaking with the authority of the cabinet, declared this silence by the Wilhelmstrasse an affront to Britain, one hurtful to its pride. Great Britain, he said in substance, would not permit itself to be treated as a cipher, if it meant going to war.

Yet in this very year the British government has been repeatedly rebuffed when it sought to find out from the Hitler government what its intentions are in the Danube Valley and Eastern Europe. After five months the Eden questionnaire is still unanswered. But no Guildhall speeches are being made by any responsible British statesmen similar to the one made by Lloyd George a quarter of a century ago. If the British government is irritated by the German affront it is not showing it. London's wooing of Berlin goes on. Downing Street may be terribly, terribly hurt. But there is nothing it is apparently prepared to do about it except, possibly, complain to Der Fuehrer in the words of the old poem:

Perhaps it was wrong to dissemble my love,
But why did you kick me downstairs?

But if the present British attitude in its international dealings is such as to cause Pitt, Palmerston and Disraeli to turn in their graves, what are we to say of present-day Russo-German relations?

* * * *

At Nuremberg, not long ago, Hitler and his principal subordinates spoke of Russia and its leaders in language so vituperative as to find no parallel in modern times. In the past no nation would have countenanced such language directed against its system of government and its rulers. But the Russian ambassador stays on in Berlin just as though nothing had happened. And the German ambassador in Moscow is treated with all the punctilio prescribed by protocol as guiding the relations between two friendly powers. By every appropriate definition Germany and Russia are still friendly nations.

Now Russia has accused Germany, as well as Italy and Portugal, of being faithless to their pledges—in other words, nations without honesty or honor. Adding injury to insult, it has produced a dossier to back up its charges that these nations have violated the nonintervention agreement regarding Spain. Will that lead to war between Russia and the Fascist powers over the bleeding body of the Iberian republic? Such a possibility cannot be ruled out. Yet to judge by what has happened during the past few years it would be rash indeed to draw so pessimistic a conclusion.

In 1870 France declared war on Prussia because William I was not, in the opinion of Napoleon III and his advisers, forthright enough in his statement withdrawing the candidacy of a Hohenzollern for the crown of Spain. But not long ago it swallowed with whatever grace it could the far-greater insult of Germany's invasion of the demilitarized Rhineland zone, which was in clear violation of the Versailles and Locarno treaties.

The explanation for this growing callousness in the matter of international insults is, of course, that the sane view is being adopted that almost anything is preferable to war. Short of being attacked, nations are prepared to stand an almost unlimited quantity of snubs, rebuffs and insults without getting belligerent. Nations, in particular democratic nations, are much less touchy than they once were about their "national honor." The language of diplomacy, like the currencies of the world, has become subject to very considerable discount.

But the same spirit of intemperance is being manifested by those who are not practitioners of the new diplomacy. Mr. John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, for instance, is a politician. But he, too, has been making wild statements about the government of Spain, a government with which we maintain friendly relations. Will the new Spanish envoy embarrass Secretary Hull by making a formal protest against them? During our Civil War, we deeply resented European attacks on the character of President Lincoln and the conduct of Gen. Sherman in Georgia. But Prof. de los Rios will probably close an ear to Mr. Hamilton's similarly reckless attitude, preferring, no doubt, to consider the latter's attitude toward Spain as critical—but not serious.

("Farm tractors are now being equipped with radios to ease the work of the farmhands."—News item.)

Mine is a farmland far away
From all the tumult and the noise,
A vast expanse of fruitful land
With all the country's simple joys!
I prize a tractor that I may
Through hot and blazing acres go—
And cut a thousand furrows through
The programs on the radio!

The old hay wagon is improved,
And as we pile it full of hay
We hear the tenors shoot the works
And hear the big pipe organs play;
The hay fork isn't what it was;
The handle has a gadget so
A feller can tune in and get
A concert on the radio!

With science workin' smooth as silk;
We get ten gallons of good fun
With nearly every quart of milk.
Each cow now has a smart device
To let the broadcasts all come through;
It cheers the dairy hands a lot
And makes the cows contented, too.

The poultry house now rings with sounds
Which bring joy to the setting hen;
No boredom does she suffer now—
She hears the air wave's funny men!
A button on the china egg
Now lures the chickens on to lay;
They press it and a dozen mikes
Provide amusement night and day!

The shepherd on the distant hill
Now has a gadget on his staff
Which keeps him well supplied with jazz
And never lets him miss a laugh.
He doesn't have to watch the sheep
Nor shower 'em with kindly care—
They stick around for fear they'll miss
A single thing that's on the air.

Oh, mine's the life upon the farm,
For agriculture's in my blood . . .
I gotta have the skits, the songs,
The orchestras and Stoopa and Bud!

Text of Gov. Landon's Chicago Speech

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—The following is the text of Gov. Alfred M. Landon's address tonight:

Tonight I am going to talk about the Federal budget, and incidentally I, too, am going to talk about it in billions.

First, let me make my position absolutely clear. If I am elected, the budget is going to be balanced. It is going to be balanced, not by depriving our needy of relief, not by refusing necessary aid to our farmers, not by swamping the country with taxes.

The budget is going to be balanced by cutting out waste and extravagance; by putting an end to the use of public funds for political purposes; by restoring hard-working, painstaking, common-sense administration.

This question of balancing the budget is of vital importance to every man, woman and child in this country.

Let me give you three reasons why this is true.

It is true because "upon the financial stability of the United States Government depends the stability of trade and employment, and of the entire banking, saving and insurance system of the country."

Words Are Roosevelt's.

These words are not mine. They were spoken by Candidate Roosevelt at Pittsburgh, four years ago.

It is true because "if the Nation, like a spendthrift, throws discretion to the winds, is willing to make no sacrifice at all in spending, extends its taxing to the limit of the people's power to pay and continues to pile up deficits, it is on the road to bankruptcy."

Those words are not mine. They were also spoken by Candidate Roosevelt at Pittsburgh, four years ago.

It is true because "taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors, because they are a burden on production * * * if excessive, they are reflected in idle factories, tax-sold farms and in hordes of the hungry tramping the streets and seeking jobs in vain."

And those prophetic words are not mine. They were spoken by Candidate Roosevelt at Pittsburgh, four years ago.

Those are three reasons why "I regard reduction in Federal spending as one of the most important issues of this campaign." Even those words are not mine. They were spoken by Candidate Roosevelt at Pittsburgh, four years ago.

Now let us turn to the record. Let us see if Federal spending was reduced; if taxes were lowered; if deficits were stopped. Everyone knows the answer, but it cannot be emphasized too much.

Four years ago the Federal Government spent just over five billion dollars. Last year it spent just under nine billion dollars.

Debt Rises 13 Billions.

Four years ago the gross Federal debt was $21,000,000,000. Today it is $34,000,000,000.

Those are the facts. Instead of a decrease, we have had an enormous increase all along the line—an increase in spending, an increase in taxes, an increase in debt—all of which, as every housewife knows only too well, have increased the cost of living.

That is only a summary of what has happened to the financial pledges of Candidate Roosevelt. Now consider what has happened to the financial pledges of President Roosevelt.

Time after time we have been assured by the President and his spokesmen that no more taxes would be imposed. But under this Administration, 14 bills increasing the tax burden have been jammed through Congress.

And as for his assurance that the budget would be balanced—well, these political hush-darlings have become annual fixtures. The first one was shortly after he took office in 1933. The next was in January, 1934. The next in January, 1935. The next in January, 1936. And the last at Pittsburgh two weeks ago. And this last, as usual, was accompanied by the promise that no more taxes would be necessary.

In other words, as usual, the President expressed the hope that sometime, somehow, revenues will overtake expenditures. The way expenditures are running today, Jesse Owens himself could not overtake them.

That is the record. Instead of a balanced budget, we have a confession of incompetence—a confession by those in charge of our Government that they have set loose a flood of spending that they are unable to stop.

Examine This Spending.

Let us examine this policy of spending. Let us look at the theory used to justify it, the amounts involved, and the threat to the country if it is continued.

The simple and amazing theory behind this spending was sold to the Administration by a British economist. He said that if only the United States Government would spend $400,000,000 a month, it would prime the pump and all would be well.

Of course, as a foreigner, he found ardent followers in this Administration, although he had none in his own government. His formula was eagerly adopted, with one important change. The Administration concluded that if $400,000,000 a month for useful projects would be good medicine, $600,000,000 a month thrown around at random would be even better. So we started spending, not for the multitude of things we really needed, but for every conceivable thing. The lid was off. It is still off. We have been spending at the rate of $600,000,000 a month and more ever since.

Just consider what this meant. It meant making a special virtue of spending for spending's sake. It meant saying to some 800,000 Government employes: "don't watch out for the resources of the Government. Get rid of them as fast as possible."

What has been the result of this policy? In the 3 1/3 years ended June 30 last, the Federal Government spent more than $25,000,000,000. This was more than all of the Presidents of the United States from George Washington to Woodrow Wilson spent in 124 years.

And what excuse does the President give for spending more than all the Presidents from Washington to Wilson?—for ignoring his promises made at Pittsburgh four years ago—or perhaps we should say $25,000,000,000 ago? Speaking last week at Pittsburgh he said: "We had to balance the budget of the American people before we could balance the budget of the National Government," and then he added: "that makes common sense, doesn't it?" This is a mighty melodious phrase, but with 11,000,000 unemployed, with almost 20,000,000 people on the relief rolls, with the banks stuffed with Government bonds, with the Government spending double its income—this does not make common sense.

In his last speech, the President overlooked this record. That is not surprising. At least it is no more surprising than the method of bookkeeping adopted by this Administration.

For the first time in history—in war or in peace—in prosperity or in depression—the Treasury of the United States is keeping two sets of books.

This is the kind of bookkeeping we find when countries are faced with inflation or bankruptcy—when governments can stay in power only by deceiving the public. It is the kind of bookkeeping, for instance, from which the French people suffered during the serious inflation ten years ago.

Under such a system, items are transferred and retransferred, as they are by this Administration, without rhyme or reason, from one set of books to the other. No definite line is drawn between ordinary expenditures and so-called emergency expenditures. No one, unless he is in the confidence of those who juggle the figures, can determine accurately what is going on. Of course, you can rely on the daily Treasury statement to present accurate figures. But with the present mystery of the two sets of books, the secrecy surrounding the $200,000,000,000 stabilization fund, and the juggling of revenue and expenditure items, not even an expert can obtain a clear picture of the exact condition of the United States Treasury.

Could Not Hide Facts.

But in spite of this system of bookkeeping, in spite of all this juggling of figures, there are certain facts that it has been impossible for this Administration to hide. One of these facts is the vast increase in the ordinary routine cost of our Government.

In 1934, the first full year of the present Administration, the ordinary activities of the Federal Government, exclusive of debt retirement, cost $2,505,000,000. For the present year the estimated cost is $3,407,000,000—an increase of $902,000,000.

In order to place these figures on a comparable basis, I have put the cost of the veterans' administration in 1934 at the 1937 figure, and I have eliminated all such new items as the bonus, Triple A, Civilian Conservation Corps and social security.

In other words, this $902,000,000 increase was purely and simply an increase in the ordinary routine expenses of the Federal Government—an increase of 36 per cent in the expenses which the Democratic platform, and the Democratic candidate of 1932, pledged to cut not less than 25 per cent. An administration that boasts of that record does not deserve another chance.

Now consider the so-called emergency expenditures.

In the name of emergency, this Administration has created no less than 75 new bureau, agencies and what-nots.

Certainly no one can seriously maintain that all of these conflicting bureaus are necessary. Neither can anyone seriously maintain that it is necessary for our Government to have hundreds upon hundreds of press and publicity agents—hundreds upon hundreds of just plain barkers carrying on party propaganda at the expense of the taxpayer.

There is still another set of figures connected with emergency expenses that deserve attention. There are the expenditures classified as relief.

Relief Expenses Increase.

Now the fact of the matter is that since the NRA was kicked out there has been a substantial recovery in this country. Yet in spite of this, relief expenses keep right on increasing.

At the present time we are spending for so-called relief at the rate of $3,500,000,000 a year, or $1,500,000,000 more than in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1934. And still, in spite of all this spending, the Administration has not redeemed its pledge to give every man on relief a job.

Now obviously there is something wrong here. Everybody knows what it is. A lot of the money spent in the name of relief has nothing to do with relief. A lot of the money has been wasted.

If I am elected there will be an end to this spending of relief funds for other purposes. There will be no more wholesale waste and extravagance. And there will be efficient administration of our public affairs. That is how the budget can be balanced—how it can be balanced without reducing by a single dollar the necessary payments to those actually in need.

The Federal Government has become a vast sieve through which taxpayers' money is being poured in constantly increasing volume.

Never in the history of government has there been such profligate spending. Anyone at all familiar with what has been going on could almost count on the fingers of one hand foolish experiments the Government could cut out and save at least a billion dollars any time it wanted to.

What can ultimately be accomplished in the way of reduction it is impossible to determine, since detailed figures are not available, and future commitments are unrevealed.

But I mean to balance the budget. And I am not going to take four years to do it. With a reduction in Government expenditures, I am convinced there will be such a rebirth of confidence that we will have a real recovery—the kind of recovery that means re-employment. That, in turn, will not only reduce expenditures further, but will expand Government income.

Change Is Imperative.

If the family incomes of this country are to be relieved from this intolerable burden—if the specter of inflation and bankruptcy is to be set at rest, change of administration is absolutely imperative.

Election-eve repentance will not do. The give-me-another chance plea will not serve. No matter how sincere the good intentions of the present Administration may be, they can never be translated into an effective program of economy.

The reasons for this are obvious; an administration which starts a policy of spending for spending's sake dares not stop it. An administration which creates a multitude of new offices which embarks on all manner of new ventures, which spends money to keep itself in power, dares not risk the angry votes that would result from economy.

Today, our various governments, Federal, State and local, are taking, through taxation, almost 20 per cent of the national income. One fifth of the average income of every man, woman and child in this country goes to the cost of Government—one dollar out of every five.

This is altogether too much. But even this is not the whole story. In addition, they are spending enormous sums obtained by borrowing. When this borrowing is added to what Government takes from us in taxes, we find it is spending 30 per cent of the national income, or $1.50 out of every five.

In the matter of borrowing the Federal Government is the outstanding offender. For every dollar the Federal Government has received since March, 1933, it has spent $2.

This is an appalling situation. It cannot be casually tossed aside—as the President attempted to do at Pittsburgh last week—with the explanation that the debts will be paid out of an increasing national income. When the Government finances its costs by borrowing, it mortgages the future income of every family. And if our Government is to remain honest its debts have to be paid. And they have to be paid, not out of some impersonal fund known as "national income," but "in the sweat of every man that labors."

Must Protect Children.

We cannot—we must not—place this burden upon our children. We must remember that they, too, may have emergencies. We must make it possible for them to live their lives without having to pay for the financial follies of their parents.

Every generation the necessary activities of government increase. This is inevitable because of the increasing complexity of civilization. Unless we watch carefully every penny we spend, unless we cut out every trace of waste, these necessary activities are going to suffer. Every dollar that is spent foolishly means a dollar less for the things that are necessary and wise.

Let me quote once more the words of the President. In March, 1933, he said: "Too often in recent history, liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy."

He spoke truly. A loose fiscal policy—and that is certainly a polite term for what we have today—will wreck any government. It will wreck the Government of the United States unless we stop it. We must put the spenders out.

For remember, those who preach spending, practice spending, and brag about spending, cannot stop spending. This is the lesson of history. That is the record of this Administration. They are proud of their spending. They talk of it as though preserving the financial integrity of the United States were only a game.

The American people know that it is more than a game—that our very existence depends upon keeping our financial house in order. But if the Administration wants a baseball analogy—if they want the score—it is easy to give. It is written clear across this country:

Twenty-five billion dollars spent.

Thirteen billion dollars added to the public debt.

Leaders Inivted To Farmer Parley

By the Associated Press.

Officials said yesterday a number of farm organization leaders have been invited to come here and discuss the proposed Federal crop insurance program with a special committee named by the President to suggest a plan to Congress.

Spokesmen for the committee, which is headed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, declined to make known just who had been invited, but said all representatives of the farm industry would be consulted.

Actual farm production records have supplied a corps of Federal workers with a basis for risk-data in recent crop years as a start for the insurance plan. It is known, however, that many technical questions are facing the committee, composed of representatives of the Commerce and Agriculture departments and the Treasury.

Secretary Wallace has proposed that payments of premiums and losses on insurance be in grain, and that surplus production in good years be stored for years of short yields.

He suggested cotton and wheat as likely commodities on which a beginning in Federal insurance might be made the first year.

Flag-bedecked and filled with a festive air, Hyattsville (Md.) yesterday prepared to mark the fiftieth anniversary of its incorporation with an all-day celebration today.

University Band to Play.

It also was announced yesterday that the University Band, including two coed members, would be in the line of march.

The two coeds—both trumpet players—are Virginia Long, who last week became the first girl member of the band, and Roberta Beane, of Washington, who joined several days later.

The parade, which will begin at the railroad overpass at the southern end of the town at 1:30, will include more than 60 floats and five bands.

The queen of the jubilee celebration—Miss Miriam Alexander, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Alexander, will be crowned by Mayor H. T. Willis at ceremonies in Magruder Park at 3 p. m., immediately following the parade.

Two Burned to Death In Wreckage of Auto

Clinton, Ind., Oct. 9 (AP).—Trapped in the flaming wreckage of an automobile in which they had been riding, Daniel J. O'Connor, 24, and Nick Masaracha, 26, both of Indianapolis, were burned to death near here last night.

Culbertson on Bridge

Saved by a Hoax.

It is to be feared that contract players concentrate too much on the academic side of the game and too little on the psychological side, the personal element. Far be it from me to suggest that technique is not vitally important! But it must be borne in mind that innumerable situations arise in which only a keen insight into an opponent's probable reaction will save the day.

In such a hand as the one shown today, the most flawless technician would be helpless. But the psychologist-player would instantly see the one hope for fulfilling the contract.

South, dealer.

East-West vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	1 N. T.	Pass
4 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

It goes without saying that South's leap to four spades, with so little encouragement from partner as the one no trump response, was totally unjustified. He probably counted on the assistance of the opponents for a trick or two in the play.

When West opened the club king and followed up with the heart queen things looked decidedly black for the declarer. It was quite obvious that none of these losers could be avoided by any process except one: inducing an error by the defense.

Working toward this end, declarer won the second trick in the dummy with the heart king and then carefully led dummy's jack of trumps. East "fell" with a loud bang; he covered with the queen, exactly as the declarer had hoped he would if he had a doubleton honor. The ace smothered the queen and West, groaning audibly, parted with his singleton king.

The declarer's observation concerning the East player, that the latter was an inveterate and indiscriminating "honor-coverer" had worked out beautifully and now only a little pure luck was necessary to the contract's fulfillment. Dummy was entered by leading the five of spades to the six spot and a diamonds was led toward the king. A work of art would have been destroyed if declarer had found the diamond ace over instead of under him, but no such vandalage occurring the ten trick contract became a lay-down.

Utilities to Insist Court Rule on TVA

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 9 (AP).—Attorneys for private utility interests suing the Tennessee Valley Authority considered tonight the possibility that Federal Judge John J. Gore may rule on a motion to dismiss their suit without deciding the validity of the TVA act.

They were prepared to insist upon such an action tomorrow when the court hears arguments on the motion, which was made by the TVA on the ground that the suit is not within the jurisdiction of Tennessee courts.

The effect of such a procedure would be to delay a ruling on the question of TVA constitutionality despite Judge Gore's expressed desire to get the entire suit on its way to higher tribunals as speedily as possible.

At the conclusion of a hearing at Cookeville a month ago he explained an immediate decision on constitutionality would allow the suit to "get quickly into the Circuit Court of Appeals." He said, too, the power companies set out in their bill that "any delay will result in great injury to the complainants."

Campos, 8 Aids Denied Sedition Charges Bail

Boston, Oct. 9 (AP).—The full bench of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals late today denied the petition for bail of Pedro Albizu Campos, Harvard-educated president of the Nationalist Party in Puerto Rico, and eight Nationalist associates, thus upholding the decision of U. S. Judge Robert Cooper, who was trial judge in the Puerto Rico sedition case.

The petition was denied unanimously and without comment only two days after it was heard here.

Campos and his associates were convicted in Federal Court at San Juan, Puerto Rico, last July 31, and sentenced to varying terms in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga.

Does A Voter's Religion Affect His Politics?

How many Methodists will vote for Methodist Landon in November?

How many Episcopalians will cast ballots for their fellow-churchman, Franklin Delano Roosevelt?

How many Catholics will support Lemke, Union Party candidate indorsed by Father Coughlin?

THIS year—for the first time in a Presidential campaign—it is possible for you to know how members of America's leading religious faiths may cast their ballots in November.

The Washington Post will make known the facts next Sunday in AMERICA SPEAKS.

Sunday's report—based on impartial Nation-wide polls conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion—will tell you how Catholics, Jews, men and women of several Protestant denominations and non-church voter now say they will mark their Presidential ballots on Election Day.

A supplementary analysis on the same page will show how farmers, women, persons on relief, Negroes, young people and other important groups split their political allegiance at this stage of the 1936 Presidential campaign.

NEW LOW PRICES FROM $1090 (F. O. B. Detroit)

THIS new car, the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR V-12 for 1937, has a year's superb record behind it. But it is still years ahead of the times! It is not a new model. It is the car, refined and improved, that pioneered a new type of transportation. It looks into the future to give a new kind of value today!

• This year, more than ever, the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR is priced below its specifications. In modern design, 12-cylinder power, safety, interior roominess, comfort and convenience, it sets entirely new standards in this field. And as it breaks with tradition in value, so it breaks with tradition in design!

• No other car has the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR's beauty. And beauty, here, has a reason. . . . Beneath the swift flowing streamlines of the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR is a welded one-piece structure unique in the automotive world!

• Powering this unusual car is the Lincoln-built engine. It is of the V-type—has twelve cylinders—is built alongside the Lincoln engine in the Lincoln precision plant. It is the Lincoln-built engine of the medium-price field. Its 110 horsepower is more than sufficient, because of the car's design and light weight, to give performance new and stimulating.

14 to 18 Miles per Gallon

For all its size, for all its power, the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR is running up amazing records on the road. Owners report 14 to 18 miles per gallon! Credit is due here not to the engine's efficiency alone, but also to streamlining, and a high power-to-weight ratio.

• Talk with the neighbor who now owns a LINCOLN-ZEPHYR. Get his impressions. If joy in motoring means to you what it has meant to him . . . as thousands of letters tell us . . . then you need this car now!

• The new LINCOLN-ZEPHYR V-12 for 1937 is now on display. The Lincoln Motor Company, builders of Lincoln and Lincoln-Zephyr motor cars.

Why the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR V-12 stands out

- V-type 12-cylinder 110-horsepower engine.
- Body and frame in a single steel unit.
- Wheelbase 122 inches. Springbase 133 inches.
- Conventional running-boards eliminated, allowing greater body width.
- A "front-seat" ride for every one.
- 14 to 18 miles per gallon.
- Low center of gravity.
- Built by Lincoln in the Lincoln plant.
- The "flowing" ride—a new rhythm of motoring.
- Wider range of body types.

Minnigerode, Allen Bridal Is Held Here

St. Margaret's Church Scene of Nuptials; Many Guests.

Reception Follows at Washington Club; Couple Sails.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

A large gathering of friends, including many from New York City, assembled yesterday at high noon in St. Margaret's Episcopal Church for the wedding of Miss Helen Louise Minnigerode, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Carter Minnigerode, to Mr. Frederick Henry Allen, of New York City, son of Dr. William H. Allen, of New York, and Mrs. Dangaix Allen, of New York and Mexico. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Herbert Scott Smith, rector of the church, who was also the officiating clergyman at the marriage of the bride's parents.

Both bride and bridegroom smiled radiantly as they came down the aisle to the strains of the Mendelssohn Wedding March after the ceremony. The entire service was marked by dignity and simplicity.

The bride, whose father gave her in marriage, wore a gown fashioned of ivory satin, woven on the imperial looms of China, and brought from there several years ago by the mother of the bridegroom. It was made with a square neckline, long sleeves, full at the shoulder and close-fitting from elbow to wrist, and the skirt falling in a short train. She wore a veil of rose point lace, an heirloom in her family, arranged over a short tulle veil in a medieval cap effect, with the tulle covering her face, and carried a prayer book which had been used by her mother with gardenias and ribbons falling in a shower from it. Her only ornaments were a seed pearl brooch and a seed pearl necklace, also heirlooms.

Attendants Dressed Alike.

The bridesmaids and maid of honor were dressed alike in simple gowns of powder blue crepe with small, close poke bonnets of dubonnet velvet and bouquets of dubonnet carnations tied with velvet ribbon of the same shade. The maid of honor, who was the bride's sister, Miss Virginia Minnigerode, carried a spray of the flowers and the bridesmaids, smaller bouquets, tightly tied. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Carlton Smith, of Worcester, Mass.; Mrs. G. Ewald Menzel, of Englewood, N. J.; Miss Anna Leffingwell Morse, of New York, and Miss Frances Hill, of Washington.

Mr. Patten Allen acted as best man for his brother and the ushers, all of whom were from New York, included Mr. Carlisle Johnson, Mr. Frank Holton, Mr. John J. Delaney, Mr. Daniel Wyncoop and Mr. Bledsoe Pinkerton.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Washington Club, where the parents of the bride and the mother of the bridegroom received with the bridal party. Mrs. Minnigerode wore a gown of black velvet with a black velvet hat trimmed with a small bright blue bird, and a corsage of gardenias. The mother of the bridegoom wore a gown of grey crepe with a dubonnet velvet hat, trimmed with ostrich, and orchids blending with her hat.

The rooms of the club were decorated with rose and white chrysanthemums and dahlias. Assisting at the table in the dining room, were Mrs. Harry Freeman Clark, who wore a costume of black, and the bride's aunt, Mrs. Powell Minnigerode, in royal blue velvet.

Prominent Guests.

Among the guests were Baroness Serge Korff, her son, Baron Serge Korff, and her daughter, Miss Barbara Korff, who spent part of the summer with the bride at her home in Darien, Conn., and was among those from New York who came down for the wedding. She wore a black and white costume, with white ribbon, like feathers, trimming her hat. Other guests from there included the bridegroom's uncle, Mr. William Dangaix, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Adams, Miss Helen Menzel, Mr. John Mosely Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Carmalt and the bridegroom's brother, Mr. William Allen. Mr. Richard Montieth, of Englewood, N. J., also was present.

From Baltimore were Mr. Robert Van Horn, Mr. and Mrs. Addison Reese, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Rumsey, Mrs. Charles O'Reilly, and from Savannah, Ga., Mr. Albert Bacon.

Among the Washington guests were Dr. Smith and his sister, Miss Carrie Smith, Capt. and Mrs. Ray Crist, Mr. Edward Devereux, Mr. and Mrs. Newton Jeffries, Mrs. Richards Devereux, Miss Dorothy Field, in a brown crepe dress, plaited down the front, and a gay little brown hat with a quill; Mrs. Rawlings Hume, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, of Georgetown, who wore a black gown with a square gold ornament at the neck; Mr. Taylor Simmons, Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner, who was in black lace and wore a black velvet hat; Mrs. William McMillan, Miss Ethaline Christfield, Mrs. John Embrey, who has recently returned from Kentucky, and Mrs. Mary Urquhart, of Alexandria.

Mrs. Ben Cain came from Warrenton, where she and her husband have moved from Alexandria, but he was unable to be there, as he was showing three horses in the Warrenton Show.

The bridal couple sailed last night from New York aboard the Bremen, for England, where they will take a motor trip and go from there to France to visit relatives of the bridegroom. They will be at home at 120 East Thirty-ninth street, New York.

Warm Welcome To Martinelli

By Dudley Harmon.

Although Martinelli kept the audience waiting 15 minutes last night at Constitution Hall for his first appearance here in eight years, eagerness rather than impatience marked the handclapping which preceded his entry.

Washington society — especially diplomatic—was well represented at last night's concert, and the rain which poured down outside dampened nobody's enthusiasm. Part of the proceeds went to the National Homeopathic Hospital, and Mrs. John Guider, who headed the hospital's concert committee, occupied a box last evening. Her gown of black taffeta was made with a fitted jacket with short puffed sleeves.

The Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky, who wore an ermine coat over her black gown, sat in a box across the way with the Counselor of the Embassy and Mme. Oumansky. Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, was present accompanied by her daughter, Senorita Erma de Castillo Najera, and her niece, Senorita Lupe Davila.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke arrived shortly after the music began, Mrs. Burke wearing a crimson velvet wrap particularly effective against her coal black hair. Mr. and Mrs. W. Calhoun Sterling were there with their dinner guests, Dr. and Mrs. Daniel Moffett and Mrs. Nina Trible.

Mrs. James McKane had with her her daughter, Miss Catherine McKane, who wore a white lace gown, and Mrs. Mattie Wyett Porter. Mme. Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Ecuador, was accompanied by the First Secretary of Legation and Senor de Mantilla-Ortega. Others from the diplomatic set included the Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard, the latter wearing a black taffeta frock with touches of pink at the neckline, and the First Secretary of the Honduran Legation Senor Don Julian R. Caceres.

The Merry Whirl

By Marylyn.

Hospitable Warrenton was shrouded in damp, clinging mist yesterday for the opening of the two-day Horse Show. The nearer we got to the show ring (before we could actually see it) the more we felt that many, too many people would be in their homes toasting their toes instead of attending the event. With this state of mind you can imagine our surprise when we rounded the last corner and beheld rows and rows of parked cars.

Rain and wet ground hold no terrors for these Virginia riders. What the day lacked in brightness from the sun was made up by the colorful garb of the spectators, the blankets of the horses; the landscape with fresh evergreens and the rich tawny tones of these trees which follow the seasons with appropriate change of attire.

Mrs. R. C. Winmill had on a bright suit. The skirt was of pearl gray and the jacket of stripes of gray, green and fuchsia. Her Scotch-effect hat was of green crocheted silk. In the morning she had with her a bright-eyed little Dauschund, the last thing in doggie fashion in its gay green and white collar and leash.

Mrs. E. B. King, in tomato-red jacket, brown skirt and hatless, watched with warrented pride her daughter, Emily North. That young lady is a lightning changer of habits (riding). In one class she appeared in dark blue, riding side saddle a large gray horse; in the same event, and not "two horses later" than her first appearance, she was back again, different mount, different hat, different habit and riding astride.

In the same stand nearest the paddock sat Mrs. Jock Whitney in beige riding clothes and a huge white kerchief on her head and tied under her chin. She was joined from time to time by Anne Kenyon and Peggy Hamilton when they were not in the ring.

Little Anne Clay Bayly and Laura Anne Hughes, two youngsters who have recently taken up riding, rode while the former's father, Roger Bayly, and the latter's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hughes, compared notes on their events.

The Alfred Tripletts and their house guest, Mrs. D. Cowan Muir, jr., of Baltimore, who are spending the week-end at the Tripletts' Virginia estate, Fair View Farm, were there and watched from the cozy shelter of their limousine.

Anne Barrett in beige and jade green arrived in the afternoon and spent the first few classes looking for her grandmother, Mrs. Baldwin Spilman, who had entertained at luncheon. Later it turned out that her guests were having such a capital time they refused to return to the show, and being the hostess, what could she do but continue the party? For once, Frederick Richardson had foregone the pleasure of golf and, with his witty wife, arrived for the afternoon session. With them were Gen. Edwin B. Winans, who cheered the rainy day with a matching tie and shirt of soft old rose, and the Richardsons' brother-in-law, Bob Graham.

The Riticor brothers, Bob and John, dashing figures in their checked outfits, were proud as the well known punch when their horses came through with clean performances.

Mrs. Billy Wetherill, between times showing her horses, was easy to find as she wore a bright red raincoat.

Capt. Villarreal, of the Mexican team, was exercising one of the horses out near the lines of mud be-spattered cars when we saw him. One of his mounts is a picture book creature, we don't know which one, and their names are too hard for us anyway, but as it went over the jumps its black mane and tail were out straight in bold banner fashion.

Eva Rabbit, who was not showing yesterday, was wearing a smart pale blue ensemble with a lemon yellow hat and accents. Tiny Mrs. George Cutting, accompanying her husband to their box, had on a rose-colored suit.

Mary Louise Miles and Louise Chase Myers should have had rosy ears considering all of the comments we heard on their splendid riding.

A little person who sat quietly and said not a word about the horses was Mrs. Frederick A. B. Portman (of the Portmans of Portman Square), who knows more about our four-footed friends than you can shake a stick at.

Lieut. Tony Luebbermann, who was on the scene early keeping a watchful eye on the Mexican riders and some of his own fellow officers of Fort Myer, was joined later in the day by Jean and Bob Phillips.

A few of those in the stands were Mary Tyler McCormack in green tweed with a pale yellow sweater; Mrs. Wilbur Osborne, Mrs. Paul Bowden in red and brown, Mrs. Bates Compton, Betina Belmont in checked coat and bright copper-colored jodhpurs; Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Keith, the latter in navy blue; Margaret Brooke in hunter green, Polly Buchanan, Capt. and Mrs. Huttich Palmer and Mrs. William B. Roberson, of New York.

Silver Vases Presented For Rose Show Winners

Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss and Mrs. Eleanor Patterson have each presented a silver vase as a prize for a class in the annual Rose Show of the Potomac Rose Society which opens today at 2:30 at the National Museum.

The patronesses, headed by Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, include Mrs. C. G. Abbot, Mrs. C. H. Marvin, Mrs. Frank B. Noyes, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. Bliss, and Mrs. Patterson.

The Aldace Walkers To Visit Washington

Mr. and Mrs. Aldace Walker, of New York, who are visiting his mother, Mrs. Harold Walker, on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, will come to Washington next Saturday to visit Mrs. Walker's mother, Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies.

Next Sunday there will be a christening service at Mrs. Davies' home for the Walkers' child, born early last summer.

To Be Bridesmaid.

Miss Madeline Cotter, daughter of Mr. Joseph D. Cotter, will leave today for St. Louis, where she will be a bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Jane Lamy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lamy, to Mr. Davis Gunner. The ceremony will take place October 17, at the home of the bride's parents.

Between Classes at Warrenton Show

Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Louise Chase Myers, Mrs. William Wetherell and Miss Emily North King did not seek the shelter of the grandstands but chose to be among the few "railbirds" when they were watching classes in which they had not entered their horses at the Warrenton Horse Show yesterday. The show will continue today when the champion hunter will be chosen.

The Black Automatic

By William Byron Mowery.

SYNOPSIS.

Inspector Noel Irving, of the Canadian Mounted, dynamites the hideout of Frank Rocco, master criminal, not knowing two women were with him. Noel is discharged, disgraced, while Rocco becomes a glorified legend. Noel receives a midnight call in his Winnipeg apartment from an engaging young stranger who calls himself Jimmy and asks Noel to be his partner in a secret prosperous venture and to help him outwit the gang who are pursuing him. While they are talking Jimmy is shot dead. Noel and his friend, Sergt. Spencer, search for clews to Jimmy's identity, but find none except a small picture of a beautiful girl who looks like him. Noel is suspected of implication. He sets out to clear his name and avenge Jimmy's murder. He learns the lad was a flyer and finds his monoplane, and that he was recently in Fort McMurray, where Noel plans to fly the plane, hoping the murder gang will try to kill him and thus reveal their identity. He refuses to let Sergt. Spencer go with him. In Fort McMurray Noel introduces himself to Strap Barclay, Arctic pilot, as Lanier, a free-lancing geologist.

CHAPTER 3.

Noel did not disbelieve the Arctic pilot. Something of the dangers and heavy strain of Barclay's calling rested upon the man's face—in the crowfeet under his eyes, in the thrust of his jaws, in the tense nervousness beneath his jesting manner.

"Where's Jimmy, partner?"

Noel did not bat an eye, but a quiver ran through him like an electric shock. Here was a man who knew Jimmy! With unexpected ease, within two minutes of his landing, he had run squarely into one of Jimmy's acquaintances!

"Why," he said casually, feeling his way along with the utmost care, "Jimmy decided not to come back in just now."

"I'll bet a leg the bright lights bit him!" Barclay guessed. "Two years in the far north gives a fellow a powerful hanker along that general line, and when he gets outside he starts soaking up sociability in a high, wide and handsome way. My watch against a shirt button Jimmy met same pretty number and is going round and round faster'n a three-mile tailspin."

Noel winced at the contrast between this guess and the cruel fact that Jimmy was lying in his grave at Winnipeg, but in even tones he agreed. "Yes, I presume Jimmy did want a fling." He fished adroitly for more information. "I suppose there wasn't much 'sociability' down north at, uh, this place where he uh——"

"Manitou," Barclay helped him out.

"Certainly, Manitou. It sort of slipped my mind."

"It would anybody's. It's just a little flyspeck of a place 'way down north in New Northumbria."

This bit of information daunted Noel. Manitou, then, had been Jimmy's center of operations. That little fur trading post far down the mighty Mackenzie, with the Great Barrens on one side and the sub-Arctic Rockies on the other—either that post or the wilderness around it held Jimmy's secret. And there he himself would have to go.

"I say, Lanier," Barclay inquired, "has young Chantrell really signed off on hard rocking and quit for good, or did he just lend you this Diomede for a spell?"

"I bought it from him," Noel said, taking quick note of that name. Jimmy Chantrell—the "Jimmy" was authentic, all right, but that "Chantrell" had the false ring of a name assumed. And that "hard rocking" rang hollow, too. Jimmy had been no prospector, patiently grubbing around in icy waters and picking around at outcroppings.

All this meant that Jimmy had hidden his identity from these Three Rivers people and had veiled his real business by posing as a plane prospector.

"By the way, Strap," he said confidentially, "Jimmy asked me to keep quiet about my buying his Diomede and about his staying outside. He didn't say why. Don't mention it, will you?"

"Okay. It's his business. Are you putting up here at McMurrays?"

"I was thinking of hitting on north as soon as I stretch my legs and get something to eat."

"You look fagged. Better get back on top before starting down the drag. Ankle up to the Buzzard Roost. That's a rambly cabin, just this side of town, where us pilots drink our beer and pound our ears. Nobody's in but me, and I'd be glad to have someone to chew the rag with."

"Why, thanks," Noel accepted, grateful for the warm hospitality.

Barclay spoke to one of the metis workers. "Here, Urso. Get M'sieu Lanier's duffel and show him up the road, and tell Wong to step on that frying pan of his. Lanier, I'll finish this job here in three shakes and be there by the time you get washed up."

As he walked along his hand unconsciously rested on the black automatic in his pocket. His judgement, sharpened to the point of instinct, told him that some members of that pack were here at McMurray. If that red and black Diomede had drawn Strap Barclay's instant attention it had also drawn theirs. They knew, all right, that he was former Inspector Irving. He felt eyes upon him, watching, waiting for his first unguarded move.

"Anyhow," he mused, "I'm making tracks with this hunt. I actually know now where Jimmy came from. It shouldn't be hard to find out what his 'pot of luck' was."

Then he thought of that savage country of which he had caught a glimpse over the nose of his plane, and his elation ebbed.

Around 9 o'clock that evening Strap Barclay came breezing into the Roost.

"Lanier, you're in luck, and you've got me to thank for it. I'll take a can of cigarettes."

"I've wangled you a passenger for your hop north."

"But I don't want any passenger, man. I don't wish to be tied down——"

"You'll want this passenger, all right. She'll pay for your gas and oil on the trip, and that's your big item."

"She?"

"Sure, a girl. And if you don't say she's a work of art I'll eat my parka. She was Miss Canada three years ago, and she hasn't lost any ground since. To have her sitting right beside you for 1,300 miles and talking to you and looking at you with those eyes—say, fellow, you owe me two cans of cigarettes."

Niel pushed back his chair and stood up. "See here, Strap, I'm taking no girl down north with me. Get that straight. I've got several reasons, but one is enough—on a trip like that they're an unmitigated nuisance."

"She isn't that kind a bit. She's as good a man as you or me. I flew her in from Edmonton last week and she took that 'dry hop' like a soldier."

"There's simply nothing doing."

"Don't turn her down," Strap pleaded. "She's hung around here several days already. She'll be here till Friday, waiting for the H-B boat to pull out; then she'll be hung up again at the Big Portage at Fort James, making connections with the Midnight Sun. She'll waste maybe a month getting down to Manitou, when you could have her there tomorrow evening slicker'n a whistle."

"Manitou?" That hooked Noel's interest. "She's going to Manitou?"

"Sure! That's why it's such a bangup arrangement. She's going; you're going. She'll pay for the gas; you push the crate, and zzppp!—you're there."

"Who is she?" Noel demanded. A city girl, heading for that distant post in the north, where he himself was going, where Jimmy had lived, where likely that gang had their rendezvous. Was this merely coincidence?

"Her name's Harla De Long," Strap informed. "She's connected with the Indian Bureau at Ottawa, and she's going north to do some research work on a tribe of queer smokies."

Gideon Haynes And Miss Martin Are Wed Here

Dr. Warner, of St. Alban's, Performs Ceremony; Reception Held.

St. Alban's Church was decorated with palms, autumn leaves and white chrysanthemums last night as a setting for the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Hanna Martin to Mr. Gideon Leslie Haynes, son of Mr. and Ms. G. M. Haynes. The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock by the Rev. Dr. Charles Warner, rector.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. Harold H. Martin, counsel for the German and American Mixed Claims Commission, and the late Mrs. Martin, wore her mother's wedding gown of old ivory satin and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses, gardenias and lilies of the valley, the same kinds of flowers which were in her mother's bridal bouquet. Her gown was made on princess lines with a short train and a bodice of old lace with a high stand-up collar, and her veil was of lace brought from Spain by her aunt, Miss Margaret Hanna, of the State Department. The lace was combined with tulle and formed a Mary Stuart headdress.

Her sister, Miss Francesca Phillips Martin, who was maid of honor, wore a gown of turquoise velvet, with puffed sleeves and neckline shirred to form a stand-up collar, a fitted waistline and circular flowing skirt with a short train. Her hat was of turquoise maline with twisted band of the same velvet as the dress. She carried bronze chrysanthemums and mixed autumn flowers.

The bridesmaids were Miss Jeanette Gilbert and Mrs. Robert Hilleary, of Washington; Mrs. Roy Glantz, of Baltimore, all members of the Sigma Kappa Sorority, to which the bride belongs, and Mrs. John Smith, of Washington. They wore dresses fashioned on similar lines to that of the maid of honor and carried bouquets of bronze chrysanthemums and autumn flowers, which blended with their dresses. Their gowns were of light cerise, deep cerise, light orchid and deep orchid and their matching hats, each with a twisted band of cerise and orchid velvet, were of maline.

Mr. Wentworth B. Clapham, of New York City, formerly of Washington, was the best man, and the ushers were Mr. Thomas Haynes, brother of the bridegroom; Mr. David Fairbanks, of Tucson, Ariz., cousin of the bride, and Mr. Robert Cragg and Mr. Joseph Catchings, of Washington.

A small reception at the bride's home followed the ceremony, at which the bride and bridegroom were assisted in receiving by her aunt, Miss Hanna, and his mother. Miss Hanna was attired in coronation blue lace, and Mrs. Haynes was wearing a gown of Chinese blue velvet, both with shoulder corsages of talisman roses.

After a short wedding trip the couple will return here to reside.

Miss Virginia Fairfax Hall Wed To Seth Gordon, Jr., at St. Albans

St Alban's Church was the scene of the wedding at 8:30 p m yesterday of Miss Virginia Fairfax Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Fairfax Hall, to Mr. Seth Gordon, jr., of Harrisburg, Pa., and Washington. The Rev. Charles T. Warner performed the ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parnts.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory satin dress made on empire lines and trimmed with Alencon lace. Her tulle veil fell from a cap made of the same lace and she carried gardenias and lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor was the bride's sister, Mrs. Arthur Logan, of Newcastle, Pa., who wore a golden brown frock of moire and net, and a velvet off-the-face hat of matching shade. She carried talisman roses.

The bridesmaids, the Misses Grace Carr and Mary Katherine Perry, of Washington, and Miss Phyllis Gordon, of Harrisburg, sister of the bridegroom, were dressed alike. They wore frocks of peach-colored satin with full skirts and puffed sleeves and peach-colored turbans and carried rust-colored chrysanthemums.

The bridegroom's father, Mr. Seth Gordon, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Wallace Atkinson, of Washington; Mr. James Buffington, of Baltimore; Mr. Arthur Logan, of Newcastle; Mr. Harry Simpson, of Norfolk, Va., and Mr. Gail Gedes of this city.

Old Furniture Made Suitable In Guest Room

By Vylla Poe Wilson.

A WASHINGTON woman is proudly displaying an unusually attractive guest room to her friends. Interest is added to it because she "used what she had" in the way of furniture.

She had to make a decision between new furniture, or new draperies, rug and flower prints. There were no draperies at the three windows and the rug was worn.

The room contained a good chest of drawers, a bureau with a square mirror, two iron twin beds with good springs and mattresses, a large easy chair and two smaller ones. The chairs needed slip covers.

So this woman decided to use her funds for paper, paint, rug, draperies and slip covers.

Papered in Yellow.

She had the room papered in a warm yellow with the woodwork a deep cream. She replaced the old rug with one of hooked design in brown and yellow with blue border. She selected drapery material of light brown and blue background with large conventional flower design in deep creamy tone. Valances of this material were made for the tops of the windows. Straight lengths to the floor made the side draperies. These and the valances were piped in a blue material to match the border of the rug. The glass curtains selected were of sunlight tone net.

The twin iron bedsteads were a problem. They were typical, with high, rounded head pieces and lower foot pieces. The mechanical-minded young man of the family sawed off the foot pieces to a point below the springs.

There were many family discussions as to whether to use the flowered material or the plain blue for the beds. It was finally decided to use the flowered material for slip covers for the chairs and the plain blue for the beds. So slip covers were made for the high, rounded head pieces of the beds, completely hiding the iron parts. These were piped in the flowered material. A bedspread with a box-plaited valance that hung to the floor was made of the plain material piped in the flowered. A piece of the plain material was made to cover the pillows in the daytime.

Mirror Separated.

Then the mirror was taken entirely off the dresser and hung above it. The chest of drawers was placed between the two far windows. The much-prized flower prints in tones of yellow and blue were hung above the beds.

Tall yellow candles in brass holders were placed on the top of the chest of drawers on a blue runner. A similar runner covered the bureau.

Here was a guest room that would be sutable for friends of both the son and daughter of the house and for the friends of the older people.

But the room still lacked something. The family decided it was a desk and a book shelf. The mechanical-minded son built the bookshelves on either side and painted them to match the woodwork. A small table with a small drawer just fitted under this window and was equipped with a blue blotter pad and writing material. Another small table garnered from another room in the house was placed between the twin beds. On the table was a slender lamp with a parchment shade.

When there were women guests a feminine note was added by yellow organdie slumber pillows on the bed and a small dressing table with yellow organdie draperies and a three-way mirror with a little bench to match. This dressing table was brought into the room when there were women guests or stored in a nearby closet when the guests were men.

Purple Lame Skirt Goes With Green Lame Bodice

Stuffed Veal Basis of One-Dish Meal

This interesting platter of veal birds, parsley potato balls and glazed carrots is an ideal selection for the main course of a fall luncheon. It may be accompanied by assorted relishes. It may also be used for a family dinner with an appropriate entree and a seasonable apple dessert.

Lunch Platter of Veal Birds Is Appetizing for Fall Days

Raisin Stuffing Is Ideal Dressing; May Be Served With Potato Balls and Relishes or With Jellied Tomato Salad.

EVERYONE is back from vacation and getting together again to talk about the summer's doings. This brings about entertaining. If the occasion is a luncheon, a one-platter mean is a new and happy choice. Nothing could be more appealing than a platter of veal birds, parsley potato balls and glazed carrots, with a plate of asorted relishes. This could constitute the entire main course of the meal.

This main dish may also be used in a family dinner accompanied by jellied tomato with alligator pear salad instead of the relishes. A mushroom cocktail would be appropriate with such a meal. Apple strudel, using the now seasonable fruit, is a good dessert.

Veal birds are made from steaks which are cut from the leg of veal. These should be fairly thin in order to facilitate matters in wrapping the "birds." The steaks cut about three-eighths to one-half inch in thickness are considered best for this purpose because they are thin enough to wrap easily, yet thick enough to hold their shape.

Savory Bread Added.

The veal slices are cut into pieces for individual servings, as nearly three by four inches in size as possible. One tablespoon of savory bread dressing is piled on each piece, then the meat is rolled around it and fastened with toothpicks.

Cook the veal birds by braising. They are first dredged with flour and browned on all sides in hot lard, then a small amount of water is added, the skillet tightly covered, and the "birds" allowed to cook slowly until done, about 45 minutes.

Raisin stuffing is especially good with this meat but almost any dressing may be used.

Here is a recipe for raisin stuffing.

Raisin Stuffing.

2 slices bacon, diced
1-3 cup finely cut onion
½ cup chopped celery
1 cup seedless raisins
2 cups dry bread or cracker crumbs
½ cup meat stock
¼ teaspoon sage
Salt and pepper.

Brown diced bacon, add onion and allow this to cook until slightly browned. Add bread crumbs, celery, raisins, sage and salt and pepper. Moisten with meat stock and use for veal birds.

If an individual salad is used in place of the relishes, this recipe for jellied tomato with alligator pear salad may be used.

Jellied Tomato With Alligator Pear.

1 tablespoon gelatine in
2 tablespoons cold water. Heat to boiling point
½ cup tomato juice
Bit of bay leaf
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt and
1 tablespoon chopped onion

Add gelatine, stir until dissolved and strain. Add
1 cup cold tomato juice
3 tablespoons vinegar and
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Turn into individual ring molds or Mary Ann tins rinsed with cold water. Chill, turn out, fill center with Alligator pear, cut in dice, and top with mayonnaise.

Nothing is more appetizing at this time of the year than an apple dessert.

Apple Strudel.

Sift together
1 cup flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
1½ tablespoons sugar and ½ teaspoon salt. Work in
3 tablespoons shortening with pastry mixer. Beat
1 egg slightly, add
3 tablespoons milk and add enough of this mixture to dry ingredients to make a stiff dough. Roll about ¾ inch thick and brush with 2 tablespoons soft butter. Cover with
3 cups apples pared, cored, cut in pieces and mixed with 1-3 cup sugar
1-3 teaspoon cinnamon and
¼ teaspoon nutmeg. Roll like a jelly roll, put in baking dish, brush with egg and milk and bake at 400 F. for 45 minutes or until apples are cooked. Serve with frozen whipped cream.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Odd Behavior Not 'Nerves.'

Some of us are rather inclined to attribute everything that the rising generation does to nervousness—that is, any act that is the least bit out of the way. This includes bad conduct, temper tantrums, exhibitions of cruelty, disobedience, and even lying.

Simple Solution.

Temper tantrums are alarming now and then. Even a baby may be filled with rage and hold his breath until he becomes blue in the face or faints. Because of this "nervous" (?) habit parents are terrified and will "give in" no matter what the cost. No one can stop breathing and life will not be in danger. The simplest and best form of treatment is to ignore the tot. As soon as he discovers that the breath-holding stunt does not work it will be abandoned.

Those who are unduly petulant and fretful, and who show signs of constant unhappiness, are usually ill. If this is diagnosed as nervousness it is a mistake, as irritability nearly always means fatigue. First of all the physical state of the boy or girl should receive a careful check. Then the hours of sleep, of school work, and of other activities should be measured in terms of resistance. I have great sympathy for the lad who is urged to go beyond his capacity—unthinkingly, of course. Perhaps the school program should be reduced. Again, some youngsters will do well with eight or nine hours of sleep, while others will require ten or twelve.

Normally Cheerful.

Children possess normally sunny dispositions—that is, they will find cheer in the midst of poverty, distress, or even tragedy. They crave most of all a feeling of security, of permanence; a sense that father and mother will be with them as long as the need exists, and that they will back them in every worthy pursuit as far as circumstances permit. Parents who are domineering, or who engage in constant bickerings, may so cloud the horizons of their offsprings' lives as to crowd out the sunshine that strives to enter. The czaristic type crushes the spirit of his progeny.

Tic or spasms generally begin with an attempt to relieve some local irritation. As a result the lad blinks the eyes, stretches the mouth, or twists the head. He may perform the act so frequently that it finally becomes a mechanical movement—a habit. Most of these actions are controllable and are conquered as the child grows older. An eye-winking tic in an adult may present an embarrassing situation. In this connection we must make certain that the child is not suffering from chorea (St. Vitus' dance), as this affliction must be treated with bed rest, else heart damage may follow.

It is more difficult at times to restrain parents than it is to remold children and, all too often, if they are told the exact truth—namely: that the so-called nervous reactions are the result of bad home instruction; the physician's office and his advice may be abandoned in disgust.

Homemakers' Survey Shows Recipe Likes

CURIOUS to know just what inspired that "I want to try it" attitude in women when confronted with a new recipe, a radio survey was recently conducted in which homemakers were asked what they wanted in a recipe. The results from this survey were more than revealing.

Thirty-one per cent of the homemakers reported that they liked to try recipes which were new and different. The recipes, however, do not have to be brand new in all cases, for as one homemaker put it, "A new idea skillfully combined in a century-old recipe can bring a real surprise and thrill to my family." Another homemaker said that "a new recipe works like a tonic," while still another philosophizes, "I need to cook new foods just as a weaver must create new designs or an artist must create new pictures."

Economical recipes ranked second in the list, receiving consideration by 28 per cent of the homemakers. Recipes calling for expensive foods and foods out of season must very often be passed by simply because they do not jibe with the budget. That was true in the case of an Illinois woman who wrote that she simply couldn't afford to read or listen to a recipe which began with "take one avocado pear." It would have been different, however, had this woman lived in California where avocadoes are plentiful and inexpensive!

Simple, easy-to-make recipes also hold a distinct appeal for women, as 24 per cent considered this a determining factor. The saying of one reportee, "Don't use your head, use this recipe instead," may be taken to mean that recipes which require a minimum amount of "headwork" may be prepared quickly and easily and with a great deal of satisfaction. With bridge parties and club meetings to attend in the afternoons, women welcomed the time and energy saving recipes which gave them this freedom.

Thirteen per cent of the women stated their preference for recipes that contain only ingredients commonly found on the pantry shelf. And it was also found to be true that a woman's zest to try a recipe is lost when she finds that she must go out to the store and buy the ingredients. When a recipe appeals to the "recipe ear," the woman wants to be able to go out into her kitchen and try it immediately. The economy factor also entered in as the fact was pointed out that expensive ingredients undoubtedly rarely find their way to the pantry shelf.

Other "wants" which evolved from this survey are recipes for dishes tempting in appearance—12 per cent; well-seasoned recipes—11 per cent; healthful recipes—11 per cent; recipes which sound appetizing—6 per cent.

Change Suggested In Vegetable Menus

Cheese-Garnished Dish From Casserole Welcomed.

TRY a vegetable casserole for the evening meal and use your own ingenuity as to the combination of left-overs and what you may find on pantry shelf or market. Many consider it a delightful change from the usual vegetables served singly.

Such a dish is a standard formula in the menu plans of one excellent homemaker who adds a small amount of cheese, grated or chopped, to the prepared white sauce, and from a half to a cupful of sliced or chopped ripe olives, for the character they bestow on any of the various casseroles of which her family is fond.

One medley of vegetables which makes a homely standby in her meal planning consists of canned lima beans, freshly cooked or canned diced carrots, cut string beans, minced onion and whatever vegetable the refrigerator harbors from the dinner before, such as cooked cauliflower or celery, corn cut from the cob, zucchini or summer squash.

The vegetables are arranged in layers in a buttered casserole, each with a sprinkling of the minced onion. Over each layer goes a portion of the cheese-flavored white sauce to which chopped ripe olives have been added in sufficient amount to insure their characteristic flavor.

The top is covered with the usual buttered crumbs and subjected to 30 minutes of moderate oven heat.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should a Man Kiss a Girl Before Proposing, and if So, When and How Often, Girl Wants to Know.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a very simple question to ask, the answer to which may be of interest to a certain young man. I hope he reads it. My question is this: Should a young man kiss a girl before he proposes marriage to her? If it is all right for him to kiss her, when should he do so? Does he kiss her on arriving at her house, when leaving, or just any time? Please tell me what is corect. Very truly yours. L. B. R.

• • • •

DEAR L. B. R.: It is my understanding that in the majority of cases, the kiss comes first and the proposal, if any, follows afterward. As to whether this is right or wrong is a matter for the individual to decide. Morality, as I have pointed out here before, has to do with the quality or intention of an act. A girl intuitively knows when it is all right for a man to kiss her—and she also knows intuitively when it is all wrong for him to do so. She must let her own conscience be her guide in so intimate a matter.

• • • •

If there is a correct time for exchanging kisses during the course of a call, I never heard of it. However, it seems to me a kiss at meeting and parting might very suitably and naturally be exchanged between two persons who were fond of each other and on excellent terms of friendship. And in my opinion, that many kisses are enough for any one evening and any two persons who are only friends.

Another Job Seeker.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am seeking a position as companion-housekeeper, with either an elderly lady or a man. Can you assist me? I am a good housekeeper, know how to run a house that has one or more servants, and if given full charge, can get the work done well. I have done practical nursing; know how to care for children, because they are attracted to me and I love them, and, in fact, can do almost anything, though that may not be well to say in this day of specialization.

• • • •

Some months ago a radio speaker announced there were at least 60 cities in the United States needing visiting housekeepers. I wrote and asked the names of a few and in reply received a lot of pqpers from the Government, from some sort of welfare agency. That is as far from what I wanted as the north pole is from the south. I want work, not a job on the Government pay roll. I am cheerful, healthy, responsible; despise shirkers; and will thank you for any help you can give me. Sincerely yours,

CELIA B.

• • • •

DEAR CELIA B.: I am not conducting an employment agency, as readers of this column must well know by now. But if you are a first-class housekeeper, capable of keeping a large establishment running smoothly, you should have no difficulty finding a place. Turn to the classified directory of the telephone book and make a list of employment agencies which market the wares of persons like yourself. Put your name on file with them, and keep after their placement bureaus until they find you the family you want. That is the only solution of your problem, as I see it. M. H.

Interested in Study.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: From whom can I obtain practical suggestions for reading matter in connection with the management of a tea room or small restaurant? I am interested in studying the subject as thoroughly as I can this winter, including buying of foods, various arrangements of kitchens and dining rooms, types of furnishings for both and dietetics. I have received a catalogue—sent at my request—from the Lewis Hotel Institute but don't feel I can invest in their course just now. I believe I can acquire what I want through my own efforts if I can be put in touch with someone on whose advice I can depend. I shall be most grateful for any information you can give me. Sincerely yours,

EDNA H.

DEAR EDNA H.: The food specialist on this newspaper tells me the best way to acquire the information you want is to get a job in a well-established tea room, cafeteria or restaurant. She tells me a friend of hers with a similar ambition is now working in the tea room of a local department store, where she is getting experience in the kitchen, in the bakery, in the employes' cafeteria, behind the bakery counter of the store itself, and as hostess in the tea room.

You might write Miss Dorothy Lindfest, secretary of the American Dietetics Association, 185 North Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill., asking her for information and sources of information; and put the same request to Miss Florence Quast, of Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y. Miss Quast has a very lengthy title, but her position, as I understand it, is chairman of the Institute of Administration of the American Home Economics Association.

• • • •

It also has been suggested that you might get some helpful pamphlets by calling in person at the Office of Information, Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture. This office is located in Room 6058 of the south building, so-called, where stacks of pamphlets are available for public inspection and from which you may choose those interesting to you.

M. H.

Slim Figure Conceals Age

NO ONE THINKS about age in connection with a woman who keeps fairness both of face and of figure. But sometimes in her efforts to keep her face fresh and youthful—a woman overlooks the real charm of a well-poised body; a graceful carriage; a light, girlish step. Yet these qualities are attributes that every woman may keep or cultivate.

But you must really want them enough to try for them. You can't sit back and keep youth. You must eat right, exercise according to need, keep your mind open to interests outside your home.

Hold your body erect while sitting, standing or walking. Breathe deeply. This is particularly important for keeping the breast firm and uplifted—good posture and right breathing strengthen the pectoral muscles—an important factor in holding the breast in proper position.

Try to walk more. Three miles a day for a woman in good health is not too much. And it will do wonders for the figure. Gardening will correct that tendency of the upper arm to grow large and flabby.

It's important to know just what kind of exercise to take. Our 40-page illustrated booklet, "Beauty for the Mature Woman," tells what exercises are best for various parts of the body. Correct posture, care of skin and hair, too. A treasure trove on cultivating charm.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Beauty for the Mature Woman," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Mother Urged Not To Make Books Boring

Reading Aloud Should Be Omitted Unless It's a Pleasure.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. B considered it her duty to read aloud to the children for an hour every day. It was a sense of duty which prompted her. She felt that so much labor on her part should show results; so before the reading started she conducted an examination on what had been read the day before.

If one of the children had been inattentive or had for some reason failed to understand the reading, it had to be repeated, much to the annoyance of the other listeners. Frequently mother closed the book in annoyance and read a lecture to the assembled group, after which the reading was called off for the day, and everyone was left with a sense of failure.

Mrs. B wondered why the youngsters did not like to be read to. She had heard that through reading to children one gave them a taste of the right books. Other children looked forward to mother's reading aloud, hers dreaded and disliked it.

If children are to like and enjoy books their first association with them must be pleasant. Whether they understand and remember all that they have heard does not matter. Much of it will slip by and leave no apparent impression. What and how much they remember depends in part on the reader, but chiefly on the individual listener.

Never should the occasion be made one of effort or boredom to the child. If he does not like or understand the book, lay it aside and start another. No one can force a child to take in subject-matter which he does not want.

To make a duty of reading aloud is generally unfortunate. The mother who cannot do it with pleasure had better not do it at all or else find books which will entertain her as well as the children. The choice of books available is large enough to appeal to both young and old.

Silver Fox Capes Popular as Wraps For the Theater

The opening of the theater season both in New York and Washington has emphasized the importance of fur capes as evening wraps. Among the more resplendent of these have been white chiffons or satins topped by ermine capes. Cape lengths varied from above the waistline to the floor.

Silver fox capes also are popular. Many of these descend in a cutaway line to below knee length. Most of the silver fox models paired with black satin or black crepe, also many black printed gowns appear with silver fox capes.

Homemaking Art Projected Into Business

By Elizabeth Young.

BECAUSE a girl is a born housekeeper, as they used to say, doesn't mean she can't succeed in the business world. On the contrary, her home-loving heart may be the very reason why she can. What the business world needs is more and better housekeepers, according to broad-browed, friendly-eyed Marie Sullivan, an Irish girl who is official housekeeper for Eastern Airlines, and a pleasing combination of Park avenue chic and Middlewestern horse sense.

Miss Sullivan flew down to Washington from New York this week to pay her first official visit to the National Capital in her new capacity.

As women big shots go, Marie Sullivan can measure glances with the best, and she attributes it all to what she learned from her mother, who mothered eight. She learned how to keep house, how to bring order and comfort and beauty into being in her immediate surroundings; how to plan meals, hold expenses down, make people happy. The net result is that six months ago she was made director of the just-created woman's department of Eastern Air Lines; the first woman executive of any air line in the world.

Feminine Contribution.

But Miss Sullivan doesn't think of herself, doesn't speak of herself, as a director or as an executive. "I am official housekeeper for Eastern Air Lines," she says with a twinkle in her eye. "I am doing to a great extent the things my mother taught me around the house. I think every woman could go farther and get ahead faster in the business world if she took the homemaking arts more seriously; if she realized she has more to contribute as a woman than she has as a competitor of man."

Miss Sullivan's contribution to the field of aviation is a purely feminine contribution. She isn't a pilot and doesn't know any more about the mechanism of a ship than the average woman. But she got her present job because she had the intelligence to observe and the courage to tell aviation executives that they were concentrating on speed and safety of planes to the exclusion, in large measure, of beauty and comfort.

She was already housekeeping in the business world on a large scale when she made this observation. She was director of the woman's department of Palmer House in Chicago. Her work of making Palmer House attractive to guests, and of persuading guests to come and test its hospitality, took her all over the United States. All her traveling was done by plane. She observed that planes and airports could be improved upon in the matters of food, beauty, comfort and opportunities for diversion by travelers by plane.

Advice to Passengers.

Many aviation executives stopped at Palmer House. She got to know most of them well. She gave them her opinions for what they were worth. She took it as matter of course when they lapped up her criticism and suggestions; and when several aviation lines began bidding for her services as "official housekeeper." She has always been completely sold on the contribution a woman has to make—as a woman—to business and professional enterprises.

Now that she is working for Eastern Air Lines, she pokes her nose into the sort of food that is served in the air; into the color scheme and furnishing of plane interiors; into the games and diversions that adults and children can pass the time with, as they speed from place to place through the clouds; into the comforts provided at airports. She conducts an advisory service, telling passengers what to wear on the plane, how to pack, what sort of luggage to buy, what sort of wardrobe to take along. If the prospective passenger is a woman she can tell her, down to such intimate minutae as petticoat, step-in and eyedropper, just what and how much she will need to look her best every minute of any air journey, be it three hours or three months in duration. She can tell her where to buy it and how much it will probably cost.

Her Baggage Restricted.

Miss Sullivan, who, when interviewed, was traveling on 35 pounds of luggage and was setting out on the first leg of a many-thousand-mile jaunt, looked tremendously smart in a black wool ensemble and small black hat. She advocates dress-and-jacket ensembles for women travelers by air. And she has learned from experience that she can be on the road six weeks and arrive home fresh, rested and immaculate if she travels by air. "It's the cleanness, the coolness of the upper air, which is so easy on one's cosmetics and one's clothes," she said.

Born in St. Paul, Minn., and educated at Northwestern University, Miss Sullivan went knocking on the doors of the business world in 1921, just after graduation. General Motors let her in as clerk in its New York offices. Time passed and she became secretary to one of the vice presidents of the company. But she wasn't happy. She wasn't housekeeping. So in 1928 she pulled out and returned to Chicago to become director of Blackstone Hall, a girls' dormitory on the campus of Chicago University. She was there until 1932, when she went to Palmer House to give it the benefit of a homemaking woman's touch.

And from Palmer House, by easy stages, she progressed to her happiest job of all—that of being the world's first housekeeper for aviation.

First Official Housekeeper for Aviation

As director of the recently created Woman's Department of the Eastern Air Lines, Miss Marie Sullivan, above, is the world's first official housekeeper for aviation. Born in St. Paul, Minn., Miss Sullivan is a pleasing combination of Park avenue chic and Middlewestern horse sense.

Buttons Being Added To Leather Ensembles

Paris (AP).—The makers of leather belts and bags have added another item to their ensemble sets. Buttons are now admitted into the combinations, playing their ensemble roles, especially with belts. Two large green enamel leaves form the clasp for a green suede belt, and are echoed in slightly smaller form in the row of buttons down the front of the frock.

Contrast of Color Characterizes Hat

Vionnet Changes Silhouette Styles

Paris (U.P.).—Henna brown and burnt orange are the two new shades stressed by Vionnet in her new fall and winter collection. These soft autumn shades are well adapted to tweed sports clothes and are shown in two and three piece tailored suits, simple woolen street dresses and even in afternoon clothes combined with brown or black.

The Vionnet silhouette has been slightly changed in that skirts are fuller and a bit longer—coming to well below the mid-calf line. Broadened and padded sleeves are used throughout to emphasize the shoulder line and many of the sleeves are fashioned loose and open at the wrist.

Street and afternoon dresses are made with severely high necks in front which are often caught down with clips of brilliants. These necklines dip slightly in back to form a V shape. Coats and dresses are almost invariably belted in leather and wide bands of patent leather are cut into leaf-shape patterns to form belts on evening gowns.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"NO MATTER how nice the furniture is in a room, I get tired of it ever so often and try to think up ways of making it seem different," Nell said when we dropped by her house last week. She was explaining why she had done her bedroom over from head to foot.

"I couldn't afford a new bed, of course, and I'm not sure I'd want to, anyway," she went on. "But I did feel in the mood for something a bit different, so I got Frank to build a frame at the back, then I fixed some draperies . . . I'm quite proud of the effect."

We didn't blame her. The bed itself had a spread of white dotted swiss with red binding. The dotted swiss was hung rather full just back of the bed, then draperies and valance were made of an awfully sweet flowered chintz. The walls of this room were done in blotting paper blue with a white painted dado all around the lower part of the wall. The curtains were of white dotted swiss bound in red and no draperies at all were used. One easy chair and a tiny love seat were upholstered in the same chintz as was used on the bed draperies . . . the dressing table skirt was also flowered.

The rug was a room-sized floral hooked design in flowery colors—very pretty, and the wood of the floor was stained quite dark. She had mostly milk glasses for lamps and accessories along with some pieces of ruby glass.

The closet for this room was adorable . . . white wall paper with an all-over sprigged floral in deep blue. Then bright red edgings for the shelves, bright red garment bags and bright red hat boxes and shoe bags.

Parents Face Duty in Aiding Clumsy Child

Should Talk Over Troubles With Boy or Girl and Offer a Cure.

"The dread of being left out of the shining circle is humiliating and painful," writes Mrs. Fisher in the October issue of the Parents Magazine. "Although this period is outgrown as surely as an attack of the measles, it is just as uncomfortable while it lasts.

"And, just as for measles, there are definite palliatives for the ache of apparent unpopularity. Probably the most important is to hold the patient's confidence—let him feel that he can talk it over with a mother and father who really understand, and who realize, moreover, that the 'illness' won't last forever.

"Another remedy is to show him that he is not alone in his misery. One of the obsessions usually a part of this period is the failure to observe the existence of any people of their own age except the glittering, noisy, socially-mature group, usually absurdly small compared to the large number of boys and girls very much like your own, wistfully looking in on the whirlers from the outside. One thing you can do for them is to call their attention to the large numbers of others like themselves."

A third part of Mrs. Fisher's prescription is to give the awkward boy or girl every opportunity to excel in at least one sport—to become a better-than-average dancer. "The boy or girl who is a good dancer," she suggests, "is not ignored by the slick, wise-cracking, early-ripe social leaders in high school, even if he or she is also intelligent, well-bred and partly civilized. They will overlook and partly forgive good marks in school, the pleasant shyness of manner which we older people like to see, and unshakable integrity of character, if the intelligent girl is also a first-rate diver."

Another good soothing lotion is to provide plenty of social occasions in which the "half-ripe young folks" are not handicapped. Swimming parties, hikes, picnics, to which the crowd will be invited.

"In this phase," concludes Mrs. Fisher, "you are in the situation of our pioneer ancestresses, who took their children through measles and chicken pox by the light of nothing more than their own ingenuity, steadfastness, courage and devotion. Here's a chance to live up to your great-grandmother, and to have something of her firm faith in the mighty power of growth, which carries youth through even the blackest of its troubles."

New Knits Merge With Fur

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

By Alice Hughes.

WHENEVER I am gripped by sadness over the seeming perishability of our so-called fragile sex—our tragic tendency to bulge, creak and generally fall apart without warning—I go at once to wherever Ina Claire is and take a good, long look. She's the silver lining, the break in the clouds, is the Fagan girl from Washington.

INA CLAIRE

Such an opportunity offered on the Normandie on our way back from London, and I spent a happy afternoon with her in the smoking room over a noggin or two, asking and just staring. Her amazing sparkle is undimmed, her slim and lovely figure makes that of the average deb look like a sack of oats, and her quick wit continues to give her that champagne quality which brought her fame on the stage and in drawing rooms. And, of course, her taste in dress is probably tops among women of the theater.

I asked her if she had bought much in Paris this year. "Lord, no!" crackled Ina. "I spent one day in Paris and didn't buy a thing. Nothing can approach American clothes—I buy 'em all in New York." She says slimming is easy, but that most women are too darned lazy to stick to it—not enough character. She talked cheerily of her forthcoming tour in "End of Summer," being a real trouper as well as a social tonic to beat wine.

• • • •

All this time my poor demented spouse was prancing and smirking in the background, he having loved the Fagan girl these many years. Ina's a phenomenon in the mid-forties—vivid proof of what women can do if they have the pep and determination to stay their best the longest possible time. Incidentally—though, of course, I didn't ask—I hear that her romance with the handsome Prince Lichentstein still flames. Oh my, what a girl!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—There is a report that Peter Arno, one of the men about town, as well as the noted cartoonist, is not on terms of the most complete amity with his present and second wife, the former "Timmie" Lansing. His first was Lois Long, hte "Lipstick" and style reporter of the New Yorker. Be that as it may, the dashing Pete has just taken a six-room penthouse at Eighty-third and Park. I can't imagine Arno and his smart art living anywhere but in a penthouse, somehow! . . .

Local dog-lovers are slightly agog over the arrival from England of Mr. Ward Binks, said to be the greatest living painter of canines of all types. Maestro Binks is at present completing a series of portraits of the aristocratic pooches owned by Mrs. Hartley Dodge, in nearby Jersey. . . . Ishbel Ross, author of "Ladies of the Press," was guest of honor at the luncheon of The Woman Pays Club. Present were many of the gals she wrote up, including Mary Margaret McBride, Emma Bugbee, Rita Weiman and Lililan Lauferty. The only flaw in Ishbel's book is that it lacks a chapter on the author herself—one of the best reporters the New York Herald-Tribune ever had . . .

• • • •

I can't help smypathizing with Queen Mary, now that after 25 years in Buckingham Palace she moves as Queen-Mother into Marlborough House and leaves "Buck House" to her Davy. Buckingham was just a modest little hovel, but it WAS home! . . . I discovered in London that Lupe Whoopee Valez now has so many diamond bracelets she can no longer bend her right elbow. Lupe's two passions in frippery are these things and fur coats, of which she has at least 25. London, by the way, is forever startled by the antics of the Mexican jumping-bean—but thinks her right cute, at that . . .

• • • •

When Mrs. Beryl Markahm gets back from England she will cash in on her Atlantic hop by touring the big towns on behalf of a waterproofing process for garments. Even "flying mothers," it appears, must live.

• • • •

If the occasional "British complexion" is thrilling, the average female figure in Lunnon is not. The architecture of English women seems less satisfactory than that of the American school. As a breed they seem to run to narrow shoulders, flatness of chest, lanky legs and, alas, biggish feet. Exceptions, as usual, but prove the rule. So let the Eagle scream a bit if it likes!

Manila Crowds Will Give Ekins Huge Welcome

Flying Writer Hops From Dutch Borneo in Trip Around World.

By the United Press.

Balik Papan, Dutch Borneo, (Saturday) Oct. 10.—More than 5,000 miles ahead of two other New York newspaper writers in a race around the world in commercial aircraft, H. R. Ekins, of The New York World-Telegram — Scripps-Howard newspapers, took off at 7:20 a. m. today (6:50 p. m. EST Friday) for Manila.

The big Douglas monoplane of the Royal Netherlands Indian Airways (Knilm Lines) was expected in the Philippines capital this evening—six days ahead of Ekins' scheduled connection with Pan American Airways China Clipper, which leaves Manila for San Francisco at 2 a. m. local time, October 16.

On a slower schedule of the British Imperial Airways Ekins' rival air racers—Dorothy Kilgallen, of the New York Journal—International News Service and Leo Kieran, of The New York Times—NANA Service—were at Jodhpur, India, due to take off at dawn for Calcutta and Rangoon. They faced a desperate struggle against odds to reach Hongkong, British crown colony in South China in time to catch a steamer there for Manila to make connections with the transpacific China Clipper. Both were confident, however, that they would be in Manila on time.

The three fliers started from Lakehurst on the dirigible Hindenburg at 11:17.27 p. m., September 30.

Manila prepared an elaborate welcome for the Scripps-Howard racer, who formerly was manager of the United Press offices there. Military planes will escort the Dutch airliner into the capital, where representatives of President Manuel Quezon and other officials will greet Ekins and escort him to the presidential residence, Malacanan Palace.

Mayor Pasadas will present Ekins with keys to the city and Ekins will deliver to President Quezon a letter of felicitation on the opening of transpacific air service from President Roosevelt.

Parker Aids Named As Wendel Plotters

Newark, N. J., Oct. 9 (AP).—John ... Quinn, United States attorney, charged at a criminal hearing today that Mrs. Anna Bading and G. Clinton Zeller had gone to New York last February "to hatch the Wendel conspiracy."

The two he accused, both under arrest on perjury charges, are aids of Ellis H. Parker, sr., chief of Burlington County detectives and noted "country" sleuth who conducted an independent investigation of the Lindbergh-Hauptmann case for Gov. Harold G. Hoffman.

Paul H. Wendel charged he was abducted in New York February 1 and tortured into making a false confession that he kidnaped the Lindbergh baby. His statement, since repudiated, delayed the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann as the kidnap-killer for three days.

Convinced there was more to be learned, the Federal grand jury dropped plans to end its inquiry into the Wendel case this afternoon and recessed while agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation ran down additional leads.

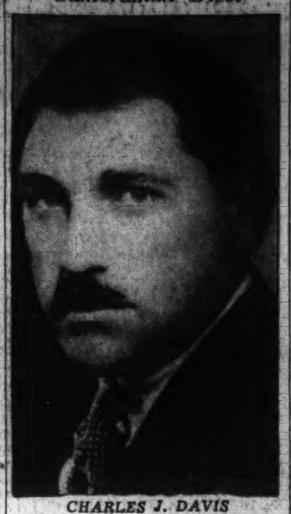
Cameraman Dies.



CHARLES J. DAVIS

Charles Davis Dies; Pioneer Newsreel Man

Veteran Photographer Had Pictured American, European Leaders.

Charles J. Davis, of 5428 Nebraska avenue, pioneer sound cameraman, employe of Fox Movietone News and a member of the White House Photographers Association, died at George Washington University Hospital yesterday at 6:10 a. m. after an illness following an operation a week ago.

He was born in Brooklyn in 1891, the son of John and Sarah Bethel Davis. As a boy he became interested in motorcycle racing, and in 1913 won the title of world champion motorcyclist.

He began his photographer's career with the old Vitagraph Co. in New York in 1915, working with such stars as Anita Stewart, Hope Hampton, Corinne Griffith, Edith Storey, Ralph Ince, John Charles Thomas.

In 1918, he went with E. A. Neuman to Europe and made a series of Neuman "Travel-Talks" based on war-time scenes in England, France and Italy. Granted the privilege of taking his camera to the front, Mr. Davis recorded many trench-line scenes that no other newsreel man had the opportunity to film. He also visited munitions plants throughout Europe while connected with the gas defense division of the U. S. Army Chemical Warfare Service making many films now on file at the War Department.

He returned to the United States after the war and worked on film productions for a time and then went back to England in 1920 as the chief cinematographer of "On the Road to London," a Bryant Washburn production, finished in California.

A pioneer operator of sound cameras, he filmed such dignitaries as King George, Sir Oliver Lodge, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, George Bernard Shaw and royalty throughout Europe the first time their voices were ever recorded in newsreel. He was also the first to photograph with sound the Olypmic games.

Since 1929 he had lived in Washington and had filmed figures of national and international importance. He had made many trips with Presidential parties across the country and to other shores. In 1931 he went with Mr. Hoover on his Caribbean cruise and on campaign trips later. He had accompanied President Roosevelt on many of his trips, and this past summer went with him on tours to Texas, to Maine, and, more recently, to Hyde Park.

Mr. Davis was a member of the American Society of Cinematographers, the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes, the White House Photographers Association and the Columbia Country Club.

He ies survived by his widow, Mrs. Mae Hanlon Davis, and two daughters, Dorothy Bethel, 19, and Edith Mae, 14. Funeral services will be held at the Hines funeral home at 11 a. m. Monday. Pallbearers will be Washington newsreel men and C. E. Carter, of New York.

Austrian Chief Spurns Cabinet Offer to Resign

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Oct. 9.—A chancellory spokesman tonight revealed that all members of the Austrian cabinet offered their resignations to Chancellor Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg during a lengthy session devoted to the Heimwehr crisis.

It was indicated Dr. Schuschnigg had refused to accept the resignations.

The spokesman said Prince Ernst Von Starhemberg and Dr. Schuschnigg made peace two weeks ago whereby Von Starhemberg was to become head of the new militia, dropping his leadership of the Heimwehr, his private army, which would be incorporated into the militia or disbanded.

Von Starhemberg, however, it was stated, changed his mind today after conferences with his followers and now demands leadership of the militia and the Heimwehr as well as the vice chancellorship. This would mean a return to the "dual control" which Dr. Schuschnigg tried to wipe out in the rebuilding of the cabinet last May.

The spokesman said Vice Chancellor Eduard Baar-Baarenfels, Minister of Finance Ludwig Draxler and Minister of Commerce Fritz Stockinger, all Heimwehrmen, first offered their resignations and then the rest of the cabinet followed suit.

President Wilhelm Miklas arrived at the heavily guarded chancellory tonight where the cabinet has been considering the Heimwehr crisis for the last three days.

The tense situation in Austria's political affairs arose when Von Starhemberg ordered the expulsion of his archrival Major Emil Fey, former vice chancellor of Austria, and Fey retorted by announcing he would seize leadership of the Vienna Heimwehr.

Democrat Accused Of Ballot Forgery

Pittsburgh, Oct. 9 (AP).—James G. Legnard, member of the Pittsburgh registration commission, resigned today after charges were filed against him in connection with the alleged forging of the name of Ernest T. Weir, steelman, on a registration slip.

Roman Maffei, clerk in the registration office, also was charged with fraudulently making, signing, altering and publishing the application by Weir for reinstatement as a voter.

Weir is chairman of the Republican national finance committee and chairman of the National Steel Corporation.

Legnard, a Democrat, said after his resignation:

"In regard to Mr. Weir's reinstatement, all that I have to say is that I am absolutely innocent of any wrong doing. However, because of the circumstances I am asking the Governor to relieve me of my duties until this matter is cleared up."

Knox Opens Drive For N. Y. Votes

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Republican nominee for Vice President, opened a drive for New York support today by declaring "the virus theatening to destroy European civilization" has been brought to this country.

"There are men and women, some in high public office," Knox said in his first talk in the Metropolitan New York area, "who have brought here concepts of concentrated authority that would destroy our democracy."

The Chicago publisher spoke before a luncheon in Pomonok Country Club near Flushing, in Queens County.

"What is happening in Spain," he said, "is the direct result of years of teaching class hatred. Europe is divided into armed camps, over communism or fascism. We have escaped the worst forms of this struggle, but not completely."

E. D. Hardy, 72, Water System Engineer, Dies

Death Occurs in California of Heart Disease; Was D. C. Official.

Edward Dana Hardy, 72, engineer, who directed construction of the modern water filtration systems in the District, died of a heart attack Wednesday in San Diego, Calif., it was learned here yesterday.

Mr. Hardy retired two years ago from his position as chief engineer at Washington Aqueduct. He had gone to San Diego to spend the winter.

A native of New Hampshire and a graduate of the Thayer School of Civil Engineering at Dartmouth College, Mr. Hardy was appointed in 1898 to make a study of the water system here. He was engineer in charge of building the McMillan Filtration Plant and later designed and constructed a new supply and purification system for the city's water.

During his early career he took part in river and harbor work and assisted in filling in land to create Potomac Park.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Noud Hardy; three daughters, Mrs. Helen Schreiner, of Washington, Mrs. Margaret Tompkins, of Norbeck, Md. and Mrs. Dorothy Francis, of Woodbury, N. J., and six grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were not known here last night.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Giovanni Martinelli, tenor, in a song recital at Constitution Hall, assisted by Inez Lauritano, violinist. Accompanists Emilio Roxas and Sergius Kagen. Program: For voice—"L'Absence" (Berlioz), "Nuit d'Etoiles" (Debussy), "Berceuse Amoureuse" (Roxas), "O Paradiso" from "L'Africana" (Meyerbeer), "Ideale" (Tosti), "E lucevan le stelle" from "Tosca" (Puccini), "Mattinata" (Leoncavallo), "Vaghissima Sembianza" (Donaudy), "Dieu que ma voix tremblante" from "La Juive" (Halevy), "Celeste Aida" (Verdi); for violin—Concerto in A minor (Glazunov), "Nigun" (Bloch), "Ritual Fire Dance" (De Falla-Kochanski), "Perpetuum Mobile" (Ries).

Although rain had a retarding effect upon the proceedings last night by interfering with a prompt assemblage, the audience that finally gathered in Constitution Hall was of a size to extend to Giovanni Martinelli the welcome that he deserved.

The tenor was in excellent voice and in the mood for displaying its sonority in generous measure. One feels that the formality of the recital platform is a little alien to his intensely dramatic temperament, imposing limitations from which the operatic stage frees him, but the purely lyric portion of his program was the more enjoyable because those very restrictions served to bring out the tender tone of which he is capable.

It was in the operatic arias that the clarity and steadiness of his open tone aroused one's admiration. Every note was firmly supported by the breath with the result that the tone was both limpid and stentorian. Not the slightest trace of tremolo impaired the solidity of its timber. Not without reason does Mr. Martinelli stand as an examplar of the heroic type of singing.

Inez Lauritano has a talent which made her a worthy associate of her more illustrious colleague. While playing against the disadvantage of an atmospheric humidity unfriendly to strings, she maintained a fine intonation. Her technical skill is admirable and she applies it to the difficulties in hand with an easy grace.

There are passages in the Glazunov concerto which call for an expertise beyond the average, and she met the demand with confidence. Sergius Kagen was a sympathetic and alert accompanist.

Chief of Staff Apprehensive Over Europe

By the Associated Press.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 9.—Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff of the United States Army, asserted here today the United States would be "remiss" if it did not view apprehensively the situation in other countries "where actual or threatened strife is a reality."

"We hope that by improving our defenses we may occupy a position of readiness which will make our involvement in war less probable," Gen. Craig said in an address prepared for the annual convention of the National Guard Association of the United States.

"The realm of foreign affairs is not the province of the military man," he said. "His duty, however, is to prepare for any eventuality. You and I sincerely hope for continued peace, and we can aid greatly in preserving peace by contributing to the efficiency of our national defense to the limit of our ability."

Asserting "the success or failure of troops in action is due almost entirely to the quality of leadership they possess," Gen. Craig said "our task then is to develop leadership.

"I know of no finer thing that can be done by our association than to foster the training of young men for military leadership."

Second Edith Maxwell Fund Of The Post Nears $200 Mark

With Edith Maxwell's second trial on a charge of killing her father with a slipper set for November 16, five weeks away, The Post's new defense fund approached the $200 mark yesterday.

In her first trial at Wise, Va., the 22-year-old Cumberland Mountain school teacher was convicted of first-degree murder and sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary, although she pleaded that she struck her father with the slipper while he, in a drunken rage, was beating her.

Post readers contributed nearly $1,000 to help Miss Maxwell win a new trial, and Charles Henry Smith, noted Alexandria attorney, agreed to take over her defense. Thanks to the financial aid and Smith's efforts, the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals ordered a new trial, saying that the first-degree murder verdict and the 25-year sentence were not justified by the evidence.

The $1,000 originally subscribed was nearly exhausted in the fight for further contributions to finance for a new trial; hence the appeal the second trial.

Enclosed find—as a contribution to the Edith Maxwell Defense Fund to be used by The Washington Post in her retrial.

Trout Dole

The Bureau of Fisheries has a perplexing "trout dole" problem on its hands which may require all of Acting Comptroller-General Elliott's legal astuteness to solve.

One day during the summer a visitor to the bureau's trout station in Mount Rainier National Park, Washington, decided to find out whether the reaction of the fish to the State sales tax was the same as that of the citizens by tossing a sales tax token worth one-fifth of a cent into the pond. The resulting commotion inspired other visitors to do likewise.

The token-tossing went on for several days—the largest trout dole for a single day being 19. In all 40 tokens have been salvaged by station workers. Now to dispose of these tokens, worth all of eight cents, is what is worrying John Pelnar, who is in charge of the station.

Bureau of Fisheries people feel that morally the proceeds should be spent on the fish in some way. But can they authorize its expenditure in view of the comptroller-general's decisions that no agency can spend funds not authorized by Congress?

Yaden and Babcock

James G. Yaden's joining up with Babcock's United Civil Service Employes Association isn't likely to have much, if any, effect on the A. F. G. E. situation.

Yaden's motives in joining Babcock's organization and accepting the position as civic relations counsel probably can be summed up as a deep, personal friendship for Babcock and a general liking to join organizations. Yaden is also a member of the N. F. F. E. and is active in the affairs of the Citizens Association.

Besides, at present, there is no conflict between the A. F. G. E. and the U. C. S. E. What may develop is of course uncertain, but as long as Babcock concentrates on the adjustment of the grievances and problems of individual members, there should be room enough for both organizations.

U. S. C. E. members may not realize it, but that discriminating "gentleman's agreement" adopted by the membership council may blow the organization sky-high.

Medicine

Tomorrow at 10:30 the United States Office of Education and the Smithsonian Institution will outline the history of medicine in a radio broadcast. Whether or not you listen to the broadcast, you should drop in at the Smithsonian's Arts and Industries Building and see some of the weird things that have been used by doctors of ancient times—and not so long ago.

The Smithsonian's medicine exhibit starts with a show case of some magic medicines used by primitive natives—as fine a collection of New Year's Eve favors, from animal masks and rattles to cramp bones and mad stones—as you ever saw. In another case is an exhibit of various animal parts that have been used to heal the sick, including bear's claws, charred monkey skulls, dried frogs, elephant's hide, ox gall and dragon's teeth.

The earliest kind of pills, silvered and gilded, are shown in the exhibit of Arabian medicine; Biblical pharmaceuticals such as "The Balm of Gilead" are in the Egyptian and Hebrew case; the work of Hippocrates in the Roman and Greek section, and the healing herbs that Hiawatha picked on the shores of Gitche-Gumee in the Indian medicine collection.

Dr. Charles Whitebread, who is head of the division of medicine, then led us to a showcase containing what seemed to be a collection of rusted mechanics tools. There were saws and pliers and cruel-looking knives. The tools, however, Dr. Whitebread informed us, had been used by doctors in this country as late as 1871. Among the other intriguing surgical instruments was a tooth-pulling key that would make pyorrhea a blessing, a teakettle through which pills could be given patients without their knowledge, and a collection of "improved" medicine spoons that would do credit to Rube Goldberg.

The organization meeting of the new American Legion Post of AAA and other Federal workers, proposed by Col. George V. Whitton, will be held at 5 p. m. today at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marine Club, 1015 L street northwest.

A Virginia travelogue will be shown at the conclusion of the first fall meeting of the Treasury Department Local of the N. F. F. E. Monday night at the Fourteenth street headquarters . . . The Social Security Board Union is searching its ranks for an embryonic Culbertson to handle the Union's bridge activities . . . Labor Lodge, No. 12, of the A. F. G. E., will picnic in Rock Creek Park Saturday afternoon, October 24.

A civil service and legislation research committee is to be created by WPA lodge, No. 139. At its last meeting a civic relations committee was set up with Sidney Katz as chairman and Arthur Stein as president, Roland Gibson, vice president, and Morton Friedman, treasurer, all re-elected, and Louise Krueger, corresponding secretary; Helen Bricker, recording secretary, and Irving Price, financial secretary.

P. U. C. Asks New Taxicab Regulations

Roberts Threatens Move to Restore Meters in Cabs Here.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday renewed its plea for legislation "to regulate the taxicab industry more fully than permitted by existing law," in its annual report to Congress. It also respected its demand for financial responsibility for taxicab operators.

At the same time the commission appeared unconcerned over the threat of People's Counsel William A. Roberts to lead a campaign for abolition of the legislative ban on meter operation of taxicabs.

Vice Chairman Richmond B. Keech said that should Congress decide to remove the rider that has been attached to the District appropriations act annually for the last several years, the commission probably would be forced to draft some form of meter order because of the decisions of the District Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals in a test case of the commission's former meter order.

"There hasn't been a time in years that the taxicab industry has been more stable and when there have been fewer complaints from either the public or the operators," Keech stated.

While there are practically no complaints now, Keech recalled that a few years ago the taxicab industry was in a chaotic state, torn by rate wars, and with complaints pouring in from patrons, particularly against meter cabs.

"We do think, however, that there are too many cabs on the streets and that they should be reduced gradually so as not to throw any operator out of employment," Keech said.

The commission declined to comment on Roberts' suggestion that his office should be abolished because of conflicts with the regulatory body unless he be given an investigational staff.

It was recalled, however, that when Roberts was special assistant counsel of the commission he urged the abolition of the office of people's counsel as an unnecessary and wasteful agency.

The commission's report showed that the eight public utilities collected revenue aggregating $40,894,194 during the calendar year 1935. This was $3,553,319 more than the combined income for 1934.

Operating expenses amounted to $27,541,805, an increase of $2,962,123 over the preceding year.

Red Cross Enrolls 3,901 Despite Rain

Despite the dreary downpour, the total in the Red Cross roll call campaign reached 37,556 yesterday, with 3,901 additional new members over the previous day.

Booth enrollment has increased by 50 per cent in the past 24 hours, it was announced last night, when this group counted 300 more memberships.

The first large division in the entire campaign organization to go over its quota was reported last night when the financial committee, headed by Robert Fleming, president of the Riggs Bank, topped its goal with 2,191 members reported.

Reports of satisfactory progress came from the General Business Group. John Saul, chairman, addressing a meeting of his workers at the University Club, said that many business houses are waiting to complete their canvasses before reporting.

Returns yesterday placed the Government enrollment at 28,300; utilities, 1,317; professional, 1,775; business, 1,760; residential, 709; booths, 535, and miscellaneous, 966.

The first session of the F. B. I. school began on July 29, 1935, and was so successful a second was inaugurated January 6, this year.

Diplomats and Civic Leaders To View Halloween Parade

"While witches ride" on the night of October 31, a distinguished list of diplomats, statesmen, civic leaders and mayors from nearby towns will witness the Washington Halloween celebration that will feature a coronation ceremony and a mammoth parade.

Yesterday at a luncheon of the committee in charge of the affair, headed by Edward G. Bliss, it was announced that plans to make the affair the most outstanding in many years are well under way. Floodlights will be provided for the parade from Fourteenth to Seventeenth streets along Constitution avenue. Orange lights strung over the trees and decorations for the reviewing stand will introduce a note of color in keeping with the event.

Members of the Junior Board of Trade have been invited to act as hosts for the celebration, and transportation to the reviewing stand is being arranged for the 125 honor guests. Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch heads the sub-committee that will select the queen and Harold Allen Long is in charge of the coronation.

The parade will have among its unusual features 15 huge inflated "animals" operated by 60 men. Commercial floats, civic and non-commercial floats, costumed group marchers, decorated private vehicles, costumed individual marchers and bands will make up the parade. A trophy will be awarded in each of the six classifications and there will be many secondary prizes. Six hundred groups and individuals have been invited to participate.

Law and Firm Father Thwart Wedding Bells for Runaways

Call From Prospective Bridegroom's Parent Heads Off Youthful Baltimore Couple, Delaying Orange Blossoms for 3 Months, Anyway.

A legal technicality and a father's objections yesterday thwarted an elopement and halted the orange blossoms and rice theme for three months at least.

Principals in the romance were Coleman Cordish, 20, and his pretty fiancee, Rebecca Machlin, 21, who came here from Baltimore yesterday to apply for a marriage license. Clerks refused to issue it when they learned Coleman was not yet of legal age.

Meanwhile, Harry Cordish, head of the Western Mill & Lumber Co., called police here to head off the elopers. Found in the courthouse, Coleman and his bride-to-be were taken to headquarters, where the youth talked to his father by telephone. The elder Cordish remained firm. Shortly thereafter he arrived in Washington, where his son was released into his custody after promising to wait three months until his twenty-first birthday before marrying.

Plea of Lodges In 'Red' Ouster Taken to Green

A delegation of representatives of four of the five so-called "New Deal" lodges who were expelled from the American Federation of Government Employes on charges of "communism" was received last night by William F. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Lodge representatives reported that Green listened sympathetically and assured them he would appoint an A. F. of L. representative to cooperate with an A. F. G. E. representative in investigating the possibilities of reaffiliating the expelled units. A resolution calling for such an investigation was adopted at the Detroit convention at which temporary certificates of the five lodges were revoked.

Green was reported as expressing surprise at the convention's action in expelling the units on undocumented "red" charges and as saying that "embarassing leadership," another of the accusations levelled at the units, "was a pretty broad term."

In denying the charges of "communism," the delegation pointed to the political implications of raising "a false red scare in New Deal agencies." The Republican National Committee, it was revealed in The Post earlier this week, has been considering using the ouster of these lodges in an attempt to link President Roosevelt with communism.

Lodges represented at the conference were the units in the Social Security Board, Farm Credit Administration, Securities and Exchange Commission, and Public Assistance Division of the District government, with Walter J. Couper, president of the Social Security Board union, acting as principal spokesman.

The fifth lodge, the Railroad Retirement Board unit, failed to send a representative because of a disagreement in lodge ranks that has prevented the calling of a meeting before next Wednesday.

Parole Broken Involuntarily, Man Is Rejailed

Driven out of the little town of Flora, Ind., when a group of "vigilantes" notified him to get out "or," James (Bugs) Donovan was forced to break the conditions under which he was granted parole from a ten-year sentence and will have to serve the balance of his sentence, Chief Justice A. A. Wheat decided in District Court yesterday.

Donovan was paroled after serving two years of a robbery sentence. The Board of Parole granted release on the condition he go to a small farm at Flora and make the usual reports to a probation officer. For a time all went well until residents of Flora learned he was a paroled convict.

On Christmas eve, in 1934, Donovan was called from a church where he was attending services and was told to get out of town on pain of drastic punishment. He notified his parole officer and was taken to South Bend, Ind., under the parole officer's guidance. Even though the attache o fthe Parole Board was acquiescent in the change of scenery, the Parole Board, unable to work out another "suitable parole plan," ordered him back to prison.

Donovan's attorneys asserted the board had lost control and authority over him through granting a parole. They said that in the absence of any specific charges, he could not be ordered back to Lorton, even though there had been a technical violation of the original parole plan.

Chief Justice Wheat was advised that Donovan's conduct while on parole was "exemplary," but he ruled he has no authority to superimpose his discretion for that of the Parole Board.

The jurist was informed much consideration had been given various plans for working out a parole for Donovan, but that none had been satisfactorily worked out.

Attachments Study Urged On Tax Unit

Donovan Asks Committee to Consider Ditter's Proposal for Law.

West, Taxpayers Offer Score of Suggestions to Delinquency Body.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan yesterday asked the District tax delinquency committee to consider whether legislation is desirable to permit attachment of rents and other moneys for nonpayment of taxes as proposed last year by Representative Ditter (Republican), of Pennsylvania.

The suggestion was one of more than a score put forward in a memorandum to sub-committees engaged in studying the problem of clearing up delinquent taxes and placing collection of all District taxes on a more systematic basis.

The sub-committee was instructed to file its reports on the subjects not later than October 31. Auditor Donovan predicted that the full committee's report should be submitted to the Commissioners before November 9.

Other topics suggested for studies by separate subcommittees headed by Rufus S. Lusk, of the Washington Taxpayers Association, and Vernon E. West, principal assistant corporation counsel, are as follows:

The setting up of a separate billing and accounting office not a part of the collector's or assessor's offices in which office all bills would be prepared and all accounts kept.

Methods of improving the collection of unpaid and current personal taxes.

Consider whether legislation should be recommended to attach bank funds of delinquent taxpayers.

Whether the interest rate on tax sale purchases, irrespective of whether the property is bought in by the District or an outsider, should be uniform.

Plans Progress For U. S., Reich Airship Service

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Airship Hindenburg Over New Jersey, Oct. 9.—Dr. Hugo Eckener, the Zepplin builder, announced today "favorable progress" had been made in negotiating with Washington for the establishment of weekly airship service between Europe and America with ships built with American capital.

As his giant lighter-than-air machine, which took a day off from its labors of plying between Lakehurst, N. J., and Germany to take aloft 73 of the Nation's business and financial leaders, cruised over New England, Dr. Eckener said at luncheon:

"For the past ten days we have been negotiating with Washington. We are making favorable progress."

Eckener indicated at luncheon that a close understanding existed between American bankers and business men for the construction of two more Zeppelins with American capital to link Germany and the United States.

He qualified the report of his negotiations with the statement, "but one never knows."

Uneventfully, the ship sailed from Lakehurst this morning, over New York and Tarrytown, then to Boston, Providence, New Haven and other New England cities.

Whistles tooted and crowds clustered here and there to watch the airship pass.

The gathering of financial men obviously was impressed with the quiet ease with which the ship voyaged. Returning from New England to New York it averaged 95 miles an hour.

Ready to Sail Home.

Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 9 (AP).—The giant dirigible Hindenburg docked here early tonight with her human cargo of 73 financial and industrial leaders after an uneventful 10½-hour trip over six Eastern States—the Zeppelin's farewell to the United States until next spring.

The Hindenburg was scheduled to sail for Germany about midnight on her last North Atlantic crossing until next year when her owners said regular mail, passenger and freight service will be resumed.

Some business leaders—Nelson Rockefeller, Winthrop W. Aldrich, John D. Hertz, and others—had never before been aloft in such a craft.

Some Guppy Fanciers Look Them Over

Guppy Fancier Wins Gold Fish, Tells Judges to Keep Them

R. V. Holland, of Baltimore, Takes Four Awards, Keeps Three; Says He Has 4,000 Fish in His 1,000-Gallon Pool.

By Edward T. Folliard.

Braving the rain, 150 guppy fanciers attended the guppy show in the Bureau of Fisheries aquarium in the Commerce Building last night and saw a Baltimore man walk away with three of the prizes.

Robert V. Holland, the big winner, also won a fourth prize, but he politely told the judges to keep it. The prize was a pair of gold fish.

On Mr. Holland's face as he walked away, leaving the gold fish to their fate, was a look of—well, one would have to be a guppy fancier to understand that look. The same kind might appear on the face of a Persian cat fancier just handed an alley cat.

Anyway, Mr. Holland doesn't need any more fish. In his private pool in Baltimore, he has 4,000 fish, most of them guppies or guppyi. Raising them is a hobby with Holland; by trade he is a machinist.

The story of his rise as a guppy fancier—he is one of the Nation's leaders—is a long one and by no means dull. Because of his passion for guppyi, he said, war broke out in his house right after he was married.

"Every time my wife went to open a window," Holland recalled, "she would have to move about a dozen fish tanks. She razzed me so much that I finally built a 1,000-gallon fish home. It's attached to the house. Now my wife is as much of a fancier as I am."

Holland, who is about 45, has been a fancier since he was 7.

"My father was a seafaring man," he said, "and I became fish-conscious at an early age. We lived near Patterson Park, in Baltimore, and every year when they cleaned out the boat lakes the kids would steal the gold fish. I stole a pair when I was seven, and that's the way I got my start."

Gold fish, Holland said, were the fad until about 1921, and then they became too common.

"People wanted something new," he said, "and they turned to the guppy. This was the first tropical fish that we knew to be breedable. That's why it is called the beginner's fish."

Assails Guppy "Foes."

Holland had no patience with those among the Nation's 5,000,000 fish fanciers who are turning away from the guppy, and going in for the red swordtail, the moon fish or the sclari.

"It's a shame," said Holland, referring to the apostates. "They think because the guppy is easy to breed that it is just a guppy, after all, and they begin looking for fish that are harder to breed. Well, they have trouble with these, and then they lose interest altogether.

"If they would do more selective breed, like I do, they would hold their love for the guppy.

"The guppy is the most beautiful fish in the world. It has all the colors in the world; that's why it is called the rainbow fish.

One-Color Fish.

"Now you take some of these other tropical fish, a swordtail for example. He is red, a solid red. But that's all. There are other one-color fish—gorgeous blues, gorgeous greens. But the guppy has all the colors.

"In my selective breeding I pick out a male with a pronounced color and I mate him with three virgin females. I pick out the most colorful of the litter and keep breeding and breeding until I have reached the peak. That takes about 7 or 8 years. By then, boy, you've really got something."

Mr. Holland walked to the row of guppy bowls he had brought over from Baltimore. He pointed to exhibit No. 10, wherein swam a black-tail male guppy, about the size of a small knife blade, but ablaze with color. His wife, though a bit larger, was dull by comparison.

That's the way with guppies, Mr. Holland said. The male, although smaller than the female, has all the looks. However, he said, there is no henpecking among guppies.

One thing that makes the guppy stand out is that they are viviparous—that is, their young are born alive. Most fish come into the world first as eggs.

The female guppy, according to Holland, breeds about every six weeks, the litter of young running anywhere from 15 to 50. Some sell for as little as 15 cents a pair, and some as high as $2.50 a pair.

Mr. Holland said he wouldn't sell one pair he had on exhibition last night for $5.

Civic Group Seeks to Halt D. C. Abattoir

Site Previously Used for Same Purpose, Officials Hold.

The American Planning and Civic Association, of which Frederic A. Delano, uncle of President Roosevelt, is president, is opposed to the proposed erection of a slaughter house within the city limits of Washington.

In a letter yesterday to The Post, the association said it has been informed a New York company plans to build an abattoir on Benning road and the Anacostia River.

"Needless to say, the American Planning and Civic Association deplores establishment of an abattoir in this district," said the letter, which was signed by Mrs. Dora A. Padgett, librarian.

Adolf Gobel, Inc., of New York, is the company sponsoring the project. A month ago its representatives applied for a permit to construct four three-story concrete and brick manufacturing buildings in the 3700 block of Benning road northeast, which is on the east side of the Anacostia River and a few blocks from the Potomac Electric Power Co. plant.

Hugh P. Oram, director of inspection for the District, stated last night that he saw nothing improper or objectionable in the project. He pointed out that the area is in an industrial zone and that the plant will have Health Department approval.

"A packing house has occupied the site for some 30 years and been in operation a greater part of that time," he said, denying the New York firm had bought an "abandoned" plant as stated in the association's letter.

"It is the company's plan, as I understand it, to enlarge and improve the property, making it a sort of model abattoir," Oram added. He said permits have been granted for excavations and foundations but some details remained to be ironed out before plans for the superstructures are approved.

Sentence Doubled On Vagrant's Plea To Avoid Trouble

When he pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy yesterday in Judge Robert E. Mattingly's court, Wenner was ordered to post a $500 bond, or spend 180 days in jail.

"Judge, can't you make that 360 days?" Wenner begged. "If I get out in six months, I'll just get in trouble again."

Judge Mattingly granted the request. Wenner was sentenced to a year in jail.

Mt. Zion Church Will Celebrate Its 120th Year

Colored Congregation Plans 9-Day Observance; Opens Tomorrow.

The 120th anniversary of the colored congregation of Mount Zion Methodist Episcopal Church, Twenty-ninth street and Dumbarton avenue, Georgetown, will be celebrated for nine days at the church, beginning tomorrow at 11 a. m. with a sermon by the Rev. Edgar A. Love, district superintendent. A class leaders' union meeting will be held at 3 p. m., and a sermon will be preached at night by the Rev. Frank J. Frye, of Pomonkey, Md.

Organized October 16, 1816, by colored members of various Methodist Episcopal churches, when a lot was bought from Mr. Foxhall on Mill street near P street, the church was first called Meeting House, a name which it held until 1844, when the name was changed to Mt. Zion by the white minister in charge, the Rev. Roszel.

Five years later colored members agitated in interest of a colored minister, with a resultant split, from which was organized the congregations now known as the Ebenezer African Methodist Episcopal Church, the John Wesley African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church and the Union Wesley African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church. The first colored pastor of Mt. Zion, the Rev. John H. Price, was appointed in 1864.

The present site was obtained in the late seventies and a church was in progress of erection thereon in 1880 when the old Meeting House was destroyed by fire. Its auditorium was completed and dedicated in 1884. The present pastor, the Rev. George B. Curry, came to the church last year.

Old church records in possession of George T. Beason, recording steward, have proved of interest to students of history in the Nation's Capital. Dating back long before emancipation, the names of free colored persons and those in chattel slavery are recorded, together with a statement of their advancement in piety.

The record also indicates the backsliders, those set back six months or more for misconduct, those dropped from the church after trial, those retained on probation and a list of punishments for drinking, dancing, undue hilarity, blasphemy, domestic irregularities and the like.

The committee in charge of the anniversary celebration, which has organized services for each night at 8 o'clock and a social hour after each service, consists of Mrs. Anna Watkins, Mrs. Cora Doy, Benjamin Ford, George Ferguson, Leroy Gaskins, Albert Jackson, William Douglass, J. T. Beason, Morgan Brown, H. U. Bell, B. F. Sewell, Mrs. Arnetia Anderson and George T. Beason. A financial report of clubs interested in raising $600 will be made Monday night, October 19.

Thursday Church Night Supper 6 p. m.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Have you been looking for a church like this—?

It shall be our aim to bring joy to little children, instruction and high ideals to youth, inspiration to men and women in the midst of life, and comfort to those in later years; to labor together for the betterment of mankind.

Our fellowship shall not be dependent upon identity of theological opinion, or of outward circumstance, or of denominational name, but shall grow from a common loyality to Jesus; a common passion to serve the world; a common purpose to do justly, to love kindness, and to walk humbly with God.

Our ideal is a church of the open mind, the warm heart, the aspiring soul, and the social vision, which ever seeks to express in all ways of life the mind and spirit of Jesus.

Full Interest Focused on Football

First Great Grid Week-End to Draw Hordes to Country's Stadia.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 9.—The pursuit of the elusive pigskin, as practiced in our collegiate circles, becomes the dominant attraction of the fast-moving American sports panorama tomorrow.

For the first time in the young but already robust season, the football forces command country-wide interest without competition from the World Series or other sources of athletic debate. There may be some political arguments to settle between halves, but no foot races or counter attractions to side track attention from the main business in hand.

Big-Ten territory is the focal point of big-league activity, with five outstanding games figuring to draw upward of 250,000 spectators; topping this group is the clash between two of the Nation's powerhouse teams, Pittsburgh and Ohio State, at Columbus, before an expected crowd of 75,000. A sell-out of 55,000 is reported from Nebraska's challenge to Minnesota at Minneapolis, where the galloping Gophers will seek their nineteenth consecutive triumph.

Army-Columbia Tops.

Along the Eastern front, close to 100,000 spectators in the New York metropolitan district alone will witness the week-end's collegiate offerings, with the Army-Columbia game at the Yankee Stadium the main magnet. The first appearance of the Cadets here this season likely will draw 55,000 fans to the spot where the Yankees were busy sinking the World Series hopes of the Giants a week ago.

On the West Coast, Saturday's top crowd of 50,000 is expected at Los Angeles for Washington's match with U. C. L. A. As many more may see the powerful St. Mary's Gaels tangle with Loyola in the same town Sunday. Dallas anticipates 35,000 onlookers at the Southwest feature game between Texas and Oklahoma.

It seems clear, from these manifestations, not only that a banner box-office season is in prospect, but that the sectional as well as intersectional rivalry already has aroused high points of interest.

Pitt Is Obstacle.

The hub-hub may be at its highest along High street, Columbus, where the citizens have not yet forgotten Notre Dame's dramatic rush to last-period victory over Ohio State last year. Pittsburgh now offers the first big obstacle for the Bucks to clear in their 1936 bid for national championship recognition. Since the Panthers entertain equally tall ambitions, it is clear that the impact will be terrific.

In a match between two such juggernauts, well fortified in ball-handling tactics as well as manpower, the breaks generally decide the issue. Ohio State has always found the Panther tough to tame—as who hasn't?—but figures to have the scoring touch to win this one. It sizes up, generally, as one of those games that the extra point may decide.

Minnesota didn't find Nebraska a soft touch last year, when the Gophers gained a 12-7 decision, and the additional experience for such superlative backs as Sam Francis and Lloyd Cardwell makes the Cornhuskers so much more dangerous this year. Midwestern scouts do not expect this game to be as tough a test for Minnesota's winning streak as Northwestern will furnish October 31. It's tough enough to warrant no more than a touchdown edge for the Gophers.

Young Bill Terry Enters Virginia; Shuns Publicity

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 9.—Young Bill Terry, son of the manager of the New York Giants, has started his freshman year at the University of Virginia with the determiantion not to capitalize on my dad's fame or reputation."

The 18-year-old law student would not pose for a photograph and said:

"I am here to study hard and make good and I feel that I would be at a disadvantage immediately if I received a lot of attention, newspaper and otherwise.

"My only desire is to take my place in class and campus life and make good on my own hook. I do not care to capitalize on my dad's fame or reputation."

Terry, who played first base for a private prep school in Memphis, said he would talk over with his father the advisability of trying out for freshman baseball and basketball.

Panthers Meet Buckeyes on Mud Field

75,000 Tickets Are Sold; Landon to See Game; Rain Is Predicted.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 9.—A swampy gridiron and a drizzling rain was the setting predicted tonight for Saturday's clash between the prowling Panthers, of Pittsburgh, and the battling Buckeyes, of Ohio State—the No. 1 game on the national football front this week-end.

Some of the host of experts gathered for the classic contended that the slippery going would hamper Ohio's aerial attack, without upsetting the power offense of Pitt, but others sized it up just the other way.

Bucks Work in Rain.

The bucks went through a long and soaking-wet signal practice in the rain today, with even newspapermen barred from the field, but the Panthers shunned the wet going and stayed under the stadium.

The stadium field was almost a lake, attendants having neglected to cover the gridiron with canvas until late in the afternoon, after the track surrounding the field was covered with 3 inches of water.

The weather man's forecast of rain for Saturday is expected to cut the crowd, although 75,000 tickets have been sold.

Among those who will be on hand is Alf M. Landon, Governor of Kansas and the Republican candidate. He will be accompanied by an official party of about 40, occupying boxes opposite those of Ohio's Governor, Martin L. Davey.

Detroit U. Wins, 46-12, Over Oklahoma A. & M.

Detroit, Oct. 9 (AP).—Coach Gus Dorias' University of Detroit Titans spotted a rugged Oklahoma A. and M. team one touchdown in the first quarter tonight and then came back with a spectacular passing attack to down the invaders, 46 to 12.

The Cowboy touchdowns were made by Webb, fullback, in the first quarter, and Asbury, rightend, in the final period.

A. and M.'s desperate try for a score in the final seconds brought another Titan touchdown when White, Detroit center, intercepted a pass to race 23 yards over the goal. The final gun barked as he crossed the 5-yard stripe.

Duquesne Wins, 33-0, From Geneva in Mud

Pittsburgh, Oct. 9 (AP).—Duquesne University's football team pushed tirelessly through mud and drenching rain tonight to defeat Geneva College, from Beaver Falls, Pa., 33-0.

The heavy rain, accompanied by thunder and lightning, lasted throughout the game and big floodlights burst like balloons.

Louis Knocks Out Brescia In Third

Bomber Forced to Brave Foreigner's Powerful Right at Start.

By Jack Cuddy.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Before more than 6,000 fans in Mike Jacobs' new red-plushed and gold-tinseled Hippodrome, the Brown Bomber battered the hard-hitting Argentine to the floor and Referee Arthur Donovan counted him out in 2:12 of the third round. They were slated to fight ten.

Before Shuffling Joe disposed of his youthful opponent, the Negro had felt the dynamite in Brescia's right, but he weathered its stunning impacts and came back fighting for the kill.

Third Straight K. O.

The knockout—Joe's third straight since being kayoed by Schmeling in June—came shortly after Brescia had driven him into the Argentine's corner with a furious barrage of right and left smashes to the head. The barrage brought the fans to their feet screaming madly for a knockout. Joe was bleeding from a slight gash on the left side of his cheek after this melee, and he was somewhat unsteady from the blows that he had taken, but he kept crowding his man until an opening presented itself.

Brescia spun around and the tips of his gloves ticked the top strand of the ring ropes as he sprawled down on his face. He lay there writhing, with his legs kicking from side to side like a drunken swimmer. Referee Donovan tolled the count in unison with a new electrical counting device above the ring.

Crashed by Right.

Brescia was starting to come on when the stunning right struck him in the third. Starting to lose the tension and caution which apparently had prevented him from cutting loose.

Aside from the time that Schmeling dropped the bomber and knocked him out later in the Yankee Stadium fight, Louis was in greater danger in tonight's third round than at any time during his professional career. And had Brescia been a more experienced fighter, he might have put his brilliant opponent away.

That third round punching melee was a heart-lashing affair. Sparring cautiously in mid-ring, Brescia—who had changed tactics from those displayed in his previous eight American fights—was forcing Louis to do the leading. Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, famous old-time light-heavyweight fighter, had instructed Jorge that Joe did not relish forcing the fight. Louis darted a left at Brescia's head, quick as lightning. Jorge's right fist shot out and caught Joe a glancing blow on the chin. Louis staggered back—and as he gave ground, Brescia was on him.

Joe fought back desperately but was forced into the corner where the barrage continued. The bomber finally side-slipped out of the corner, sparred a bit to clear his head and then tore after his taller opponent.

Louis Was Staggered.

Louis won the first two rounds with comparative ease, although he was staggered in the second when Brescia connected with a straight right to the chin. In that second session, Joe rocked Brescia on the

Mississippi Back Splashes Off a Few Yards in Rain

Virginia Faces Navy Eleven Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 9.—The University of Virginia, one of the Navy's oldest rivals on the gridiron, will end the home season for the Sailors tomorrow. The series dates back to 1893. Virginia, believed to have the best team which has faced the Navy in recent years, is keen to break into the winning line-up.

The Virginia squad, under Coach Gus Tebell, reached Annapolis early this afternoon, and was met by rain and wet grounds. He decided to work out indoors and the wrestling loft at the top of the gynasium was put at his disposal. The Navy braved the elements and had a little practice in handling a wet ball.

Both teams have been compelled to make a change in their proposed starting line-up. Andy Connor, one of Virginia's best running backs, was hurt in practice during the week, and his place will be taken by Harry Dinwiddie. As expected, Bus Male, another backfield reliance, will not be in shape to play. Pete Nistad, who made a fine showing against William and Mary, will be in his place.

U. of Va. Alumni Hold Football Rally Here

Washington alumni of the University of Virginia last night had an opportunity to learn the aims of the institution in Charlottesville athletically, and also academically, at a meeting held at the Racquet Club.

Because of the football game the Cavaliers will play with Navy this afternoon the more than 100 alumni present listened with interest when Gus Tebell, head coach, told of how he has been shaping the gridiron squad. Coach Hebell made no prediction as to the outcome of the game in Annapolis.

Virginia's squad is made up largely of sophomores who have still much to learn regarding varsity play, Coach Teball said. He thought these youngsters should improve as they gained in experience.

Norton Pritchett, athletic director, told the alumni that every effort is being made to improve athletics at Virginia that is in keeping with the Graham plan. He expressed the hope that alumni would not be disappointed with the team against Navy, but warned them not to expect a victory.

Perry, Helen Jacobs Ranked No. 1 at Nets

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 9.—Fred Perry, of England, and Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., rule the tennis roosts of the world, in the opinion of A. Wallis Myers, British authority, who lists seven Americans in his "first ten" ranking for 1936.

Perry retained the No. 1 position without dispute by holding the all-England title and recapturing the American championship.

Miss Jacobs was elevated to the spot mainly as a reward for perserverance—winning the all-England crown after eight unsuccessful attempts—and despite her loss of the American title.

This year's rankings saw redheaded Don Budge, of Oakland, Calif., pull up from sixth to third behind the German, Gottfriend Van Cramm; Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., 1935 national titleholder, drops from fourth to seventh, and Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, jr., of Atlanta, admitted to the exclusive set for the first time at No. 8.

Two others, Adrian Karl Quist of Australia and Heiner Henkel, of Germany, also were given international ratings as Sidney Wood, of New York, Frank Shields, of Hollywood and Christian Boussus of France were dropped.

Back of the three leaders, Myers graded the men's list as follows: No. 4, Quist; No. 5, H. W. (Bunny) Austin, England; No. 6, Jack Crawford, Australia; No. 7, Allison; No. 8, Grant; No. 9, Henkel; No. 10, Vivian McGrath, Australia.

Thus Australian and the United States are tied with three players each, and England and Germany garnered the other spots, two apiece.

Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Germany and Denmark, who lost to Miss Jacobs in the Wimbledon final, was ranked No. 2; followed by Dorothy Round, of England; Alice Marble, of San Francisco; Simone Mathieu, of France; Jadwica Jedrzejowska, of Poland; Kay Stammers of England; Anita Lizana, of Chile; Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., and Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles.

Maryland, N. C. Primed for 37th Clash

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 9.—A favored North Carolina University football team will meet one of its toughest rivals for the Southern Conference championship today, when a well-equipped Maryland University eleven invades Kenan Stadium. When the game starts at 2:30 p. m. it will mark the renewal of a 37-year-old gridiron rivalry.

Unless wet weather intervenes, both teams are expected to take to the air in no ordinary degree. The Terps have a battery of first-rate heavers in Coleman Headley, Charlie Ellinger and Charlie Weidinger, sensational sophomores.

Midget Little and Dick Dashiell, quarterbacks, are likely to do the passing for the Tarheels, with Capt. Dick Buck and Andy Bershak, All-Southern ends, and George Watson, sophomore star, on the receiving end. Vic Willis, All-Southern end, and Jim Meade, star sophomore backfield ace, will be doing the catching.

Although Maryland is able to bring out a team of veterans, sophomores such as Weidinger, Meade and Hewitt are virtually certain to see action.

Maryland Outweighed.

Maryland will be outweighed 195 to 190 in the line and 180 to 177 in the backfield. The Terps took their final workout in College Park this afternoon and entrained last night, reaching Durham early tomorrow morning, and thence to Chapel Hill.

The Tarheels will be without their star sophomore halfback, Tony Cernugle, who is on the injured list, but Maryland will take the field without its great triple-threat ace, Billy Guckeyson.

Student interest in the traditional game is keen. A huge pep rally was held tonight, and Tarheel students marched behind the university band from the postoffice to South Building, where a main rally was held.

Manhattan Wins, 13-6, Over North Carolina

New York, Oct. 9 (AP).—Manhattan's football Jaspers stood off a strong threat from Hunk Anderson's North Carolina State team tonight to hang up a 13-to-6 victory before 15,000 fans at Ebbets Field.

Notre Dame System Outmoded As Attacking Unit—Anderson

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 9.—The Notre Dame system as a complete attacking unit is outmoded and almost helpless against modern football defenses, Heartly (Hunk) Anderson, former Notre Dame coach, said today.

"Basically, we still use the Notre Dame formations," said Anderson, now head coach at North Carolina State. "But the point is we have to mix them up with formations totally different from Rockne's. If we didn't, we'd be stopped every time."

Anderson explained that an almost flawless defense was created to stop the Notre Dame offense in the days when almost everyone was copying Notre Dame. "It got so the opposition knew exactly where to place its men whenever we lined up," Anderson said.

"We used to brag at Notre Dame that we could tell the opposing linemen where the play was coming and then run right over them. But that merely indicated the superiority of our material, not of our system."

Most of Rockne's pupils have also changed, according to Anderson. "Crowley at Fordham, Stuhldreher at Wisconsin and even Elmer Layden at Notre Dame, have worked out their own variation of the old Rockne system."

Anderson maintains that the practice of following any one system, a popular procedure for years, is breaking down.

"Several years ago most coaches thought it was impossible to teach a college squad to handle the ball from more than one formation," he said.

"The popular theory was to have a cycle of plays all starting exactly the same way. This is still sound, but the trend is toward lining up in any number of ways to keep the defense guessing."

Though they have a veteran team, North Carolina State is crippled by injuries. "That gets you back to the first fundamental, that it's men you need, not trick systems," said "Hunk."

Anderson picks Duke, Georgia Tech, Alabama, Kentucky and Vanderbilt as the outstanding teams in the South.

Japan's Olympiad Not to Be Simple Nor Extravagant

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 9.—Japan won't use the twelfth Olympiad, scheduled to be held in Tokyo in 1940, as a springboard to international political prominence, Dr. Jigoro Kano, 76-year-old Japanese member of the International Olympic Committee since 1909, said today.

Vast sums of money will be spent to accommodate the visiting athletes and conduct the games appropriately, he said, but along simpler lines than those employed by Germany last summer.

Mud Shackles Both Teams' Offensives

Rebels Near Score in 3d Quarter, but Attack Bogs Down.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Shackled by mud, harried by an oozy ball and taking on the appearance of animated licorice sticks a minute after the opening kick-off, the football teams of George Washington University and Mississippi U. sloshed to a scoreless tie last night.

Mississippi's Ray Hapes may be the same shifty-footed terror of tacklers that his press notices purported him to be, but the G. W. team and 12,000 fans who braved the driving rain at Griffith Stadium will have to take Mississippi's word for it.

Because Hapes, like every other ball carrier on the field, was securely hobbled by the treacherous footing that made an absurdity of end runs, spilled backs before they hit the line of scrimmage and wrecked the timing of both team's offensives.

Punts Perilous.

Recognizing the mud as a valuable ally against a Mississippi team that on paper appeared a superior foe, George Washington's fighting band of sophomores chose not to gamble but played for the breaks, even as did the Rebs. The punt was, last night, both a defensive and offensive weapon fraught as it was with the possibilities of a fumble, and it was off the toes of the kickers that the battle raged chiefly.

And it was an errant punt by Merka, of G. W., which slithered out of bounds on the Colonials' 20-yard line that produced the game's one serious scoring threat—in the second quarter.

Moon Side Wins Fourth Straight Race in Laurel Feature Event

Rider Unhurt In Steeple Tumble

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 9.—Moon Side, a gelded son of Broadside—Over the Moon, is earning the title of "Maryland champion." Only a so-and-so plater while racing in New York last summer, Moon Side has scored four straight victories since his arrival in the Free State, and on each occasion has moved up the class ladder.

The 4-year-old marched postward today opposed by three others in the Tuscarora, the day's feature race, and was never headed. The Maemere Farm's Mantagna did a lot of huffing and puffing behind Moon Side, but the gelding had a lead of a length and a half at the finish, with E. R. Bradley's Bootmaker in third place and three parts of a length back.

Moon Side, despite his record, paid an $8.10 mutuel. He ran the 1 1-16 miles in 1:45 4-5, creditable time over the good track.

The theme song of the race was "Catch Moon Side." There were no catchers. Moon Side bounded away in front and in charge of Jockey L. Coffman. Mantagna was a little tardy, but joined Bootmaker in pressing the pace to the backstretch. Jockey Litzenberger then gave Mantagna a breathing spell, while Bootmaker was still making a futile chase.

Raincoat weather prevailed and crowd of 7,000 witnessed the sport.

Savage Beauty Wins.

The card began over a good track and brought a decisive victory for the Branncastle Farm's Savage Beauty. The daughter of Challenger 2d led Careful Miss to the imaginary wire by a length and a half, with Keyword, a distant third. The race drew a field of a dozen maiden fillies to contest over the six-furlong course.

Savage Beauty was off poorly, but luckily found racing room along the rail to take command entering the stretch and gave her backers no anxious moments thereafter. Jockey Joe Renick was astride the winner which ran the three quarters in 1:14 1-5 and paid $6.30.

Mrs. Arthur White's Swimalong won the day's steeplechase in rather easy fashion to pay a $7.10 mutuel. The Swinburne gelding had Jockey F. Thorndyke in the saddle and made every fence a winning one, having an advantage of two and a half lengths over Budget Boy of the Greentree Stable entry at the finish. The latter was four lengths ahead of L. C. Leith's Daffy.

Philippi Boy Pays $10.40.

Budget Boy chased Swimalong virtually throughout the test, but could not threaten. Daffy closed some ground to be third. The race was marked by three mishaps. Capstan, as usual, ran out at the first fence. Stare fell at the thirteenth fence, but both horse and Jockey M. Mergler escaped injury. Champs Elysees, of the Greentree Stable, broke down approaching the thirteenth fence.

Philippi Boy, owned by E. C. Sachse, proved a winning paddock tip in the third race. His odds shrunk steadily throughout the betting and he turned in an easy victory. Flavor, the property of Mrs. E. Denemark, was second, four lengths away, while running in the favorite role. Third money went to Mrs. M. Eslick's Sir Kai, one that came from far back. Philippi Boy paid a $10.40 mutuel and completed a $71.20 daily double. He ran the six furlongs in 1:13 1-5.

Jockey Harry Richards rode Hi-Sweet to victory in a bulky field of fourteen sprinters in the fourth race. The well-played son of Hi-Jack circled the leaders to gain command and defeated, among others, Danarco, which finished second, three lengths back. Offender managed to save third money. Hi-Sweet paid a $10.80 mutuel and ran the six furlongs in 1:14 4-5.

Mrs. E. Denemark's Chasar came from last to be first in the running of the fifth race over the mile and a sixteenth course. J. E. Hughes' Silent Shot was second with Cantine Lass third in the field of five. Chasar trailed by some ten lengths in the early back stretch, but circled his field to win with something to spare. Chasar was a $9.20 mutuel, and ran the route in 1:46.

Golden Vein, a $4.60 favorite, won the sixth race over the mile and a sixteenth course. The Golden Spire horse had to battle all the way with Flower Time, a $23.70 place proposition, and it was not until the mid-stretch that Golden Vein began to draw clear.

SAVAGE BEAUTY, off slowly, worked her way up on the inside, came through to take command in the early stretch and held CAREFUL MISS safe. The latter had to be taken wide to enter contention and closed willingly. KEYWORD, a forward factor throughout, was tiring at the end. TEDEEN was squeezed back on the rail for the stretch and closed willingly. TRANSIT BIRD could not threaten. MARINELLA moved up menacingly and then dropped back. AERO had early speed.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SWIMALONG, $7.10, $3.50, $3.10; BUDGET BOY (entry), $2.90, $2.40. DAFFY, $5.50.

SWIMALONG, fencing well and excellently handled, went to the front at once, was steadied over the fences, maintained command throughout and easily held BUDGET BOY safe at the end. The latter, closest to the pace after four fences, showed a good effort, but was no match for the winner. DAFFY lacked early speed, but came willingly in the closing test. BLUE VISION dropped back. PHILIPPI BOY sprinted up on the inside to take command in the opening quarter, opened a good lead and was being eased up at the end. FLAVOR came around on the outside to enter contention at the far turn, was closest to the pace for the remainder, but could not menace the winner, while under energetic handling. SIR KAI came through on the rail at the final bend and under punishment was going gamely at the finish. JAKOVIA hung in the final stages after showing a good effort. MARSON gained steadily throughout the running. SHYNO, placed forwardly, tired suddenly in the stretch. ALBUQUERQUE had early speed. GALON BOY was through early.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HI-SWEET, $10.80, $5.50, $4.10; DANARCO, $5.60, $4.20; OFFENDER, $3.20.

HI-SWEET, off slowly, worked his way on the outside and took command with a rush to win going away. DANARCO, forwardly placed throughout and saving ground, disposed of TITANICAL, but could not resist the winner while stouting riders. OFFENDER went into contention at the far turn and came willingly for the final test. TITANICAL was sprinted to the front at once, but began faltering in the early stretch. MISS PECAN showed a good effort. VIRNOCK went evenly. CHERRY ORCHARD was squeezed back leaving the backstretch.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHASAR, $9.20, $4.40, $3.70; SILENT SHOT, $3.80, $3.30; CANTINE LASS, $4.20.

CHASAR, allowed to settled into best stride, was put to a drive while trailing at far turn, came around horses to wear down SILENT SHOT and drew clear. SILENT SHOT shook off MUST BE and CANTINE LASS leaving the backstretch, continued gamely, but could not resist the winner. CANTINE LASS had to be rushed to get to the pace setters and tired. BUCK LANGHORNE was squeezed back at the first turn, ran wide into the backstretch and failed to rally thereafter.

MOON SIDE sprinted into the lead at the break, was rated along in front while saving ground and closed gamely when put to a drive to hold MANTAGNA safe. The latter went in the air slightly at the break, was given a breather after being rushed into contention, came to the outside for the final drive and closed courageously. BOOTMAKER was hard ridden throughout and was tiring slowly at the end. TREFORD trailed and was outrun.

GOLDEN VEIN, under slight restraint while running, lapped on FLOWER TIME, drew out slowly in the closing stages when put to a vigorous drive. FLOWER TIME was rushed to the front, was hard ridden while running with GOLDEN VEIN and tired slightly in the final stages. FLYING FALCON closed willingly. TAUNTON moved up menacingly in the early stretch, but faltered nearing the end. ROLLICK came with good speed at the end. ITALIAN HARRY closed some ground. OUR SHIP was started from outside the gate and tired after being within striking distance.

MINTON, outrun for six furlongs, came around his horses to enter contention and under stout handling was up in the concluding strides. JIM JOHN, alternating in setting and pressing the pace, came with good energy at the close. CREDULOUS ran with JIM JOHN to the stretch, turn and went wide, rallied when straightened and closed with a rush. BALMACAN, a forward factor throughout, closed willingly. EUDES was squeezed back entering the stretch and closed well.

Laurel Race Track, Oct. 9.

Dear Al: You can't fool a horse fly or a horse. They tried to pull the wool over Capstan's eye and they tried to take Stare for a ride but they were caught in their own back wash in each instance. Both were in today's steeplechase. Capstan has a habit of running out of the course at the first fence. After he came through with a masterpiece of "not choosing to jump" here earlier in the week his handlers hit upon the scheme of putting a cover over one eye. He worked well with only one eye on the fences and was marched postward today. Somebody was in on the trick for Capstan's odds shrunk. However, the gelding could see well enough to run up to the first fence, do a "squads left" and run into the center field to the groans of his backers. From now to the end of the meeting he will not have to jump for the stewards ruled him out. Stare had good eyes but his legs failed him at the thirteenth jump and he went down, apparently an ex-horse. Officials sent for the dead horse wagon and that vehicle came rolling along. But just before it reached him, Stare suddenly arose, shook himself, gave the wagon the horse stare and marched off to the stable. The wagon was utilized in carrying Champs Elysees, one that broke down, back to the barn. Good show at this track tomorrow, folks. BILL.

First race—Panther Creek seems headed for a set of brackets in the day's opener. Figures to carry the top weight well and needs only a hustling ride. Miss Adeline had some excuse last out and would be dangerous, particularly on an off track. Timber Lady stopped as if shot in her most recent outing. Makalaw and Good Trade are far from last in which they are probably nonstarters.

Second race—Hurry Harry has worked well over the jumping course and appears ready to take a set of brackets. Little Woman ran a fair race here the other day and meets less formidable opposition. Quick Verdict was not turned loose at any stage in his last effort.

Third race—Count Rae appears to be the class of this field. He won a somewhat similar test at the Graw and has worked well. Grey Streak is as good as those recent fine efforts and is dangerous. Patsey Begone has early speed and may jolt the talent at the feather weight.

Fourth race—Justa Flight could not get to the top in the early running last out and failed to show a good race. However, this company is cheap and the half-mile star will be at home. Jamul has been tipped around and ran a dull race last out. However, I have reason to believe this one is going for the heavy sugar tomorrow. Pencader for the show.

Fifth race—War Admiral needs only to run back to his Havre de Grace stake victory to take the chief money in the Richard Johnson Handicap. Bottle Cap and Orientalist for the place and show. Billionaire has worked well.

Sixth race—Whereaway takes off a lot of weight for this contest and has been raced into excellent shape. He will have Corinto to beat. Azucar likes this track and has turned in some nice trials. May be ready for a good race.

Seventh race—Kievson scored in good fashion in his most recent outing and appears ready to give this sort a keen battle if not a beating. I'm going to string along. South Bend is much better than that last in which he met interference. Shot and Shell for the show.

Eighth race—Alice Byrd appears to have a purse at her mercy, in this field. She will have Tucker in the saddle and gets in with only 107 pounds. Silvery Cloud can better that last and is the one to beat. Rock Covent is a bear on an off track. Miss Fern won with the greatest of ease in the mud at Charles Town.

1—Panther Creek, Good Trade, Miss Adeline.
3—Patsey Begone, Go Home, Count Rae.
4—Pencader, Little Argo, Rudenia.
8—Dunair, Dearsin, Silvery Cloud.

Georgetown, With Shifted Line-up, Faces Cincinnati U. Tonight

Coach Ready To Gamble For Win

By Lewis F. Atchison.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 9.—Marching into this bustling Midwestern metropolis with the stern authority of a sheriff about to take over the old homestead, Georgetown's forces tonight took over Nippert Stadium for a light limbering-up practice in preparation for tomorrow night's game in which they hope to take over the University of Cincinnati.

It was a light-hearted and confident squad that put up at the Netherland Plaza, gathering place for Georgetown alumni from Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and other scattered points, but Coach Jack Hagerty put a crimp in any pregame celebrating with a warning that Cincinnati will not be defeated without a struggle—if at all.

Matching his words with direct action the Hoya coach announced three changes in the starting lineup designed to bolster his team's defense. One, Mike Fuardo for Red Hardy at center, was necessitated by the "redhead's" injured shoulder, but the others, Hagerty said, are cases of merit.

Williams Named Captain.

Williams, incidentally, has been appointed acting captain for the game, a gesture of recognition of the excellent spirit and unselfish loyalty he has shown in three years of football. He has never played regularly in that time even though Hagerty thinks he is the best blocker on the team. Weight, or the lack of it, is responsible for the many hours he has spent on the bench.

With Fleming out of the picture Bill Duff, stocky fullback, will do the punting. He is not expected to get the distance Fleming would get, but he is a money player and when the chips are down he'll come through with flying colors.

The rest of the line-up will be the same as last week's which crushed Delaware 39-0, but when the squad arrives home 11 new men may be in possession of regular positions, for Hagerty actually has not picked a first team and will not make a definite selection until after tomorrow's game.

One guard position, one tackle, and end and the entire backfield are still open and the men showing the best against Cincinnati will get the jobs. Elmer Moulin and Dave Noonan are gunning for Tommy Keating's quarterback role; Joe Keegin, former Eastern High School and Staunton Military Academy star; Tony Barabas, brother of Columbia's famed Al; Don Gibeau and a flock of others are bidding for halfback positions and Frank Meglin, Jim Dooley, and Hank Gibbons, to name a few, are after Duff's fullback position.

Tomorrow Keating not only has permission, but orders to shoot the works and let the debris fall where it will. Hagerty intends to use as many men as possible in the game.

Although walloped by West Virginia and tied last week by Butler the Bearcats do not figure to be a set-up for Georgetown. They boast a strong defensive line, although a little weak on passes, and the Hoyas may have to go into the air for whatever points they make. Cincinnati's attack did not go well in either of the first two games but improvement is expected tomorrow.

Georgetown alumni will gather for a luncheon tomorrow at which the Rev. Arthur J. O'Leary, S. J., president of the University, will be the guest of honor.

The line-up:

Georgetown.	Position.	Cincinnati.
Williams	L.E.	Teubner
Robertson	L.T.	Shelby
Shuker	L.G.	M.Garvin
Fuardo	Center	Schwemlein
Franks	R.G.	Rainir
Stralka	R.T.	Feldhaus
Snyder	R.E.	Gibboney
Keating	Q.B.	Habs
Valiquette	L.H.	Grace
Ferraro	R.H.	Schaps
Duff	F.B.	Gant

This was the first knockout suffered by the erstwhile Argentine cowboy in his American professional fights and 35 South American amateur affairs. Experts at the ringside were of the opinion that the 21-year-old foreigner was thrown into the ring with the bomber too soon and that had he had another year's experience he would have given Louis a terrific fight, possibly beating him.

Louis, who weighed 202 pounds against the brown-haired Brescia's 205½, received considerably less than $15,000 for tonight's gamble with a youngster with a good right—the only kind of a man who has a chance against him.

Burleigh Grimes May Manage '37 Dodgers

New York, Oct. 9 (U.P.).—Burleigh Grimes, former major league pitcher and manager of the Louisville Colonels in the American Association, is favored to become manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, according to indications today.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Saturday Morning Quarterback.

Pittsburgh-Ohio State—When the chips are down, Pitt's failures are historic. The Panthers never seem able to take the big hurdles. Thus, one resolute vote for Ohio State.

Navy-Virginia—The Cavaliers are nice lads, but Navy's hospitality will end when the opening whistle blows. The Middies won't be trifling today. The Middies never trifle on Farragut Field. Too bad, Virginia.

POVICH.

Yale-Penn—The Bulldogs have both bark and bite this season. Penn's big score against Lafayette doesn't scare me. New Haven will be no haven for Penn's hope of an undefeated season. Yale, by a couple of touchdowns—at least one.

Columbia-Army—The team that owns Monk Meyer usually wins and he still belongs to Army. Lou Little's Lions play nice football, but are overmatched. With a roll of the drums, one vote for Army.

Fordham-Southern Methodist—The Mustangs' aerial circus will be grounded in New York today. Straight football as practiced by the Rams will ram over at least two touchdowns. Yeah, I know Southern Methodist has seven players from the team that beat Fordham two years ago. But, nevertheless—Fordham.

Maryland-North Carolina—Maryland's ambitions for an unbeaten season will be interred at Chapel Hill. North Carolina has what it takes, this season. Maryland will see a lot of the Tarheels' backs—and I mean backs.

Harvard-Brown—Brown has slipped farther down the football scale even than Harvard. Time was when this game gave cause for pause. But not this season. The Crimson will win and get a lot of false ideas about its power.

Minnesota-Nebraska—This is no time to hop off a winner. And Minnesota has been winning for three seasons now. They may not take Nebraska in stride, but they'll take 'em. With an abiding faith in Bernie Bierman, I must go for the Gophers.

Michigan State-Carnegie Tech—Flip a coin and if it stands on end, it will be no more of a surprise than a correct prediction of this game. Into the very face of fate, I am taking a flyer. Michigan State to—ah, er—lose.

Michigan-Indiana—Football at Michigan is still in the doldrums. Seems like the Wolverines are de-emphasizing the sport. But Indiana isn't. Bo McMillan's team is serious about the Big Ten title. It's all right with me. One vote for Indiana.

Purdue-Wisconsin—The Boilermakers are out to avenge that 8-0 upset of last season at the hands of the Badgers. But they won't be taken in by the Badger game today. Thus, one hopeful ballot for Purdue.

Southern California-Illinois—The Illini had better take in the scenery on the Coast. That figures to be the only pleasant memory they will take away from Palo Alto. The Trojans don't lose these early intersectional games.

Stanford-Oregon—All the dope favors Oregon. But the dope doesn't scare this department. Stanford's Indians will whoop it up today—I think.

Washington-U. C. L. A.—Here's another spot where angels probably fear to tread, but I'm rushing in with the prediction that Washington will knock off the Uclans. Even if U. C. L. A. was the co-champ of the Coast in '35.

Georgia Tech-Kentucky—Kentucky isn't what it used to be on the gridiron. But neither is Georgia Tech, for that matter. It's a battle of fallen idols, with the edge going to Tech.

Tennessee-Auburn—The Vols may be tough before the season is over, but Auburn is tough right now. I am stringing along with the team with the punch. So, with no trepidation at all, Auburn.

Mississippi State-Alabama—Loud are the warnings of Mississippi State's power. But in these Southern intrasectional games the watchword is never bet against Alabama. So, Alabama it is.

Louisiana State-Georgia—The trend of football strength in the Southeast Conference is definitely toward the West. On advice from Baton Rouge, one prayerful vote for L. S. U.

Mexican High School Team Starts Playing Universities

By John R. Vosburgh.

It may be an awful shock to the Central High boys who swamped an all-Mexican high football team here, 33 to 12, last year, but the Mexican boys are now taking on college teams. That puts the Mexics just one up on Central. The nearest Central ever came to playing a college team was when it practiced one day on the same field with Wilson Teachers.

Yes, from the land of the cactus, the hot tamale and the senorita comes the surprising, not to say startling, news that Mexico's high schools not only schedule college teams, but look forward to them with the enthusiasm of my nephews on Christmas eve—that is, with downright gusto.

Come to think of it, it might make quite a drawing card here. Central vs. C. U., for instance; Friends School vs. Pittsburgh; Roosevelt vs. Minnesota. Well, anyway, that's what they're doing in Mexico.

Honest to goodness, that is what the Mexies are doing. Call it advanced education, communism or just the Latin temperament; it's a fact, and we have a letter from the captain of Mexican Tech, Octavio Gomez Haro, to prove it. Octavio Gomez (no relation to Lefty) played right tackle against Central last year.

The letter came to Archie Rice, noted football observer here. (Octavio's English is a little broken, but it's not half as bad as our Spanish.) Go ahead, Octavio:

"Yesterday we played our first game. For first time in Mexico a football game was played in the night. We organized it in order to practice in night games, because we are going to play in Houston at night.

"We put 200 lamps in our new stadium. It was a fine spectacle. A big crowd witnessed this game; 10,000 people were there. It's a record for local games.

"Next Saturday we have an international game. The university plays Occidental College, from Los Angeles. I hope the university beats that Occidental, although I think it is too hard. We'll see.

"And next 17 October we play the University of Mexico team. Lord help us to defeat them. They are a bunch of boasters. They are saying that they are going to beat us, 30 to 0. Boasters! They got a fine coach this season, Mr. Marr, who was all-America guard for Alabama and played in 1935 Rose Bowl game.

"Well, here we are. We won our first game. I hope we will keep on going this way and we defeat that bunch of boasters."

200 Bicyclists Race Here Tomorrow

More than 200 bicycle racers are champing at the bit, or whatever bicycle riders do while waiting for the gun, as they check the condition of their bikes for tomorrow's running of the second National Capital Bicycle Sweepstakes in Potomac Park at 2 p. m.

Given a break by the weather, officials of the National Capital Parks and the Welfare and Recreational Association, sponsoring the events, predicts attendance records will fall just as the entry mark did.

Ten races are on the program sanctioned by the Amateur Bicycle League of America. Otto Eisele, president of the Amateur Bicycle League of America, is referee, while the honorary referees are C. Marshal Finnan, superintendant of National Capital Parks; Frank W. Hoover, of the Welfare and Recreational Association, and L. N. Southmayd, Cycle Trades of America.

Milton Sencindiver, District of Columbia representative of the A. B. L. A., is associate referee, while Capt. Patrick J. Carrol, superintendent, National Capital Parks Police, will be the chief starter, and E. Joseph Aronoff, C. C. A. A. U., will be chief judge.

Friends Beaten, 13-0, By Tome in First Game

Friends School opened its football season yesterday by holding a powerful Tome Institute eleven, of Fort Deposit, Md., to a 13-0 score on Friendship Field.

The visitors scored in the first quarter when Abrams plunged across the final stripe and again in the third on a run by Hostetter. Hostetter and Abrams carried the bulk of the Friends' ball carrying. Charlie Wannan and Hooper, left tackle, stood out conspicuously for the losers.

7 Conference Teams Risk Records

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 9.—Seven of ten Southern Conference teams involved in tomorrow's family feuds will have unblemished records within the circuit at stake.

Duke, defending a championship which was won in spectacular fashion in 1935, will meet Clemson at Durham, while two unbeaten elevens—North Carolina and Maryland—are to tangle at Chapel Hill.

The Blue Devils are now at the top of the conference heap as the result of victories over Davidson and South Carolina. Clemson routed Virgiha Tech in the Bengals' only title try thus far.

Coach Frank Dobson's strong Maryland squad also scored a decision over the luckless V. P. I. Gobblers, while the Tarheels began their pennant drive by upsetting Wake Forest.

The North Carolina entries were favored to win handily in each instance, but not by such margins as prevailed last year when Clemson went down, 38 to 12, and the Terrapins bowed, 33 to 0.

The Citadel will send its strongest eleven in years against Furman, but the Purple Hurricane was due to again sweep on to victory, but by a much closer score than last year's 35-0. The contest will be the first conference encounter for these newly admitted South Carolina institutions.

The William and Mary-Virginia Tech meeting in Richmond should be the closest of the conference engagements. The Old Dominion rivals battled to a scoreless deadlock in 1935 and the game again looms as a toss-up. The precedent set by the Techmen of never losing to an Indian team in a quarter of a century of warfare gives the Gobblers, perhaps, a psychological edge.

V. M. I. May Surprise.

V. M. I.'s promising sophomores learned an ample lesson against Kentucky's experienced gridmen last week and may inject a surprise into the week-end's proceedings, but Davidson was the choice of the conservative forecasters in the third conference rout to be fought on Carolina soil tomorrow. The Cadets have a win over South Carolina to their credit, while the Wildcats dropped the opener to Duke and then came gack to even the count by upsetting North Carolina State.

Of the six conference teams venturing outside of the fold, Virginia's undefeated Cavaliers faced the hardest assignment against Navy. Washington and Lee was conceded a better chance to upset West Virginia than last year, when the Generals went down, 20-0.

South Carolina, the lone Southern defender against the Southeastern Conference, will meet Florida on even terms as the result of the Gamecocks' impressive display of strength last week against mighty Duke, while the 'Gators were hard-pushed to gain topside over the Citadel.

The University of Richmond was encamped at Lancaster, Pa., where the Spiders hoped to end the tie jinx against Franklin and Marshall.

Fork Union's Pass Defeats Central, 7-0

A 230-pound tackle from Fork Union Military Academy named Leo Bielski stepped out of his drab role in the line yesterday to throw a 30-yard pass with a wet, soggy ball for the lone touchdown which gave the Virginia prep school champions a 7-0 victory over Central High.

A crowd of more than 1,500 sat through intermittent drizzles in Central Stadium to see Coach Hardy Pearce's inter-high champions match the heavier cadet team yard for yard only to lose on one momentary lapse in the second quarter. It was Central's first defeat of the season.

The touchdown came on fourth down after Central had stopped Fork Union cold on two running plays and broken up a pass by Bielski to John Lascari over the goal line. On the fourth try, Bielski faded back to the Central 30-yard line and finally flung a long, lazy toss far to the left to Trevor Howell who had sneaked behind Bill Ickes, Central halfback, and took the pass in the end zone for the score.

Inexperience Tells.

It was inexperience which cost Central the game, this being Icke's first season as a regular. The youngster had plenty of time to fade back with Howell and knock the pass down but was more or less taken in by the slickers from Virginia.

Ickes came near taking the hero role for Central in the last quarter when he cut loose on a 20-yard run to the Fork Union 6-yard line, but the Cadets braced to end the threat.

Landon Prep Plays St. Andrews Today

The Landon Prep football team will open its season here today against the perennially strong St. Andrew's School eleven, of Wilmington, Del. The Saints have beaten Landon for the past three years, including an 18-to-6 victory last season.

Despite the loss of Capt. Bob Williams, big tackle, and Johnny Crocker, ace back, the prospects are bright this season. Regulars from last season include Gardner Eaton, 186-pound giant at tackle, and Tom Shrefy and Red Hibber at the guard posts. Reds Channell is the only backfield man back in uniform.

Ralph Fowler defeated D. C. Grover, 1 up, in the second round of the Washington Golf and Country Club club championship play yesterday. In the same round L. H. Whitten beat D. L. Vale, 1 up; Joe Baldwin defeated Calvert Dickey, 3 and 2, and John Thacker took the measure of Felix Early, 2 up.

Dorothy Traung Wins From Mrs. Hill, 1 Up

Philadelphia, Oct. 9 (AP).—A 22-year-old San Francisco girl, Dorothy Traung, women's Western champion, defeated Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, 1 up in 19 holes, in the finals of the Berthellyn Golf Cup tourney today, marking the first time in 24 years the cup has moved west of the Mississippi River.

G. W., Mississippi Slosh to 0-0 Tie

Salturelli, the G. W. center, cost the Colonials 20 yards deep in their own territory and from behind his own goal line, Merka attempted to boot out of danger. The wet ball caromed on a horrible angle and went outside only 20 yards from the G. W. goal.

From there, Mississippi took up its first real charge at the G. W. goal. After a poor pass from the Rebs' center had cost Ray Hapes a 4-yard loss, Clarence Hapes took a pass from Ray Hapes behind the line and gained 5. A line attack bogged down and Clarence Hapes shot a pass to brother Ray in the flat zone.

A touchdown loomed as brother Ray gathered in the ball and appeared to be off, but his footing failed, he slipped to the ground and George Washington claimed the ball on its own 11-yard line, a yard short of first down.

No less than 18 fumbles the game produced with the footing offering no traction and the ball defying a firm grip. Eight times the Colonial backs saw the ball ooze from their hands and ten times Mississippi was a victim of fumbles.

Ole Miss Threatens.

Forward passing, which should have been out of the question, was, nevertheless attempted, but the Colonials tried only two passes and most of the Rebs' nine were of the short, behind-the-line variety that carried little risk. But it was a Mississippi pass that for a fleeting moment appeared to spell defeat for G. W.

That was in the third period when Mississippi made its most impressive series of gains after getting the ball in midfield. Clarence Hapes and Bernard smashed at center for 5 yards each and Bernard picked up 5 more in another try at the middle of the line. A 5-yard penalty put the ball on G. W.'s 30 and Peters ripped off left tackle for 7 yards.

Then it was that Clarence Hapes shot a perfect pass to Bradley, who caught the ball in the clear after outwitting the G. W. secondary and, as he turned for the goal, only 10 yards away, dropped it. The play was ruled an incompleted pass and the Mississippi attack stalled.

Never were the Colonials able to progress within the Mississippi 17-yard line, but it was G. W. which dominated the opening quarter.

Reeves clipped off 3 yards on an end run to right and then was spilled for no gain on a dash to the left end. The Mississippi line hurled back a charge by Turner and broke through in a body to block Prather's kick which the Rebs recovered on their own 30-yard line.

Gaining possession of the ball again in midfield, Merka put the Rebs in jeopardy with a 50-yard kick that was grounded on the Mississippi 12, and Clarence Hapes could boot out to only the 35-yard line. Reeves slashed off tackle for 6 yards, but a 15-yard penalty for holding removed the threat from the Colonials' assault.

U. S. Randle's Horses Win In Show

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 9.—Conditioned by a summer of successful competition in less important shows, the horses of U. S. Randle, prominent Washington horseman, performed very creditably as the annual Warrenton Horse Show, a two-day affair, opened today.

Randle entries captured blues in two good classes of the premier exhibition of its type, won a red in one other class and were third in two other showings.

Randle's Pride Wins.

Randle's Pride accounted for one victory for the Washintgon stable by annexing the open jumping for hand-up jumpers. Claws, another Randle entry, won the middleweight and heavyweight qualified hunters showing. Randle's Pride was third in the international class, won by Lacquer Lady, belonging to Fenton Fadeley, and Claws was awarded the yellow in the ladies' hunter class, won by Llangollen Farm's Springhope.

Mary Elizabeth Miles was the first District entry to claim a blue. She scored for first place in the saddle ponies class. Margaret Hill placed third in the S. P. C. A. horsemanship event, which was won by 12-year-old William Hulburt, jr., of Middleburg.

Bullis Downs Roosevelt by 14-0 Count

Led by its 195-pound All-Prep fullback, Ed Hahnfeldt, of Illinois, Bullis Prep turned back a strong Roosevelt eleven, 14 to 0, yesterday in Roosevelt Stadium. A crowd of several hundred watched the game in which the Rough Riders appeared much stronger than last season.

Hahnfeldt was the moving spirit for Bullis, scoring both touchdowns and doing most of the punting and passing. It was his long kick which set the Rough Riders back on their own 22-yard line in the first period. It forced Roosevelt to kick and, as Kollmyer, Roosevelt quarterback, attempted to punt, the Bullis line broke through with Left Tackle Britton blocking the punt.

The ball caromed off several players before Hahnfeldt scooped it up and ran 35 yards for the first score. McFadden's placekick was good. Bullis again drove to the Roosevelt 20-yard line, but the Rough Riders held.

British Hockey Team Here For Game

Girls Face All-Washington Outfit in Capital's First International Fray

Fresh from a 9-0 victory over an All-Baltimore team, the All-England women's field hockey team will invade Washington today for the first international hockey match ever played here.

An All-Washington team picked from nine schools will provide the opposition.

The game will be played at 3 p. m. on the National Cathedral School field, at Thirty-fourth street and Woodley road. The Baltimore victory was more or less expected, and Baltimore players heralded the showing of the Maryland girls as indication of the upturn of the game here. A 15-0 or 20-0 score was expected.

Comprising the Washington line-up will be the following girls: Betty Craig, of American University; Ethel Shamberger, of Maryland University; Lucille Sanborne and Capt. Hazel Sayre, of Madeira School; Elizabeth Climpton and Elizabeth Cooper, teachers at Alice Deal Junior High; Mary Sproule, of Sidewell Friends School; Jennie Turnbull, of George Washington University; Doris Hannen, of Hood College; Betty Sands, of Marjorie Webster School; Betty Gilbert and Marian Spaulding, of Mount Vernon Seminary, and Cora Spaulding, Miss Morgan, Miss Bennett and Ethel Shamer.

After the Washington game, the English girls will journey into Virginia for games with Richmond, Wednesday, and another with Sweet Briar School, Friday. Not since 1928 has an English women's field hockey team invaded this country.

The English will attend the annual conference of the International Federation of Women's Hockey Association in Philadelphia, October 20. Representatives of Scotland, Ireland, Union of South Africa and Australia and Wales will attend. An international tournament with the above-named countries competing will be held in connection with the event.

Women Open Inter-City Bowling

The Women's Southern Intercity League will open its season tonight with the feature match of the inaugural being staged at the Rosslyn bowling center with the Rosslyn girls playing host to the Recreation girls of Baltimore, last year's champions.

Both clubs broke the team's season average record held by Lucky Strike with 522.39, Baltimore totaling 533.19 and Rosslyn, 533.17.

The line-ups of the two teams include some of the country's first-ranking women stars, Baltimore having to choose from such capable talent as Dot O'Brien, Lotta Janowitz, Anna Miller, Audrey Mullaney, Alice Lucas and Evelyn Brose. Rosslyn will depend upon Blanche Wootton, Evelyn Ellis, Rena Levy, Lucy Rose and Lorraine Gulli.

Employes of the Acacia Life Insurance Co. turned out en masse last night at the Arcadia alleys for the opening ceremonies of their newly organized duckpin league. Ernie Rice ably rewarded the gallery with a 138 game and top set of 405 to give the Kacy's a clean sweep over President's Boys.

Relief Army Grows Despite Business Gains

New York, Oct. 9.—Notwithstanding steady gains in business activity and in employment by private industry, the number of people on the relief rolls, exclusive of those engaged in emergency conservation work, increased slightly during the past year, according to figures made public today by the National Industrial Conference Board.

In June, 1936, the latest month for which complete figures are available, the total number of people on the relief rolls, apart from those on emergency conservation work, was approximately 4,482,000, against 4,475,000 in July, 1935. Though slight, the increase ran counter to what would have been expected, in view of the continued improvement in general business conditions.

The Conference Board, in its study, traces the uninterrupted growth of the relief burden since July, 1933, the earliest month for which complete figures are available. In that month the total number of people on relief, except those on emergency conservation work, aggregated approximately 3,908,000. By July of the following year the number had grown to nearly 4,400,000. There was a smaller increase during the next year, the number on relief in July, 1935, totaling 4,475,000. By June, 1936, the total had risen to 4,482,000.

Of the number currently on relief, approximately 2,256,000 are employed on work sponsored by the Works Progress Administration, and about 665,000 are employed by other governmental agencies. In addition, it is estimated that considerably more than 1,500,000 persons, chiefly unemployables, are being cared for by State and local agencies. Most of these were formerly reported by Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Bank Deposits 51.335 Billion, Five-Year High

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board announced yesterday that the nation's bank deposits climbed to $51,335,000,000 on June 30, the highest level since June, 1931.

Deposits with mutual savings banks and member banks of the Federal Reserve System were described by the board as "close to the largest volume on record." The increase in total deposits in all of America's 15,752 banks was estimated at 12 per cent, or $5,569,000,000, during the year ended June 30.

In its monthly bulletin the board also reported that the 50 per cent increase in reserve requirements, which it put into effect August 15 to prevent a possibly dangerous credit expansion, reduced excess reserves of member banks $1,250,000,000 during the last half of August.

Reserves were 42 per cent in excess of requirements after the new regulations went into effect, in comparison with 102 per cent prior to August 15. Required reserves were $1,480,000,000 larger in the second half of August than in the first half, the bulletin said, attributing the increase "almost entirely" to the new requirements rather than to a growth of deposits.

On January 1 this year the total was $2,805,906,000. Savings deposits totaled $482,850,000 against $480,580,000 three months ago, $460,341,000 December 31, 1935, and $300,322,000 December 31, 1932.

Market Advance Continues For Eighth Successive Day

Broad Upward Movement Establishes New High Averages for Stocks and Bonds; Wheat Advances.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Oct. 9.—Sustained demand for a variety of industrial shares boosted the stock market another step today on its climb into new high ground for the last five years. Numerous losses were scattered through the list at the finish of a fairly busy day but bulls had the best of the argument for the eighth straight session.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks edged up .1 of a point to a new top for the recovery market at 70.7, the fifth time in succession it has topped highs running back to the spring of 1931. The broadly distributed activity resulted in total transactions of 2,235,990 shares compared with 2,223,080 the day before.

From the assortment of issues moving ahead, analysts inferred buyers were combing the list for shares likely to benefit from further business recovery and expected year-end showers of extra and increased dividends.

Steels, rail equipments, metals, textiles, rails, oils and industrial specialties were among the day's outstanding gainers. Those up 1 to 5 points at the finish included American Metal, Brown Shoe, Delaware & Hudson, General Cable, Greyhound, Lima Locomotive Works, Revere Brass "A," Ward Baking "A," Standard Oil of Kansas, Continental Can, American Car & Foundry and Hercules Motors.

Heavy Industries Favored.

Growing expenditures for plant improvements encouraged buying in issues representative of the long-depressed heavy industries. A similar tendency to look for backward issues, notably second-grade rails, was evident in a further advance of many bonds.

United States Steel got above 77 to a new top, but finished only slightly higher at 76½. General Motors was up 1 around 72. Alleghany senior shares extended previous gains on announcement of proposed extra dividends on Chesapeake & Ohio common. Socony-Vacuum starred among the oils with a rise of about a point in heavy trading.

Yellow Truck gave up two points following news of a recapitalization plan, but the preferred rose more than 3. Other rifts in the bullish lute included J. I. Case, down 4 at 159; Deere, off nearly 2 at 94¼, and International Paper preferred, off 1½ at 62⅜.

The rosy-tinted domestic business news, including accounts of brisk autumn retail trade and a further seasonal rise in rail freight loadings, seemed to divert attention in financial circles from the latest European war talk caused by Russia's note on the Spanish conflict.

Foreign currencies clung to an even course. Wheat at Chicago moved up ⅝ to 1 cent a bushel and corn 1¼ to 1½. Cotton ended 25 cents a bale lower to 40 cents higher.

Rail Bonds in Demand.

Rail loans recaptured leadership in the bond market today as the recent demand for utility obligations retreated before sizable offerings.

The more speculative type of corporate bonds drew most attention as trading sentiment visualized a continuation of the uptrend. There was sufficient support in the low yield group, however, to send a majority of such issues into higher ground.

Trading was active, the turnover for all bonds being $19,052,000, face value, of which corporates amounted to $17,420,000, compared with Thursday's total of $16,142,000.

In the rail section "Katy" adjustment 5s extended their recent advance with a rise of 2½ points to 72½. They were followed closely by the 5s of 1962 and the 4½s each of which moved up more than a point. New Haven 4½s added 2½ at 39, while Lehigh Valley 4s, Rock Island General 4s and Southern Railway 4s registered gains of a point or more.

Pressure was fairly evenly distributed in the utility list. International Hydro Electric 6s were less resistant and declined 1½ to 68½.

The recent lassitude of U. S. Governments remained unrelieved as turnover aggregated $350,000, face value. Prices were little affected with minor swings about equally divided between gains and losses.

Foreigns also lagged. French unstamped 7½s dropped 5⅛ to 118⅜ and Cuban 5½s lost 1½ to 56 as most other issues closed uneven.

The Associated Press averages for 20 rail bonds moved to a new 1936 high of 97.9, up .1 of a point. Compilations for the industrials and the low yields improved slightly. The 10 utilitity issues' average price receded .3 of a point to 102.8.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 9.—Stock prices were higher today and the industrial group continued in good demand, especially silks and textiles issues. Mexican eagle shares sold higher, but reacted slightly at the close on profit taking sales. Copper issues, transatlantics, gilt-edged securities and foreign bonds advanced in price and home rails remained steady. The mining list moved irregularly with kaffirs selling lower.

Paris.—Weakness continued throughout today's session in the bourse, rentes closed more than a franc lower. Practically all classifications moved lower, losses being shown in industrials, international issues and bank stocks. The railroad group was neglected.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures closed firm and about a penny higher following a bullish Argentine acreage estimate and reports of needed rains in Australia. Investment buying in cotton for the forward deliveries was influenced by a favorable view of the statistical position. The market closed 2 points higher to 7 lower.

Soy Beans Lead Grain Advances In Pit Trading

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—Eclipsing all other grains, the recently established market for soy bean future deliveries went soaring today to extreme immediate limits that exchange regulations allowed.

The maximum overnight rise attained was 4 cents a bushel, but this was not fully held, profit-taking at the last causing some reaction. With offerings scarce, soy beans at today's top were in some cases 7½ cents higher than Monday and about 50 cents higher than a year ago.

Stimulated by price upturns at Winnipeg and Liverpool, especially a new six-year peak record in Liverpool October contracts, the Chicago wheat market closed firm ⅝ to 1 cent above yesterday's finish. Army Cut Held Safest Method To Prevent War

14-Point Program to Insure World Peace Adopted at Conference.

"We recommend the extension of the policy established by the Washington Conference of 1922 that there be no further fortifications of our island possessions in the western Pacific.

"We recommend the withdrawal from the Philippines of all American military and naval establishments. We oppose the continuance of American military advisers who have encouraged the adoption by the Philippine Government of its program for conscripting for military education all males 10 years of age and over.

"We oppose the industrial mobilization plan of the War Department designed to conscript labor and all other manpower in case of war or national emergency.

"We support the principle of the Nye-Kvale bill calling for elimination of the compulsory requirement from military training courses in civil educational institutions. We also urge the cessation of government aid to all military training in high schools.

"We support the proposal of the Munitions Investigating Committee for a national referendum in 1938 on conscription in the event of war on foreign soil.

"Economic policies: Such easing of international trade tensions and stabilization of currencies as will facilitate world peace.

"Neutrality: We recommend continuance of the existing neutrality legislation making mandatory at the outbreak of war an embargo on all arms, ammunition and implements of war and loans and credits to belligerent nations.

"We recommend that agreements be sought with other governments to extend these policies.

"We support restrictions to cover other essential war materials and recommend that further study be made by a committee.

"World co-operation: We favor the extension of pacific settlement of disputes and of peace machinery on the American continent.

"We approve the stand taken by the Democratic and Republican platforms of 1932 concerning the obligations of the United States to consult in case of a threatened violation of the Kellogg Pact and in favor of adherence to the World Court.

"We recognize the moral and political obligations of the United States to effectuate the Kellogg Pact by efforts to solve fundamental economic tensions making for war by co-operation in the peaceful settlement of disputes.

Red Aims Debated.

Regarding communism, a debate resounded through the Gold Room of the hotel for a large part of the day on the purported attempts of communists with their American League Against War and Fascism to link all peace movements with communism.

The council went on record as opposing amalgamation with the American League Against War and Fascism.

Earlier in the day a letter to President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull was made public. It said:

"Dear Mr. President:

"The National Council for Prevention of War in its annual conference urges that our Government support the proposal of Great Britain that Article 19 of the Washington Naval Treaty of 1922 be renewed, prohibiting the increase of fortifications and naval bases in the Pacific. A failure to renew this agreement is likely to lead to a dangerous fortifications race which will increase the threat of war."

Both Roosevelt and Hull have recently stressed the paramount importance of public opinion in the determination of policies abroad. The council will set about enlisting the support of churches, farm organizations, women's organizations, colleges and labor organizations, for its program, and hopes to strongly influence coming legislation thereby.

Rum, Gaming Raid Nets Two Prisoners

Delilah Wright, colored, 29, and her brother, Allen Taylor, 33, both of the 1700 block of Willard street northwest, were charged with violations of the liquor and gaming laws yesterday folowing a vice squad raid.

The woman, police said, was arrested at her home on warrants charging her with operating a lottery and keeping liquor for sale. Taylor was booked on three charges of selling liquor without a permit.

Arraigned before Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, they were placed in $2,000 bond each. George C. Deyoe led the raid.

Students Find New Methods To Earn Funds

Two at Maryland U. Serve Food to Late Risers and Learn Idea Pays.

Gone are the days of the magazine salesman who used to ring your front doorbell and plead with you to take a subscription to help him work his way through college.

An heterogeneous assortment of jobs ranging from poster printing to serving coffee and doughnuts to late risers in the coed dormitory assist 43 per cent of the students at the University of Maryland to finance their educations, the survey disclosed.

Among the more unusual enterprises is the "breakfast for late risers" service, conceived by Mary Dow and Laura Manning.

Own Experiences.

The idea was engendered out of their own unhappy experiences of having to rise in time for 8 o'clock breakfast at the university dining hall across the campus.

They figured there would be plenty of coeds who would pay 15 cents for coffee, doughnuts and fruit juice, with the added comforts of sleeping late on Saturdays and Sundays when they had no classes.

Promptly they applied to university authorities for permission to conduct their breakfast business and today they report a "rushing business." Mary came to the university from New Mexico and Laura from Massachusetts.

Milicent M. Keppler, 424 Eleventh street southeast, who has a talent for drawing has entered the poster-lettering business to earn expenses. She works on advertising for campus events.

Restaurant Cook.

John S. Hebb 3d, of Baltimore, used to be editor of the yearbook at the university. Now he is a salad cook at one of the College Park restaurants.

By far the largest number of students at the university help to earn their way through college by assisting members of the faculty in marking papers and doing stenography work. According to Harvey T. Casbarian, university comptroller, 368 undergraduates are employed in practically every branch of the institution.

Prof. Geary Eppley, administrator of the National Youth Administration funds at the university, has 270 students on his pay roll. The salary for this group is on a graduating scale with $125 a year as the maximum pay.

NED BRANT—A Story of College Athletics

By Bob Zuppke
Famous Football Coach.

BUD, THE FELLOW YOU TOLD ALL ABOUT THE VARSITY'S WEAK POINTS IS THE BIGGEST GAMBLER IN CARTER-VILLE
BECAUSE YOU VIOLATED THE RULE AGAINST DISCUSSING THE TEAM WITH ANYONE, YOU'RE SUSPENDED INDEFINITELY!
DO ME A FAVOR, COACH—LIFT THE BOY'S SUSPENSION—HE DIDN'T REALIZE WHAT HE WAS DOING—ALL RIGHT, TAYLOR—YOU DID ME A FAVOR WHEN YOU CAME TO ME BEFORE WRITING WHAT YOU KNOW
THANKS, COACH
NOW THEN, IF YOU WANT A GOOD CLIMAX FOR YOUR STORY, FOLLOW ME TO THAT GAMBLER!

APPLE MARY

By Martha Orr

OH GOSH, SLIM'S IN THERE WITH MARY AND DENNIE, TELLIN' 'EM HOW I MADE HIM GO AWAY WITHOUT SAYIN' GOOD-BY, AND THAT'S NOT THE HALF OF IT—
WHEN HE GETS THROUGH, THEY'LL NEVER SPEAK TO ME, AGAIN. HE'LL MAKE IT SOUND LOTS WORSE THAN IT WAS, EVEN. GEE, THIS RAIN'S COLD—
KER-CHOO-OO-OO
FOR PITY SAKES, IT'S BILL! YOU'LL CATCH YOUR DEATH OF COLD OUT HERE, COME ON IN BY THE FIRE.
YOU MEAN YUH AIN'T MAD?
WHY SHOULD I BE MAD?
THEN SLIM DIDN'T TELL YUH—I MEAN—SAY—PUT 'ER THERE, PAL. YER A BRICK! FROM NOW ON, COUNT ME AS A FRIEND.

Pulitzer Prize Play Makes Ace Film at Earle

'Craig's Wife' Is Picture of First Rank, Done in Artistic Manner.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"CRAIG'S WIFE." Columbia Pictures filmization of the Pulitzer Prize play by George Kelly, adapted to the screen by Mary C. McCall, jr., co-starring Rosalind Russell and John Boles, with Billie Burke, Jane Darwell, Dorothy Wilson, Alma Kruger, Thomas Mitchell, Raymond Walburn, Elisabeth Risdon, Robert Allen and Nydia Westman. Directed by Dorothy Arzner. Previewed Monday, October 5.

To this study of a self-complacent, suave, iron-willed wife, whose introversion finally spelled the climax of her domestic infelicity, Columbia Pictures has brought the same fine perception, skill and artistic vision that have marked earlier of its productions as among the best the Hollywood studios have produced.

BELL.

There is no great field for photographic adventure in "Craig's Wife." It is a domestic drama that finds its chief motivation in the preservation of every minute elegance of a fashionable and richly adorned home. There is no wide sweep of scene; no opportunity to explore wide expanses of scenic beauty. The drama inherently is psychological, not physical.

However, Columbia has contrived to make the essential sequences of "Craig's Wife" fascinatingly interesting by a deft utilization of all of the tricks that differentiate the commonplace from the artistic. "Craig's Wife" is a picture that emphasizes the potentialities of the cinema for apprehending the higher reaches of drama that does not rely on physical conflict for its effect.

Is Excellently Played.

A great deal of the appeal of this picture rests in the perfection with which it is played. John Boles has done better work than he reveals here, but never Rosalind Russell. It has been indicated in this space on a previous occasion that this is Miss Russell's crowning achievement before the cameras and microphones. She offers a character study that is cold, self-centered and generally distasteful—as the role requires—but she executes the tasks assigned to her with such admirable grace, poise and dramatic strength as largely to vitiate the unpleasant effect the part might have in other hands.

Mr. Boles is best when he is maddest. His romantic scenes are not too well done, but when he begins to smash bric-a-brac and otherwise asserts his prerogatives as man of the house he really strikes fire.

Among the supporting players, Jane Darwell, Dorothy Wilson, Billie Burke and Alma Kruger do yeomen's service. Their parts are exacting to a degree and they meet every requirement laid upon them with fine credit. Not the least effective role in the film is that of the maid, played by Nydia Westman. This young woman is rapidly emerging as one of the best of the Hollywood subordinates.

"Red" Is a Hit.

On the stage the entertainment at the Earle this week is provided by "Red" Nichols and his orchestra and specialists. The band act is not greatly different from a large number of other band acts that have played Capital stages in recent months, although there is an "air" about the goings-on that attracts a crowd. Mr. Nichols, himself, is a trumpeter of the first rank and adds his virtuosity to many of the numbers that are played and sung. He has with him the Three Songopators, a male trio of vocalists that knows its way around the better rhythms, and a clever songstress by the name of Frances Stevens.

Among the most effective of the orchestra's endeavors I should place Miss Stevens' "It Ain't Necessarily So," from "Porgy and Bess;" "Bye-Bye, Baby," with "Red" Nichols' trumpet interludes, and the medley of tunes from "Swing Time," the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers film not so long ago at RKO-Keith's.

As an extra added attraction, Shea and Raymond, not so remotely a feature of one of the foremost of the stage revues, contribute their unique dancing and singing turn. One of the team being very tall, and the other being not so high, the net result of their efforts is no less than devastating.

The bill is completed by the usual short-reel subjects, and a new issue of the Paramount News. If genuine artistry is what you are after, I suggest that this program be not omitted from your show-shopping memoranda for the week.

Loew's Capitol

"HIS BROTHER'S WIFE." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by George Auerbach, adapted to the screen by Leon Gordon and John Meehan, co-starring Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor, with Jean Hersholt, Joseph Calleia, John Eldredge, Samuel H. Hinds, Leonard Mudie, Jed Prouty, Pedro de Cordoba and William Stack. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

No complaint can be made that the characters in "His Brother's Wife," current at Loew's Capitol, do not have the usual human weaknesses. The exciting development of the story is quite as much a development of character as of events.

In Chris, played by Robert Taylor, is found a young fellow who is both a bit slow in making proper arrangements to pay his gambling debts and who is willing to toss his profession and ideals overboard to make a hasty marriage.

But the object of his affections, Barbara Stanwyck, has childish traits, too. Because, after being stopped in her project to marry the young man, she thinks it quite a smart thing to entangle his brother (already engaged) into a purely technical marriage.

But these completely goulashed actions and ideals serve as the start for a story with back-fires and sudden starts in "high" that will startle and satisfy those movie fans who want to be kept agog every moment.

Taylor Steps Up.

Robert Taylor takes a big step up in his acting in "His Brother's Wife." There is a new forcefulness and a becoming touch of hardness that add zest to the playboy and "perfect lover" qualities that started his vogue. Barbara Stanwyck contributes a typical performance, pleasant and well-done, if you like the Stanwyck style.

Jean Hersholt, typed and cast perfectly, plays a lovable old scientist, and Joseph Calleia is seen too little and given too little opportunity in a tough gambler's role which permits of little shading. John Eldridge, as the brother who first balks a foolish marriage and then makes the same mistake himself, does very well, a certain resemblance to Taylor adding to the impressiveness of their scenes.

One of the most satisfying things in "His Brother's Wife" is the way the action sweeps from New York night club life to the jungles of South America, and in the contrast of high jinks in Manhattan with the scientists' unceasing and painful toil in fighting disease.

This constant break in pace is perhaps the principal reason why it is satisfying and entertaining for every moment, even though its story is pretty illogical.

Mr. Lampkin, Producer.

Phil Lampkin's "Varieties" are becoming an institution just like "Old Home Week." And let us say that Senor Lampkin has turned out a very slick and jolly revue, which he directs with finesse and gayety.

The affair starts with an orchestra "Arrangement in Blues" very effective and topped rousingly by Helen Ely's midnight blue rendition of the "St. Louis Blues."

A tango tap dance by Pritchard and Lord completely won the audience. This pair started off a bit slowly, but after they got up steam, nothing could stop them. When Miss Lord coyly kissed Mr. Pritchard (or was it the other way round) that big bunch of high school kids always present on Fridays all seemed to think they had to make kissing noises and "Ah-h-h" sounds. It was quite a lot of fun.

Nell Kelly, a rough-and-tumble little comedy singer, was another knockout and was called back for encore after encore. Nell is red-headed and has all that goes with it.

But He Doesn't Dance!

Right here is the place to deny that Phil Lampkin really dances in his new revue. No sir! He is pulled and hauled and yanked around by Nell Kelly. His necktie is torn loose and his hair mussed and his clothes all disarranged and finally he is bitten on the ankle! But Phil does not dance. He is just womanhandled.

The Elida Dancers deserved a great big hand for their smart work yesterday, and they got it. Each of the chorus dance numbers is bright and clever, particularly the one where the gals step to a dozen different tunes, doing dances that range from a mild "Little Egypt" to an Irish jig.

Frank Libuse is responsible for the clowning and produces constant gales of laughter, although some folks will find his humor a bit primitive in spots.

RKO-Keith's

"MY MAN GODFREY." Universal picturization of the novel by Eric Hatch, adapted to the screen by Hatch and Morrie Ryskind, starring Carole Lombard and William Powell, supported by Alice Brady, Jean Dixon, Eugene Pallette, Mischa Auer, Gail Patrick and Alan Mowbray. Directed by Gregory La Cava. Reviewed second week by Dorothea Lewis.

If there were only more people Irene Bullock to go on "Scavenger Hunts," more "Scavenger Hunts" to go on, and more Godfrey's to find on "Scavenger Hunts!"

Irene, not quite bright, but very affectionate, picks up a forgotten man on one of the aforesaid "Scavenger Hunts" and turns him into a model butler. Then, a change from a "Scavenger Hunt" to a "Man Hunt" being of practically no moment to Irene, off she goes again, buckety, buckety, buck, to turn her Protege Godfrey into Husband Godfrey.

That isn't so easy, because Godfrey isn't sure that his move from a city dump to the Bullock's mansion is a promotion.

The story, the dialogue, the pantomime, the situations, the pace, the players, the director, all unite to wear you out with laughter.

Carole Lombard is quite outrageously funny as Irene, though why anyone was inspired enough to think of this usually sophisticated lady for the part of a silly, little girl, whose heart is grand, but head is weak, we'll never know. We would never have thought of her, but, having seen her playing it, bangs in her eyes, silent, suffering, questioning, posing, and, having heard her breathless, Bab-a-sub-deb voice, we can't imagine anyone else doing it a quarter as well.

This Makes It Unanimous.

But please don't think that this duet is the whole show. They merely revolve in, as, the center of the majestrom known as the Bullock family, crazier than the Rimpelgars of "Three-Cornered Moon."

"It's strange how some things lead to other things," sighs the pensive Irene, but there's nothing strange about "My Man Godfrey's" first week on fifteenth leading to a second, third, or even fourth.

He has a good "March-of-Time" issue to help him along, too.

Lend Charm to a Grim Play

Columbia

"THE GENERAL DIED AT DAWN." Paramount picturization of a story by Charles G. Booth, adapted to the screen by Clifford Odets, co-starring Gary Cooper and Madeleine Carroll, with Akim Tamiroff, Dudley Digges, Porter Hall, William Frawley, J. M. Kerrigan and Willie Fung. Directed by Lewis Milestone. Reviewed, repeat engagement, Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud.

Chinese warlord Gen. Yang (Akim Tamiroff), "a talented man, but very corrupt," scourges the 12 provinces with locust-like thoroughness—chews Angel—breath—favorite expression: "At's a fack!"—secures money intended for gun shipment to "downtrodden masses" which had been entrusted to American John O'Hara (Gary Cooper), ex-aviator, ex-boxer, interested in the oppressed Chinese because he "has background of oppression"—has pet monkey named Sam—speaks in terse Odetsian argot—although 'not one of the anxious boys,' he forgets his mission long enough to fall in love with Judy (Madeline Caroll), beautious American girl, tool of her unscrupulous, twitchily-unreliable father.

The money belt changes hands four times, to be finally located by a "drunken fool" munitions salesman (William Frawley) With fisticuffs, shooting, noise, and exciting action, the story moves on to an unexpected denouement, brought about by Yang's unwillingness to "lose face."

Yang marches about, dealing in no uncertain manner with both opponents and the English language; vanity is his undoing; 'at's a fack! Frawley, bellowing his lines with Jimmie-Durantian fervor, has never had a better role; of especial note is his rendition of "I'll be glad when your're dead, you rascal, you."

Social import? You may perceive flashes of it, but Odets' dialog is so trickily clever that you will never know whether he wrote it with his tongue in his cheek or his thumb at his nose.

A Terrytoon and a contemporary newsreel complete the bill. "Pacing the Thoroughbreds" will be of interest to racing fans.

Metropolitan

"THE TEXAS RANGERS." Paramount picturization of a story by King Vidor and Elizabeth Hill, adapted to the screen by Louis Stevens, with data from Walter Prescott Hill's book of the same name, featuring Fred MacMurray, Jack Oakie, Bennie Bartlett, Jean Parker, Lloyd Nolan, Edward Ellis, Richard Carle, Jed Prouty, Fred Kohler and Frank Cordell. Directed by King Vidor. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

With all those attributes which have been, and still are, intensely appealing; with all those characteristics which still maintain the "Western" in the forefront of motion picture subjects, "The Texas Rangers" comes as an added example of what a real story, real production and real acting can do for a class of pictures not normally attaining the distinction of playing Class A, first-run theaters.

As the picture opens at the Metropolitan, following a successful week at the Earle, little can be added to those remarks appearing in these columns a fortnight ago. Surely no more glamorous group—unless it be the Royal Northwest Mounted Police—could be found as a cinema topic than the Texas Rangers, the prototype of 1936's G-men.

Bearing the brunt of the action are Fred MacMurray and Jack Oakie, with Lloyd Nolan providing the villainy and Jean Parker furnishing the other half of the love interest. The other members of the cast—a few of which are named in the preceding italicized paragraph—are efficient and pleasing.

The fast-riding, straight-shooting "horse opera" is supplemented by "Little Swee' Pea," a Popeye cartoon of interest, and by the combined releases of the Paramount and Universal News reels.

'The Rent Veil' Subject Of Dr. S. B. Daugherty

"The Rent Veil" is the subject of Dr. S. B. Daugherty's morning sermon at the Memorial United Brethren Church tomorrow. At the evening service he will preach on "My Creed Concerning Christ."

Walter Huston Matches Stage Work in Film

'Dodsworth' Repeats Stage Triumph of Star Who Created Role.

"DODSWORTH." Samuel Goldwyn picturization for United Artists of the stage play dramatized from the Sinclair Lewis novel by Sidney Howard, adapted to the screen by Mr. Howard, with Walter Huston and Ruth Chatterton starred, supported by Mary Astor, Paul Lukas, David Niven, Mme. Maria Ouspenskaya, Odette Myrtil, Spring Byington and Harlan Briggs. Directed by William Wyler. Previewed Tuesday, October 6.

It already has been recorded here that no successful stage play ever has been translated into terms of celluloid drama with greater fidelity than is to be discerned in the case of "Dodsworth," Sidney Howard's own film version of his dramatization of the novel by Sinclair Lewis.

There would seem to be little more than need be said regarding the superlative excellence of this picture. "Dodsworth" on the stage was one of Max Gordon's surest claims to eminence; on the screen the story loses nothing of its dramatic quality, its sharpness of characterization or its definite appeal to every type of amusement seeker.

The story of the automobile magnate who retires and tries to learn how to enjoy life, under the tutelage of an addle-pated wife, is too well known to need recapitulation now. It is a fairly true recital of American viewpoints and modes of living made vibrant by Sinclair Lewis' odd capacity for realism and Sidney Howard's comparable ability to convert pages of type into actable drama.

Certainly, the film retreats not an inch from all of the advanced positions assumed by the book. Scenes, of course are expanded, but the sequence of events remains identical with that revealed upon the boards and in no respect has the current of the narrative been in the least altered or deflected.

Huston Triumphs Again.

Walter Huston continues in the role of Samuel Dodsworth and here does perhaps the best work he ever has done for the gelatin form of entertainment. His impersonation of the role he played so successfully upon the stage seems to have grown in stature for the new medium of expression and altogether his portrayal may be written down as a masterpiece.

Ruth Chatterton in the role of Mrs. Dodsworth, created on the stage by Fay Bainter, acquits herself of a performance in every way comparable in excellence with that of her co-star. There are, to be sure, striking contrasts between the Bainter and Chatterton conceptions of the character, but there is nothing to choose between them. Mary Astor in the role of Edith Courtright, played on the boards by Mrs. Huston, adds appreciably to the high regard in which she will be held as an actress capable of breathing a real breath of life into the characters to which she is assigned.

One of the classic bits of the picture, just as it was on the stage, is the depiction of Baroness von Obersdorf, by Mme. Maria Ouspenskaya. The part is scarcely more than a "bit," but it is done with such perfection as to take on major proportions in any deliberate contemplation of a film play that must be ranked among the leaders of latter-day productions.

Don't Miss Mr. Benchley.

Paul Lukas is another who acquits himself with fine credit, although his role is one that places no severe strain upon his recognized capabilities.

In point of production, direction and photographic excellence, "Dodsworth" belongs in the higher brackets. It is a picture that reflects credit upon an industry that is making increasingly long strides in the direction of authentic artistry.

The bill at Loew's Palace this week is augmented by one of the most amusing short subjects of recent vintage in Robert Benchley's "How to Vote." This is something which under no circumstances should be missed.

Other abbreviated camera subjects that add to the interest of an impressive bill are the new issue of the Metrotone News and a Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy, in Walt Disney's best manner, bearing the title of "Three Blonde Mouseketeers."

'The Thin Man' Opens at Rialto

Previously scheduled for the Little, the management decided to give it the advantage of the larger house to accomodate the many who want to see it again.

More comedies will be made, but few better than "The Thin Man." It opened a whole new field in the production of mysteries. Adapted from the best selling detective novel of Dashiell Hammett, it injected an equal amount of comedy, and tied the two elements together with some of Hollywood's most pungent dialogue. And, of course, there are William Powell and Myrna Loy, whose performances as Mr. and Mrs. detective on a spree in New York, are peerless.

"Cimarron," which had been scheduled for a full week beginning Thursday, was damaged during its running. Inasmuch as it could not be repaired and the producers could not secure a better print on such short notice, the management decided to defer the showing of "Cimarron" until a better print was secured.

Grainger to Conduct Volunteers' Service

Conducting his first service as the new commander of the Relief Mission of the Volunteers of America, Adjt. R. L. Grainger will preach tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock on "Watching at the Cross."

Adjt. Grainger, a veteran officer of the Volunteers, will take charge of the mission immediately after the service. He comes here from Des Moines and was formerly in command of Volunteer activities in Washington. He will be assisted at tomorrow's service by the Rev. E. H. Hudson.

On the Scene

Shirley Temple is making another picture and this edition is called "Stowaway." The call sheet says that Shirley Temple is working on New York street, and, always anxious to watch the highest-priced child labor in the country, I journeyed to the outdoor set called New York street at the Twentieth Century-Fox Studio.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE.

Arriving on the set, I comment on how genuine it is. It has the feel and flavor of a typical block on Manhattan. I notice that Shirley is dressed as a Chinese girl, and I ask Director William Seiter what it is all about. He answers that Shirley is in China, Shanghai, to be exact, and the scene is taking place in front of the International Hotel there. "It's a street typical of the American business section there," says Director Seiter. Which goes to show you what can happen to a New York street at a picture studio.

• • • •

A large auto draws up in front of the International Hotel, with Robert Young and Shirley Temple in it. Young gets out of the car, tells Shirley that he is going into the hotel, and to wait for him. Shirley answers: "Patience is like wealth. Many people talk about it, but few people possess it." Shirley talks like this throughout the picture. In fact, she sounds exactly like Chin Chow.

Jesse Lasky may sign with Paramount, and if he does it will reunite those pioneers of the movies, Lasky and Adolph Zukor . . . Arline Judge parks her car in front of Norman Krasna's house . . . Paul Muni won the ping pong championship of Encino by beating Farmer Zack . . . Mervyn Leroy, having a little difficulty getting the players he wants for his picture, "The King and the Chorus Girl," said: "Casting is one tough problem. I certainly envy Walt Disney. All he needs for a cast is a pen and a bottle of ink."

Frank Shields, who played in the tennis tournament here with Fred Perry, makes his screen debut in "Come and Get It," and if he doesn't click in this flicker he will go on a tennis tour with Helen Wills . . . Director George Cukor asked Greta Garbo to wear her hair differently for a scene in "Camille." He wanted Garbo to arrange her hair in curls and she objected . . . However, after lunch, Garbo returned to the set with her hair arranged the way Cukor desired. He didn't like it and said Garbo was right. "You see," said Garbo, "I look like Shirley Temple now." . . . Charlie Lederer calls the studio where he works "a lack of concentration camp."
